MTSU bouncing back from snowstorm

By PHIL WILLIAMS News Editor

MTSU continues to rebound from the effects of Tuesday's winter storm, which dumped 5 inches of snow on the Murfreesboro area.

The snowstorm, which began around noon, sent many commuter students scurrying home early to outrun slick driving conditions. Residents found numerous opportunities to engage in frivolity, including snowball fights, snow graffiti, sledding and snow-cream making.

William Grasty, chairman of the department of accounting and information systems, estimated 55 percent attendance in his classes, which normally experience 90 to 100 percent attendance.

George Murphy, head of the biology department, estimated attendance in his classes at about 75 percent. He added that the > James Staley, the director of the physical plant, stated that maintenance personnel arrived at work in the darkened morning hours on Wednesday to begin shoveling snow, blowing snow from walkways, spreading sand in crucial areas, and even grading some roadways.

> STALEY reported continued mechanical difficulties with heating units. He stated that maintenance workers had responded to about three times as many work requests than Hot water was restored to Schardt Hall, according to one resident. The dorm had experienced continual problems with the water-heating system since the first of this semester.

Many students mentioned having continual trouble with frozen water pipes, many which later burst.

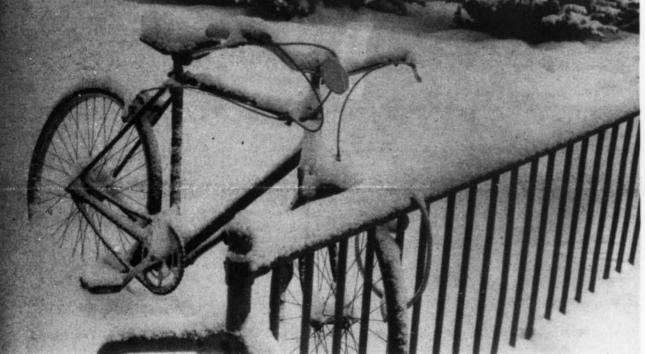

"IT'S BEEN a real hassle to be without water for half a week." one student remarked. "You really take this necessity for granted."

An expected reprieve from the sub-freezing temperatures was postponed as the forecast for today went from an expected high in the 40s to a high near 30. Weather prognosticators are predicting another deep cold spell beginning tomorrow.

One student expressed her displeasure with the possibility of the snow remaining on the

Dead week,' market pass ASB

By PHIL WILLIAMS

News Editor The ASB Senate passed two resolutions Wednesday calling for the establishment of a campus mini-market and requesting that the week before final exams be a "dead week."

The call for an on-campus convenience market was made as a result of a questionnaire distributed last month to dormitory residents.Of 1,100 respondents, 1,092 students indicated an interest in a minimarket "if groceries could be sold at cost or at a discount." THE MARKET would sell such items as: sandwich foods, dry goods, juices, cereals, soups and detergents, according to Ranota Thomas, the sponsor of the resolution.

Thomas indicated that she had talked to the management of convenience markets at Tennessee Tech and Eastern Tennessee State. Those operations, she said, sell their products "at cost or below."

The Senate did not stipulate the location or the working hours of the proposed market. "THAT WOULD be up to the administration to set once it is approved," Thomas added.

Thomas said the market would probably open in the fall of 1982 if the administration decides to proceed with the idea.

In addition, the Senate passed a resolution calling for the administration to consider the possibility of a "dead week" to be held the week before final examinations. During dead week, according to the resolution, no professor would be allowed to give exams, or assign projects or papers. THE RESOLUTION was passed because "exams, projects, papers or other major assignments should not interfere with a student's study time for a final examination.'

Graduate school senator, Zane Smith, questioned the logic of the legislation.

"We do not have ample time to cover all that we have to cover," Smith said. "Books have to be assigned at a certain point in the course of study."

SENATOR MARGARET McDonald conjectured that such a change might cause some professors to give comprehensive exams who normally would not.

The article passed by a vote of 8-3, with three abstentions.

In other action, the Senate also voted to make the existing joint congressional parking (Continued on page 2)

THEC study 'set-up': committee member

By CLAUDIA ROBINSON

Education Editor

The study on teacher education programs released last week by the Tennessee Higher Education Commission was set up to produce a preconceived conclusion, according to a member of the advisory committee appointed to aid the THEC staff with the study.

"THEC had a preconceived notion of what they wanted to say, and they were determined to produce a study to say that," Harry Hodge, dean of MTSU's School of Education, said Tuesday.

Gore speaks to rehabilