For athletic department

Academic adviser to be hired

By DEBBIE ROSE
Assistant News Editor

MTSU is planning to hire an academic adviser for the athletic department in the near future, university president Sam Ingram said.

"We have approved a position to be known as academic adviser for the athletic department who will be directly responsible to the vice president for academic affairs," Ingram said.

The duties of that office will entail counseling student athletes and coordinating their class schedules, Jimmy Earle, MTSU athletic director, said.

Ingram estimates the new position to cost the university between $16,000 and $18,000 — "give or take two thousand."

Although no one has been hired for the position, and decisions are in the preliminary stage, Ingram said they are thinking about employing someone who is currently assisting with advising and helping with the basketball team.

Earle said an adviser is necessary because of the many restrictions placed on student athletes by the National Collegiate Athletic Association's Proposition 48. For example, under Proposition 48, a student athlete is required must be enrolled in 12 class hours to be academically eligible to participate in athletic.

Ingram said the position has been considered for two years, but the university started formalizing plans the past two months.

He said he got excited about the position when he realized the graduation rate for basketball players was so high.

"We expect to graduate 9 out of 10 seniors [who are athletes]," Ingram said.

The adviser may or may not teach in addition to advising, depending on the number of advisees. To determine the workload, the standard university formula will be used.

The formula maintains one full-time position for every 400 majors. If there are 400 majors, the adviser will not have other duties. Earle said he feels there are enough advisees to justify a full-time position.

Russian TV shows to be shown at MTSU

By KIM HARRIS
Staff Writer

"The Russians are very free and more like us than any other type of people," said Dr. George Feifer, Sovietologist and author who will be bringing Soviet TV to MTSU Thursday, April 16.

Feifer will present a two-part, multi-media production April 16 in the Keathley University Center Theatre, dealing with Soviet TV and lifestyles. The presentations are free and open to the public.

According to Feifer's agent, Mike D'Andrea of Brian Wintrop International in New York, the first part of the presentation (to be shown from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m.) will be an open house in the tradition of a "USSR Fair exhibit." Direct from the USSR, Vremya the only Soviet newscast and which translated means "time," will be shown on the "larger-than-life SuperVision (10 1/2 x 14) big screen," D'Andrea said.

Students are urged to spend at least 10 to 20 minutes viewing the unedited film taken directly from the Russian satellite Molniya. The footage was taped through intervention of the satellite, D'Andrea said.

"It will be a cross section of what the Soviet people watch, not just news, but also variety shows, BBC [British Broadcasting Corporation], movies, and documentaries," D'Andrea said.

"The program tries not to get into political arguments. We are trying to portray the nature of the [Soviet] people by giving the opportunity to see what the Soviets see."

"Recently, Mr. Gorbachev has been trying to remap and modernize the Soviet Union. A lot of that is being reflected in news and TV," D'Andrea said.

Feifer, who was a free-lance journalist in the Soviet Union for several years, was caught in a situation similar to Nicholas Daniloff, D'Andrea said.

Daniloff was arrested last year by the KGB, the Soviet police agency, when he refused to release information. Unlike Daniloff, who had U.S. News and World Report to back him, Feifer who was freelancing at the time, had no one to extradite him.

Feifer and his fiancée were strip searched and put under house arrest by the KGB, when he refused to turn over information on fellow reporters, D'Andrea said.

Feifer's purpose is "to break down the stereotypes of the Russian people."

"We have real and serious problems. What we have is two super powers with conflicting interests. What I am trying to do is break down the ridiculous and stupid stereotypes that we have with the Russian people."

"We are rich on the Rambo stereotype [of the Russians] and that is frighteningly dangerous. There are enough real problems," Feifer said.

Placement office aids seniors

By DEBBIE ROSE
Assistant News Editor

The Placement Office at MTSU provides many services to students seeking employment in a career or for the summer.

Last year, about 4,800 job referrals were made in the fields of business and education. More than 700 referrals were made for part-time and summer jobs. These numbers do not indicate the number of students who were actually hired.

Martha Turner, the office director, sees the goal of the Placement Office as two-fold.

"First of all, we assist seniors and graduate students who are in search of career employment," Turner said. "We also assist students with part-time or summer work." Students seeking these types of jobs do not have to be seniors.

Turner's office plans several programs throughout the year to inform graduating seniors and graduate students about employment and ways to find a job. Many employers and graduate schools are represented and provide information on career opportunities.

"Beginning in the fall, we have Career Day and placement orientation to provide information on services and job searches," Turner said.

The Placement Office also maintains an extensive vocational library which is consist of an up-to-date file of publications and information on career planning, job search, resume writing, interviewing and other job skills.

Seminars are held throughout the year to help students plan their job search.

The Placement Office also provides a credential service which provides references and transcripts to prospective employers.

To access the services of the Placement Office, seniors and graduate students come to the office and complete a registration packet. The packet contains an information form which includes personal information, education and experience.

Next, the student signs an authorization form that gives the Placement Office permission to release information in the student's file to employers.

Also in the registration packet are three evaluation forms the student will use to get recommendations. Student teaching evaluations are included in this category.

The last thing in the packet is a copy of the student's transcript.

Although there is no deadline for registering with the Placement Office, Turner suggests that students register as soon as they become seniors in order to get the maximum benefits.

Another service offered by the office is placement orientation. This orientation provides informa-

VA warns of payment problems

From Staff Reports

Veterans receiving monetary benefits from the Veteran's Administration can prevent under- or overpayments with just one phone call, according to Nashville Veteran's Administrators Regional Office Director Robert S. Bielak.

"One phone call was worth $72 per month to a veteran attending college full-time, who called to say he just got married," Bielak said. "VA educational benefits are based on the number of his dependants and the amount of training he receives."

"If he had just dropped a class, his educational benefits would drop," Bielak added. "Without the call, the VA would be overpaying him $93 per month from the date he dropped the class."

The VA's payment for veterans benefits can be no less, and no more, than the amounts established by law and regulation. In case of overpayment? The VA is legally obligated to ask the veteran to pay back the overpayment.

Many overpayments occur because the VA doesn't find out about the changes for months. In the education program, most of the overpayments occur when a veteran reduces his school workload or terminates his schooling. "If a veteran leaves school, the VA is eventually notified," Bielak said. "But it can sure be a surprise to the veteran when the VA bills him for the over-

Scholarships available: director

Yes, it is true that there are ways to go to college for free.

However, in order to receive the many forms of financial aid available, you must know where to look.

Now is the time of year to apply for financial aid, scholarships, grants and loans for summer school or the fall semester, said Winston Wrenn, MTSU director of financial aid.

"There is a lot of competition for scholarships among students but there are many sources of scholarship programs besides those affiliated with schools, such as employees, civic groups, individuals, and sometimes churches," Wrenn said.

Wrenn said MTSU has a good system for scholarship application because there is only one form to fill out and it can be sent to a variety of scholarship sources.

"We take the application, look to see where the person is from and see what kind of opportunities are available in their hometown," Wrenn said.

"For example, Cannon County is offering 10 different scholarships for next semester, so anyone from Woodbury should look into that idea," Wrenn said.

"In the case of graduate level awards, it all begins in getting accepted to graduate school.

"The biggest and main sources of aid are teaching assistantships and fellowships. Most are in the form of teaching but a few deal with research," said Wrenn.

"As a graduate assistant, the person would teach from six to nine hours and go to class for another six hours," Wrenn said. "In return, tuition would be paid and the assistant would receive a salary of anywhere from $220 to $260 [a month]."

Wrenn said there are not as many grants and scholarships available to graduate students because graduate level programs deal more with direct application.

RANCHO CUCAMONGA, Calif. — A sheriff's deputy investigating a report of armed prowlers in a schoolyard shot and killed a teenager playing with the popular game Lazer Tag with three friends, Leonard said.

Leonard Joseph Falcon, 19, was shot to death late Tuesday after he jumped out from the dark, assumed a shooting stance and pointed his plastic gun at the deputy, said San Bernardino County sheriff's spokesman Jim Bryant.

"The deputy, observing a flash from the gun aimed at him, reacted by racking a shell into the chamber of his 12-gauge shotgun and firing," Bryant said.

After the first shotgun blast, the spokesman said, Falcon again "fired his gun and the deputy fired a second time."

Falcon then fell to the ground. The deputy reached down to recover the weapon and only then did he discover the weapon was a toy laser made of plastic, Bryant said.

"Nobody knew the cops were there," said Falcon's friend, fellow laser tag player, Ronald Gross, 20. "The next thing we know these people are yelling at us to drop our weapons. No one even identified themselves. For all we knew it could have been any other jokers joking around."

Falcon's companions told investigators the four had gone to Central Elementary School and had received permission from a janitor to play the mock-combat game. They were in their second round when the deputies arrived.

Falcon, of Rancho Cucamonga, a community 40 miles east of Los Angeles, was taken to a hospital, where he was pronounced dead.

Officials declined to release the name of the deputy, who was put on leave with pay pending an investigation. Colleagues said he was seeking counseling from a psychiatrist, the Los Angeles Times reported.

"I think he (the deputy) went in there too nervous," Gross said, "too ready to jump on somebody. I think he was too trigger-happy."

He said the deputies "made us lie on the walls, pressed us against the ground, frisked us, even after they saw we had plastic guns. It was like we were criminals — searching us and telling us to shut our mouths."

Gross and Kevin Bishop, 16, said the four youths bought laser tag sets called Lazer Tag for $45 over the weekend.

The youths, ranging from ages 16 to 20, were described by sheriff's investigator Chico Rosales as four "clean-cut young men."

"They had no criminal record we can spot. They were having a game and it was an unfortunate incident."

The victim's father, Joseph Falcon, said he knew nothing about

Forsyth Co. incident nets lawsuit

By JOHN A. BOLT
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA — The Forsyth County Defense League said Wednesday it should be dismissed as a defendant in a civil rights lawsuit stemming from a rock-and-bottle-throwing incident because it did not exist when the violence occurred.

The league, a white supremacist group, was one of 13 defendants named in class action lawsuits filed last month by the Reverend Hosea Williams, one of the leaders of two marches in the virtually all-white county north of Atlanta.

In papers filed Wednesday in U.S. District Court in Atlanta, the league said it had not been formed on Jan. 17, when a group of about 75 civil rights marchers were pelted with rocks and bottles by some in a group of about 400 Ku Klux Klansmen and sympathizers.

Williams' lawsuit, prepared by Morris Dees, founder and head of the Southern Poverty Law Center in Montgomery, Ala., seeks unspecified monetary damages from the league, various Klan groups and members as a result of the incident.

Attorney Richard Barrett, a Mississippi segregationist who represents the league, said Dees should be sanctioned by the court for signing the lawsuit because he knew, or should have known, that the league did not exist on Jan. 17.

He said the lawsuit's claims that the league uses violence and intimidation are also wrong. He filed an affidavit containing application forms and statements to show the league opposes violence.

Barrett, who called the marchers "invaders," said Wednesday he came at the invitation of Mark Watts, the president of the league who was also named as a defendant in Williams' suit.

The response filed Wednesday denied that Watts is president and Barrett said the league was formed Jan. 24. He declined to say how many members the league had or how many had attended any meetings.

The affidavit filed Wednesday was from Jerry Lord, who said he is acting chairman of the league.

Teenage pregnancy

ABC's 'Daddy' offers realistic view

MICHEL CHOKA
Guest Columnist

On Sunday night ABC aired a somewhat controversial movie called Daddy, which addressed the social problem of teenage pregnancy.

The movie started off with a parental discretion disclaimer saying, "Due to the sensitive nature of this movie, we advise parents to discuss the topic with their children after the program."

The movie was about two middle-class high school seniors who find themselves in a dilemma when the girl becomes pregnant.

A powerful scene occurs when the young girl Stacey (Patricia Arguette) tells her boyfriend Bob (Dermot Mulroney) of her pregnancy.

Stacey: "It means it happened the first night we did it."

Bob: "I thought you couldn't get pregnant the first time."

Stacey: "Me too."

This scene shows just how naive teens are today even with all the efforts to educate them on sex. The sex education class in the film is also very typical. The teacher tries to be serious but discussion is characteristic with intermingled embarrassed silence and off-color jokes.

When Bob tells his parents of Stacey's pregnancy, a very realistic scene takes place. The parents are shocked at his sexual ignorance and wonder how it could happen:

Mother: "Did you ever talk to him about sex?"

Father: "I thought he knew it."

Mother: "Well, you're supposed to do it."

Father: "Why didn't you?"

Mother: "It's your responsibility, you're his father."

Father: "Didn't he learn that in school?"

Mother: "We're his parents, it's our responsibility."

Father: "Well, it's his responsibility now and he should stand up like a man."

Mother: "You mean give her some money don't you?"

This scene is characteristic of how people try to put blame on someone else. As the movie progresses, Bob takes responsibility for the baby and sets Stacey — who has been kicked out by her mother — up in an apartment.

The scenes that follow show the pressures the two teens are under. These scenes are very realistic and powerful.

In the end, Bob gives up going to an out-of-state college in order to face up his responsibility to Stacey and the baby. He is seen working behind an ice cream counter and reveals that he is going to school part-time at night.

The most powerful scene occurs between Bob and his sex education teacher (Danny Aiello).

Teacher: "You have to grow up now — today. When you had sex you took on a big responsibility."

Bob: "I can't take it, it's like someone took the best years of my life away and skipped to the end. I can't handle it, I'm just a kid."

This scene really hit home. Though it was true that Bob and Stacey were in an adult situation it was easy to forget that they were still children.

I thought ABC made a serious attempt to portray a sensitive topic realistically and did a good job. The television medium has been criticized for showing unrealistic programs in the past and this is a sign that they are trying to change that image.

This film brings up many points:

- 1) kids are still naive about basic sexual information.
- 2) pregnancy can happen to anyone, not just "bad, loose" girls.
- 3) teen pregnancy involves more than a trip to the abortion clinic.

The movie proves that pregnancy involves much more — it involves responsibility and maturity and the fact that we are all accountable for our actions.

As the title implies, Daddy concentrated more on the young boys point of view, instead of having the guy characteristically absent and uncaring.

ABC chose to paint the real picture this time, not the usual rosy one. I advocate the media for addressing serious topics and portraying them realistically to educate the viewer.

It is obvious from this movie that a lot of parents are not teaching their kids about sex and I applaud the media's efforts in this matter. The media has a responsibility to educate the public as well as entertain them and I'm glad they are finally doing it.

Ask Us

Advice from CRYSTAL and JONATHAN

Couch Potato,

It sounds like the problem isn't really with your boss. You should tell him he has really been a positive influence on you. As for your concern that he might feel uncomfortable after you tell him this, he probably will, since we usually don't take compliments well.

If he has "taken time from his schedule" to talk to you, as you said, he must have heard how you feel about your father's relationship with you, so he probably already senses the way you look up to him as a father figure.

The real problem seems to be in your communication gap with your father. I hope you are going to spend the summer (or part of it) at home. This will give you and your father time together. Even though you are 22 years-old, it is not too late for you to get along with him. Take the time to talk to your dad and let him know how you feel about the void in your lives. Maybe since you have been away he has had time to realize what you feel — he will now be willing to get to know you.

You can't, however, put all the blame on him, you have to be willing to do things you might not think you will enjoy, if for no other reason, but to be with him.

Since you have experienced problems relating to your dad in the past, it will not be easy at first, but it will be worth the beginning uncomfortableness when you reach the end result.

If you have imagination

Fun dates possible with little money

By ERIK HUTCHINSON
Staff Writer

Ever been caught in a jam because you don't have any funds for a date? Have you ever had to cancel out of a perfect date because of that reason? Well, fear no longer.

There are plenty of date ideas that involve using little or no money at all. Furthermore, your imagination can be your savior.

For instance, have you ever thought of limiting a first date to a couple of hours, so the possibility of running out of things to say won't happen. And girls, as a plea, if you want to do?, "please don't respond by saying, "I don't know, whatever you want to do." If this is done, the idea of doing something you really want to do is lost. So, please take this into consideration.

But back to the topic at hand, dating with the lack of funds is a common thing among college students. In terms of ideas, here are some: 1) go to the park with picnic basket in hand. 2) grab a radio and go somewhere on campus to dance. 3) go to Campus Rec. and get some golf clubs, or 4) go to a free sporting event.

If these ideas are a little too awkward for you, try a more group oriented idea.

Try a "Clue Night," the idea behind this is to have a sort of scavenger hunt with a final destination. The more people involved, the more fun it turns out to be.

Maybe a game of basketball, usually any sports activity such as football, soccer, softball, kickball or even kick the can — can be hilarious.

Even with all these ideas, your own imagination can make the night unique. Your own personal cares, desires, and whims can add a touch of flavor to your dates.

This town and this campus have a lot to offer in terms of inexpensive evenings. Taking a stroll around the square in downtown Murfreesboro is a great way to stir conversation. The old houses on East Main, or even the modern pieces of art right here in the campus galleries make for great discussions.

If you are interested in the arts, a museum might fit into your schedule. Or a nature extremeist, a hike might be in order. (But speaking from experience, never let that hike take too long, because boredom tends to set in quickly.)

In essence, keep the dates alive with new and more creative ideas. Usually, the more outlandish the idea is, the more fun it is if you can pull it off. So, no more excuses, because there is hope.

Hollywood stars still shine

By LEE BLAIR
Staff Writer

I don't know how many times I've heard people say, "They don't make movies like they used to!" or "There are no classy actors or actresses like Jimmy Stewart or Bette Davis!" Well, I disagree.

Movies have changed as our times and lifestyles have changed.

Commentary

The films of today deal with stronger issues and different themes due to the openness and communication of today's world.

Films like Casablanca or Gone With the Wind are classics, but they had smaller budgets during the Golden Age of movies, and better quality was less costly.

Money is a major reason films may not be as "classic" as in the past.

However, many great films have been produced in the past few years. Films like Places in the Heart, The Color Purple, Out of Africa and Crimes of the Heart made great impressions on me and I consider them all wonderful. Even Star Wars, Rocky, Raiders of the Lost Ark and E.T. will someday be known as classics.

As far as actors and actresses, there are so many fine ones, it is unbelievable. The image of the "star" may be dying but some still carry certain charisma that transcends the average actor and could follow in the footsteps of Henry Fonda and Katherine Hepburn as "stars".

Among today's "stars," Jane Fonda, Dustin Hoffman, Robert Redford, Kathleen Turner, Sigourney Weaver and William Hurt come to mind. Younger "stars" such as Michael J. Fox, Molly Ringwald, Rebecca DeMornay and Tom Cruise also insure a future of "stars."

Don't count Hollywood out with people like Sissy Spacek, Al Pacino, Jessica Lange, Harrison Ford, Bette Midler and Whoopi Goldberg, the talent is still there and the movies will still live on in our memories. I mean, Elizabeth is back and as good as ever, so don't give up!

Jazz is hot off Tabloid Press

By LARISSA KEILICH
Staff Writer

Tabloid Press' keyboardist Scott Brown said that someone once described the musical style of his band as "Joe Jackson meets Genesis meets the English Beat." It is a very rhythmic and danceable style of music, supported by underlying influences of jazz and ska. It is definitely not your everyday, basic style of rock-n-roll.

Together last July, Tabloid Press is a Murfreesboro-based band. In addition to Brown (keyboards, vocals), there are four other members in the band: Richard Block (lead vocals, saxophone), Dean Norman (bass), Kelly Wike (guitar), and Dan Miller (drums). All are students at MTSU except for Brown, who is employed as assistant manager of Cat's in Murfreesboro.

Tabloid Press currently has four original songs that are being played on Vanderbilt's radio station

WRVU (91 Rock). They are entitled "Kick and a Shove," "Gone Too Far," "Pearls (Around Your Neck)," and "Turn My Head."

According to Brown, the band is very democratic about writing the song material. Block and Wike write the lyrics, while the entire band collaborates on the music.

"Richard is very introspective with his lyrics; he writes a lot of abstract things," explained Brown. "He doesn't write about girls and cars and drugs."

"We're not really concerned with being a mainstay in the Nashville scene," said Brown. "If it really happens, that's fine. But what we really want to do is get better as writers and musicians. None of us are really masters of our instruments."

Brown acknowledged the importance of "the people behind the scenes." Brad Jones and Steve Jones (producers and engineers), John Faulkner (lighting and stage manager), Steve Miller (instrument technician), and Tom Taddeo (manager, photographer, and pseudo-guidance counselor).

In the past, Tabloid Press has opened shows for bands such as Jimmy Hall & the Prisoners of Love, 37 Targetz, Luck London, Rococo, the Producers, Freedom of Expression, the Royal Trade of China, and Fur Trade. They've made appearances at all of the popular clubs, including Elliston Square, Exit/In, 12th & Porter, and of course, Mainstreet.

Their very first performance was at the first annual "Livestock" party, which was held last September at the Blind Farm in Lascassas. They are scheduled to appear at the next "Livestock" party, which has been tentatively planned for the end of April. Also pending are some upcoming dates at Elliston Square.

Speaking on behalf of the entire band, Brown said "We are all very pleased with the local support that we've gotten."

Will latest scandal ever end?

By MIKE REED
Editorial Editor

Well, it's just like I've said. Those televangelists are up to no good. There have been some more recent updates in the scandal of the decade — "Pearlygate" (I can't believe I just typed that). How do they expect the public to swallow the hogwash they are serving up?

Tammy Faye Bakker is still suffering major trauma over her drug dependency. Meanwhile, Tammy Faye Cosmetics are on sale at your local bondo shop. Jimmy Bakker cannot make up his mind why he had the affair to begin with. At first, he claimed it was a setup. Then it was a rival evangelist. Now, he says he did it to make Tammy Faye jealous. I, personally, think he must have actually looked at her.

But, what about that poor girl who Jimmy slept with? She has been slandered by Jimmy to the point of total withdrawal from society.

Bakker said that she was a temptress and that he, himself, was a innocent victim and was seduced by Jessica Hahn. Hahn's lawyers claim she was lured to the hotel, drugged and forcibly seduced. Hahn, now 27, was 21-years-old at the time of the incident. Now come on Jimmy, you expect us — the public, to believe you were seduced? Your lawyers didn't say anything about you being drugged.

Just for the record, Jimmy Bakker can slander me all he wants if I get an out-of-court settlement of $265,000. Don't worry Jessie, I'm on your side.

Why doesn't Jimmy Swaggart claim his own business. Bakker claims that it was Swaggart that threatened to bring his indiscretion public if he didn't resign. That would have gotten Swaggart some big brownie points with the congregation if he didn't have so much to gain by making it public. Now Swaggart is in the middle of this by condemning Bakker for his indiscretion. But, as we all know, Swaggart condemning anyone is not new.

Now that Jerry Falwell is in charge of the PTL Club, he kind of likes it. According to the "Assemblies of God", Bakker's congregation, a minister that commits a confessed moral lapse must be suspended for two years. A committee of supervisors can shorten this length. Bakker may take this course of action, but Falwell claims he'll quit if Bakker tries.

Bakker's "Pearlygate" is not the first indiscretion of this type. Both fiction and fact have proposed the idea of evangelists and preachers having problems keeping the faith. Nathaniel Hawthorne wrote this theme into his novel The Scarlet Letter.

Shortly after the Civil War, Henry Ward Beecher was accused of seducing the wife of friend and employee Theodore Tilton. Tickets were sold at the trial.

Aimee Semple McPherson, Pentecostal evangelist in 1926, disappeared for 36 days. She claimed, after showing up at the Mexican border, that she had escaped kidnappers and had been wandering through the desert. Her shoes, the police noticed, were not scuffed. Later, it was discovered that she had spent a wild month with a married man. She was charged with (now get this) "conspiracy to commit acts injurious to public morals." She later died of an "accidental" overdose of barbiturates.

How far will this scandal go and what secrets are going to be publicized next? It would be interesting to get the superpowers of televangelism together for an open debate. I'd like to see what kind of evidence Swaggart has for his accusations and Hahn for her defense. What does Tammy Faye have to say about her husband's moral faux pas? How does Pat Robertson think this will affect his chances for the GOP nomination? Will the comic strip Kudzu be looked down upon by the masses? And last of all, why do journalists insist on putting the word "gate" after every scandal (aside from my personal favorite "Pearlygate" there is "Heavengate" and "Gospelgate")?

It's time for Grider to eat some crow.

By STEVE GRIDER
Columnist

Ring the dinner bell Ma, it's time to eat some crow.

To for those who were kind enough to read my last column, you might have noticed a prediction that I made at the end of the column. (Raymond did not make that prediction, I did). The prediction went something like 'God will call Sugar Ray to the canvas before the seventh round'.

I shall be the first to admit that I underestimated Sugar Ray Leonard. I doubt he will ever read my column, but just in case you do, Mr. Leonard, I apologize.

Being avid fight fans, my brother and I were one of the first ones to shell out $22 a piece for tickets to see the closed circuit telecast of the bout known as the Superfight. Being one of Marvelous Marvin's biggest fans, I shouted the praises of Marvin to anyone who would listen. My brother, who is one of Ray's biggest fans, didn't particularly care for my ranting. Our debate concerning the fight went on for the months and months of hype that preceded the fight.

On the night of the fight, one of Marvelous Marvin's biggest fans was converted to the Sugar side. I sat in the half-full Municipal Auditorium and watched in disbelief as Ray Leonard went to town on Hagler.

Ray was a 4-to-1 underdog in Las Vegas, scene of the fight and betting capital of the world. All of the critics pointed out that Ray had not been in the ring in over three years. People brought up the fact that he had retired due to an eye injury. They also mentioned that another comeback he had tried was less than impressive.

Those were not the only odds that Ray was up against. His opponent was the undisputed middleweight champion of the world. Hagler had not lost a fight in 11 years. Fifty-two of his 62 fights had been decided by knockout. Leonard came out of retirement for a Superfight with the best possible opponent.

Ray Leonard looked like he had never taken time off from the ring. His hand speed was still there and his constant footwork kept him away from his stalking opponent. It was beautiful to watch, but I wasn't very happy. My dude was in there getting boxed by a master. (My brother, however, was ecstatic!) I have to admit that Ray Leonard won that fight. The split decision by the judges was a joke; it should have been unanimous: all Leonard.

Will the democrats take over the White House in 1988?

By PAUL LADD
Columnist

Now that the 1988 race for the White House is underway, let's look at some of the candidates who have already announced for the Presidency.

Last week, we looked at former Delaware Governor Pete duPont, the first announced candidate in the race. Today, we'll look at the two announced Democrats in the race.

Representative

Richard

Gephardt of Missouri was the first Democrat to formally announce his intentions to run for President. Keep in mind that it doesn't count until they formally state that they are a candidate for President.

Gephardt was first elected to the House in 1976. Since he has been there, he has earned a reputation as a moderate-to-liberal on most issues.

For example, he supports ERA but is opposed to abortion. Until recently, he had advocated an amendment to ban abortion-on-demand.

He appears about the same on most other issues, but tax reform is his claim to fame.

During the time when all the talk about tax reform was mostly that, there were four major plans for tax reform: Treasury I, Treasury II, Kemp-Kasten and Bradley-Gephardt.

The plan finally passed into law was actually none of these, but most closely resembled Bradley-Gephardt. The Bradley is Senator Bill Bradley of New Jersey.

Gephardt's advantage is his work concerning tax reform. That is an advantage right now, because nobody has threatened to have him hanged for it or condemned the plan as approved by Satan or Gorbachev...yet.

He's also a fresh, new face on the scene. "Richard who?" you might be asking.

He has a reputation for being a hard worker, which always looks good on the campaign trail.

His drawbacks begin with his lack of name recognition. However, that could change as time goes by.

He is running as a moderate in a party that has veered further to the left over the years. The rank-and-file Democrats may like him, but will the more liberal convention delegates?

Richard Gephardt is in a position to give Democratic front-runner Gary Hart a run for the money. He just might do that.

Letters to the Editor

Here is RIMusic V!

Dear Editor,

I would like to respond to Erich Schulman's letter of March 27 "Where is RIMusic V?" First I want to thank Mr. Schulman for his interest. For his information and for others who might be interested, all of the RIMusic albums (I-V) and the RIMusic Compact Disc can be purchased from the office of the Center for Recording Arts and Sciences, Peck Hall Room 203. The LPs are $6 each and the CDs are $10 each. With the "plug" out of the real I want to address the real problem exposed by Mr. Schulman's letter.

Students and faculty from music and RIM work literally hundreds of hours each spring creating the music that goes onto these albums. Each year, they produce what I consider to be a unique collection of music, that is, at least entertaining and at best thought provoking and uplifting. It is unfortunate that this work does not get a wider audience.

One would think that a program named Recording Industry Management, where courses in marketing and merchandising are required and courses in publicity and retailing are electives that there would be some interest in doing this kind of work. But this is apparently not the case. I have made several attempts to interest the management side of the RIM program in publicizing, distributing and merchandising the albums but to no avail. What little publicity the album does get is the result of my own efforts (and recently the University's Public Relations Office.)

Last year I had to pay a student to take copies around to local record stores. This is upsetting when you consider that the student producers and musicians not only do not get paid but actually spend up to $135 for tape to work on the project! I can only hope that when the current students move up into the recording industry, they show more enthusiasm for getting the product out. If they don't we may all be looking for new jobs.

Bad AIDS policy?

Dear Editor,

I have on many occasions wanted to write a letter to the editor but always there was the handy excuse "there isn't time." Well I have finally found a subject that demands my speaking out.

I was truly suprised to read of the school's new policy toward AIDS infected persons. It would seem to me that any policy adopted by the school should be in the best interest of the school and its students. This policy hardly qualifies as such. Any one infected with the AIDS virus is quite capable of easily and inadvertently passing it on to others. Therefore, they are a health hazard. Now, anyone with a cold is a health hazard also but a cold is seldom the cause of death. AIDS on the other hand is incurable and is always terminal. For these reasons alone, I do not wish to attend school or in any other way associate with anyone infixed with the AIDS virus.

Furthermore, I can't understand why anyone else would wish to interact with these people.

Throughout history, people with life threatening contagious diseases have been quarantined to prevent spread of their disease until a cure could be found. Why is AIDS not treated the same way? How long will society continue to play the ostrich with its head in the sand and ignore the AIDS threat?

One would expect the administration of a university to be among the most intelligent, reasonable people available and yet the administration of our school has adopted a policy "in the best interest of the all concerned, which is in fact in the best interest of no one at this school. This is hardly the act of an intelligent and reasonable administration.

I am not talking here about discrimination against anyone of the basis of "lifestyle" because lifestyle is not the issue here. Everyone knows that there are many people infected with the AIDS virus that are not homosexual. Their lifestyle has nothing to do with their disease.

Discrimination is not at issue here either. Is the quarantining of a leper, or a person with rabies discrimination? They most assuredly should not be allowed to attend a public university and possibly infect some of the best and brightest of our contry's youth.

What is Christian?

Dear Editor,

In response to the letter from Christian (?) Jennifer Neff, does not the Bible say: Judge not lest ye be judged?

With what is currently going on with the television evangelical movement/scandal, who is to say what a Christian is or isn't? Each faction is trying to get rid of the other. Is this what a Christian does — try to destroy others?

I believe that each person is responsible for themselves. It does not matter if a person is gay or straight, Christian of Jew, black or white, what matters is how that person treats others.

Blue Raiders win two from Ole Miss

Greg Johnson pitches the Blue Raiders to a 5-4 victory against Western Kentucky. Johnson entered the game in the 8th inning and recorded an 11th inning win.

By CHUCK MORRIS
Sports Writer

OXFORD, Miss. — Middle Tennessee swept the University of Mississippi here Tuesday for the second time this season.

The Raiders won the first game 9-2 and held on for a 6-5 victory in the nightcap.

The two wins over the Southeastern Conference team gives the Raiders four for the year against the Rebels and six in a row over SEC foes.

MTSU scored six runs in the top of the first inning in game one.

Ole Miss pitchers Russ Cleveland and Richard Carroll walked four batters, forcing in two runs, and the Rebels committed three errors to allow the Raiders to score.

Chris Courtright hit the first of his two doubles in the first inning to drive in Chris Whitehead.

Ed Pye scored the Raiders' first run. Pye walked to lead off the inning, and stole second and third base. He scored when Cleveland's attempt to pickoff Whitehead at first went by Ole Miss first baseman Kyle Gordon and into right field.

Senior pitcher Barry Vetter, accustomed to coming out of the bullpen in relief, started and allowed nine hits in throwing a complete game for his sixth win of the season against no losses.

Vetter allowed only one earned run, struck out four and walked just one batter.

In game two, the Raiders scored five runs in the first two innings and held on for a 6-5 win.

Darryl Steakley hit a solo home run in the first inning to give the Raiders a 1-0 lead.

MTSU put together a string of four straight singles in the second inning to score four runs for a 5-0 lead.

Bubba Simon hit a three-run home run in the third inning to put Ole Miss back in the ball game.

The Rebels added a run in the sixth and seventh.

Ole Miss had a chance to possibly tie or win the game in the bottom of the seventh.

With one out, Jamie Johnson was put in the game to pinch-run for Scott Chesser.

Monte Gibbs hit a ground ball in the eighth inning for a single. The ball went off Pye's glove and rolled toward the left field line.

Pye chased the ball down and threw to third baseman Whitehead, who lunged toward the bag and tagged Johnson just before he got to third. Gibbs advanced to second on the play, but there were now two outs.

Kieth Kessinger, son of former major league shortstop and manager Don Kessinger, singled sharply into right field to score Gibbs.

Scott Hargrove pitched another excellent game. Hargrove allowed the Rebels five hits while striking out one.

Greg Johnson came out of the bullpen for his second straight appearance after being a starting pitcher early in the season to pick up his second save.

Johnson struck out three Rebels in two innings of work.

MTSU, winners of six straight games improved to 23-9 on the season.

On Wednesday night the Blue Raiders improved their record to 24-9 with an 11-inning 5-4 victory over Western Kentucky at Reese-Smith Field.

Darryl Steakley reached first base on a throwing error to open the bottom of the 11th inning.

Whitehead then lined a sharp single off the glove of the Hilltopper third baseman, putting runners at first in second with no one out.

Jeff Avery, a pinch hitter, then grounded into a double play, and Steakley advanced to third base.

WKU then intentionally walked Courtright before Hayes singled up the middle scoring Steakley from third base.

MTSU will resume play this weekend in OVC action at Tennessee Tech.

Coaching position becoming a controversial subject

By MICHELLE GALLOWAY
Assistant Sports Editor

There is an unfortunate, continuous revolving door to the Lady Raider head coaching position.

In the past year there have been two head coaches for the perennial OVC women's basketball title contenders and MTSU is currently searching for the third.

Initially the position was filled by Larry Joe Inman, who took the Lady Raiders to four straight OVC titles. Inman resigned after allegations saying that he illegally recruited a player in addition to personal problems.

Inman's departure paralyzed a team that he worked hard to put together. He was a highly-qualified coach (four-time OVC champs) and a remarkable person.

His departure shockingly came two weeks before the opening game of the 1986 season. The team was left with no one at the helm to demand their personal best nor their winning style of basketball.

Assistant Coach Diane Cummings temporarily stepped in and showed her ability and discipline in getting the four-time champs ready for OVC competition.

When deciding on Inman's replacement, the MTSU administration looked over Cummings and didn't show interest toward her talent nor the fact that she was a five-time MTSU assistant coach.

Commentary

The reported excuse? She had no previous head coaching experience. Of course she was not given the experience or chance by the MTSU administration.

Instead, in stepped Jim Davis, former assistant coach of Florida University and head coach of Roane State Community College. Both schools had high-quality records and excellent recommendations for their past leader.

Davis took over a prestigious spot and had huge shoes to fill behind Inman's trail of success.

I found myself sitting in one of the annex-gyms on the second day of practice with Davis as coach. I saw a lot of tears and frustrations as a confused team tried to get themselves ready to defend their OVC title.

It was in turn a slow and sluggish start for the Lady Raiders who lost the presence of All-OVC center Kay Wilbanks due to a confrontation with Davis. Another caliber player, sophomore Alice Lawrence, was held back a number of games because of grades. Plus, knee injuries infected critical players Angie Thompson, Amy Jackson and Monica Tatum.

The team had dwindled to a measly seven players by the new year.

I respect and admire the MTSU

Lady Raiders who fortunately pulled themselves together and battled more than one major obstacle to overcome their opponents and tie for their fifth share of the OVC title crown.

Yet, once again the Lady Raiders are without a coach to guide them. I respect and admire Davis, who undoubtedly will continue on in his winning career as the new head coach of Clemson University.

As the search continues for a new coach, I feel sympathetic towards Cummings who was reportedly told not to even apply for the vacancy.

Her attributions to MTSU Lady Raider Basketball have been clearly overlooked and her attempt to salvage the program ignored not once — but twice.

It takes a lot from a program to continually go from season to season and to constantly change faces.

Yet, to repeatedly change coaches is definitely a lot to ask from a team of this caliber.

If the university was intelligent they would stop looking elsewhere for talent that they have right here.

The administration needs to look deeper than who would be better qualified for the position. Maybe — who would be better qualified for the 13 individuals that make up MTSU Women's Basketball Team.

Vitale to speak at All-Sports Banquet

From Staff Reports

The annual All-Sports Banquet honoring Middle Tennessee State University athletes will be held April 21 at 6:30 p.m. in Murphy Center, according to Jimmy Earle, athletic director. Featured speaker for the occasion will be Dick Vitale, basketball analyst for ESPN.

Athletes from all sports at MTSU will be recognized for their accomplishments during the 1986-87 academic year, stated Earle. The evening is planned to make note of one of the university's most successful years in athletics.

Corporate sponsorships for the banquet are being sold for $100 which includes two tickets for the dinner with VIP seating, listing in the printed program, reserved parking and admission to a reception honoring Vitale beginning at 5:30 p.m. in the Blue Raider Room on Raider Drive.

A second category of tickets will be sold for $50 which includes two banquet tickets, admission to the Vitale reception, and listing in the printed program.

Regular tickets to the banquet can be purchased for $12.50 each. For further details and to reserve tickets, call the MTSU Athletic Office at 898-2450 or any banquet committee member.

A special offer is being made to anyone who would like the privilege of meeting Vitale at the Nashville airport with limousine service. This is available for a $500 contribution to support banquet expenses. This also includes two banquet tickets, VIP seating, VIP parking and an invitation to the reception.

Vitale, the speaker at the banquet, is known for his basketball play-by-play on ESPN.

Vitale joined ESPN during the 1979-80 basketball season after a successful college and professional coaching career. He is an analyst on many of ESPN's top college basketball games. His thorough knowledge of the game is brought forth in an enthusiastic, sometimes controversial — but never boring — style.

Vitale started his coaching career on the high school level, earning five state sectional championships, two consecutive state championships, and 35 victories during the seven years at East Rutherford, N.J. High School (1964-1972). He then joined Rutgers University for two years as an assistant coach, helping to recruit Phil Sellers and Mike Dabney, two cornerstones on an eventual NCAA Final Four team.

In April 1973, Vitale was named head coach at the University of Detroit where, in four years, he compiled a winning percentage of .722, including a 21-game winning streak (25-4 overall) during the 1976-77 season. In May 1978, Vitale became head coach of the Detroit Pistons of the NBA, where he coached for just over one season.

In all his coaching assignments, the enthusiastic Vitale has helped set game attendance records. He is a popular speaker at luncheons and banquets, including the Hall of Fame Induction Ceremonies in 1981 and the prestigious Naismith Award dinner in Atlanta annually since 1982.

Vitale was inducted into the East Rutherford, New Jersey Hall of Fame in 1985.

B.F. Goodrich to sponsor Blue-White

Frank Conley/Staff

Larry Counts, president-elect of the Blue Raider athletic association and owner of LCAR, shows off the two go-carts to be given away by B.F. Goodrich at the Blue-White spring football game.

Sponsorship will benefit MTSU

By TONY STINNETT
Sports Editor

Finally! It is about time someone around Murfreesboro has taken pride in MTSU athletics.

All of the athletic teams here at MTSU are great teams. They have proven that they can compete with the best of schools and the best of programs.

Yet, no one really knows what kind of talent lies here at MTSU, simply because the teams have not been given the publicity they rightly deserve.

For the first time ever, an MTSU team is being sponsored by a highly successful corporate business. B.F. Goodrich has stepped forward and will be sponsoring the upcoming Blue-White Football game.

Through the efforts of Larry Counts, president-elect of the Blue Raider Athletic Association, MTSU athletics have finally received a corporate sponsorship for the Blue-White game.

By being the first to do so, B.F. Goodrich is taking pride in MTSU and at the same time expecting that the game will generate publicity for its company.

The company could not go wrong in sponsoring the game. Its name will be plastered everywhere — from newspapers to the game tickets. The full extent of the companies success cannot be decided by the turnout at the game. The success will not be decided for months to come. It will be decided by how many tires they sell in Murfreesboro from the advertisement they have put forth.

A corporate sponsorship is long overdue at MTSU. Despite having some of the best teams in the country on any level, MTSU athletics remain a secret. Why?

Commentary

Simply put, because the athletic department does not do a good job of promoting MTSU athletics. Ed Given, sports information director, does an excellent job in his area. However, one man alone can not get the job done. The athletic department as a whole must work together to promote MTSU.

Until they do, people like Larry Counts will have to continue to bring in these type of corporate sponsorships on their own, or else MTSU athletics will remain a secret.

Despite having one of the worst programs in the SEC, Vanderbilt is known on a national scene. This is due to the fact that their athletic department promotes the teams. MTSU could compete with Vanderbilt on a regular basis and win most of the time, yet MTSU remains a secret.

A corporate sponsorship for MTSU athletics is long overdue. I admire Larry Counts and B.F. Goodrich for taking pride in this program and realizing that something needs to be done in order for it to gain recognition.

Sponsorships such as this one also act as a great community process. The Commerce Union Bank, who sponsors the Adopt-a-Child campaign has already purchased 750 tickets for the students at McFaddin Elementary school so that they can attend the game and have a shot at winning the two go-carts to be given away.

You see, not only do the athletics and sponsors benefit from this type of sponsorship, it goes a little deeper than that.

B.F. Goodrich is opening the doors for MTSU athletics through this sponsorship in order that other sponsors may give other MTSU teams the same type of opportunities.

Nowadays, teams need corporate sponsorships in order to get their name up front and noticed.

B.F. Goodrich has opened the doors, it is now up to you to see that this game is a success.

By TONY STINNETT
Sports Editor

For the first time ever, the MTSU spring Blue-White football game will be sponsored by a corporate sponsorship.

B.F. Goodrich will sponsor this years annual event, which will be held on Thursday, April 16th at 6:30 p.m. on Horace Jones Field.

The B.F. Goodrich Blue-White game is being built up and given a lot of publicity in order to raise money for the MTSU Football department and give Blue Raider fans an opportunity to get a preview of what Head Football Coach Boots Donnelly and his coaching staff have put together for next season.

B.F. Goodrich will be giving away two go-carts at half-time of the game. Each go-cart is valued at over $900.

In order to have a chance at winning the sporty carts, you must purchase a ticket to the game. Tickets are priced at $3 and can be purchased at the MTSU ticket office.

MTSU students can gain free admittance to the game with a valid student identification. However, if students wishes to have a chance to win one of the go-carts, they must purchase a ticket.

"This is the first time a spring game has ever had a give-away,"

Larry Counts, president-elect of the newly formed Blue Raider Athletic Association said. "We hope that the sponsorship from B.F. Goodrich and the give-aways will up the attendance."

"Students have never really attended anything they have had to pay for," Counts continued. "We are encouraging students to come to the game. They get in free with their student I.D. If they want a chance to win, they must buy a ticket. The student support is very important."

Counts came across the idea of a sponsorship for the game and felt that it would be a good thing to raise money for the football department.

Counts, who is also the owner of LCAR, is an avid follower of Blue Raider football and he also sales B.F. Goodrich tires at his business.

"I have always been involved with football and I sale B.F. Goodrich tires," Counts said. "I am a good thinker in the shower, and I was trying to think of a way to promote the tires and the football team."

"I thought of the idea of getting B.F. Goodrich to sponsor the game and when I called them in Akron they felt that it was a good idea. Now all we need is the publicity to show B.F. Goodrich that they have gotten their money's worth."

Promoting the football team is one of the key reasons for MTSU taking its first venture into corporate sponsorships, however, it is not the only reason.

"Corporate sponsorships are really what is being successful right now," Counts said. "Hopefully this will catch on and we can have more sponsorships for all MTSU teams."

Donnelly expects a good turnout for the game and thinks that the promotion is going to help tremendously.

"We certainly hope that we will have a good turnout," Donnelly said. "The spring game is like any other game, we do it all. The only thing we are not sure about right now is using the kickoff. The promotion will also help attendance. If you are a country-type you can win the truck, if you are a city-slicker you can win the Porsche."

Last years game was called off due to injuries so this will be the first spring game in two seasons. Students, faculty and administration are urged to show their support toward MTSU football and attend the B.F. Goodrich Blue-White game.

No spring football in 1988?

From Staff Reports

The NCAA Presidents Commission will sponsor legislation aimed at reducing spring football in Division I and II at the June NCAA special convention, commission chairman John Slaughter said.

Currently, Division I football schools may hold 20 spring practice sessions over 36 days and are not limited in the amount of contact.

The panel will also make proposals that Division I schools have only 30 days in order to get in 20 practice periods with only 15 sessions involving contact. They will also propose to cut spring practice in Division I-AA and Division II.

Proposals will also be made to reduce coaching staffs of Division I and I-AA by one full-time coach and one part-time or graduate assistant coach and a reduction of I-AA grants from 30 to 25 a year and a reduction in overall number of grants from 70 to 65.

The proposals are part of the commission's effort to "reduce the expenditure of time, energy and money," in intercollegiate athletics, Slaughter said.

"Spring football has never been a problem," Donnelly said. "What will eliminating spring football accomplish?"

Spring football is the time of the year that coaches get an indication as to who will play at what position. It is also a time of teaching and getting prepared for the upcoming season.

"Why restrict everyone to control a few?" Donnelly said.

"I don't think that 44 people can sit down and make a decision that will be good for everyone across the country," Donnelly said. "I hope that the other presidents will get with their athletic directors and the athletic directors will get with their coaches and some common sense can be put into any possible rule changes."

Raney leads Raiders to third place

Caroline Holland • Staff

Blue Raider Richard Loony outruns defenders as he attempts to score against Indiana in last Saturday's Banshee Classic Tournament in Bowling Green, Kentucky. The Raiders finished third out of 10 teams.

Football schedule set for '88

By TONY STINNETT
Sports Editor

A tentative football schedule has been set for the 1987 football season.

"It is basically the same type of schedule as we have had in the past," Head Football Coach Boots Donnelly said. "We open with Tennessee State, then play Georgia Southern. We are playing some of the top ranked teams in Division I-AA football."

MTSU will be trying to rebound from a discouraging 6-5 record last season, after going undefeated and winning the OVC championship in 1985.

The Raiders will open their 1987 campaign against arch-rival Tennessee State on September 5 in Vanderbilt at Dudley Field.

Tennessee State has been admitted into the OVC, however they will not become eligible for conference contention until 1988.

The contest between the two schools is growing into a fierce rivalry around the conference. The Raiders will be trying to avenge a heart-breaking 7-6 loss to the Tigers last season.

MTSU will then have an open week after their TSU game. MTSU currently has two open dates on their schedule. Donnelly is currently trying to fill one of those dates.

"We are dealing with a couple of schools right now," Donnelly said. "There is no information that we can release at this time, except that we are trying to fill one of the open dates."

It is also unknown which open date will be filled. After the 'open' date, the Raiders will head to Statesboro, Georgia to face the two-time defending national champion Eagles of Georgia Southern.

The Raiders dropped a 34-31 defeat to Southern at MTSU last season in the closing seconds of the game. The GSU-MTSU game is also growing into somewhat of a rivalry.

On Sept. 26, the Raiders will continue on their road trip and head to Bowling Green, Kentucky to face Western Kentucky. WKU is a former OVC school.

MTSU will return to Horace Jones field on Oct. 3 to open their OVC schedule against Austin Peay. The following week, the Raiders will play non-conference foe Mississippi Valley at either MTSU or the Liberty Bowl in Memphis. A decision on the location will be made in the near future.

Eastern Kentucky will invade Murfreesboro on Oct. 17. The Raiders will be trying to redeem their most embarrassing defeat of the 1986 season.

On Nov. 7, MTSU will travel to Morehead, Kentucky to face the Eagles before returning to Horace Jones Field to take on Murray State.

The Raiders will close out their regular season against arch-rival Tennessee Tech in Cookeville on Nov. 21.

From Staff Reports

Middle Tennessee's Rugby Club defeated the University of Indiana and Eastern Kentucky University Rugby Clubs to claim third place in the Banshee Classic Tournament this past weekend in Bowling Green, Kentucky.

The rugburs lost a bitterly contested first round game 12-6 to eventual finalist Western Kentucky Old Boys, but regrouped to beat IU and ECU to finish third in the ten team tourney.

With the victories, the Raiders improved their record to 3-4-1.

In the second round game against IU the Raiders played near flawless rugby, and controlled the game from start to finish.

Five minutes into the game, wing Mike Russell gathered in an Eric Raney pop-kick and ran 30 yards to score, giving MTSU a 4-0 lead.

On their next possession, outside-center Raney broke the IU line and ran 50 yards to stretch the lead to 8-0.

The two teams dualed at mid-field until 15 minutes into the half, when the Raiders broke loose again. Forward Robert Keith combined with forward Jason Archer for a 30-yard try (touchdown) to give the Raiders a 16-0 half-time lead.

Wind gusts of up to 30 miles per hour hampered the Raiders kicking game as MTSU missed all four of their first-half conversion attempts.

Indiana scored quickly in the second-half cutting the lead to 16-4, but MTSU picked up the defensive intensity and halted the Hoosier rally.

With ten minutes remaining Raney scored again on a 40 meter sprint. With the wind at his back, fullback Brain McElroy converted the kick-after to give MTSU a 22-4 lead and seal the victory.

In the consolation game against ECU, the "moosemen" showed the same dominating form.

Inside-center Clay Walls provided the scoring punch with two first-half scores. McElroy split the uprights on both conversion attempts, and the Raiders went into the half with a 12-0 lead.

Eastern closed the gap to 12-4 with a second-half score, but could get no closer against the stingy

Raider defense.

The Raiders then took control of the game scoring three times in quick succession. Raney keyed the rout with a 40-meter sprint to make the score 16-4. Forward Mark Williams followed with a 30-meter try on the Raiders next possession. McElroy made the conversion to run the score to 22-4.

MTSU took the ensuing kick-off straight down the field and scrum-half Barry Dunnivant ran untouched the final 20 yards for the score. McElroy made the conversion as time ran out to make the final score 28-4.

Standout performances were turned in by forwards Bo House, Richard Loony, Doug Hulien, and Robert Weske.
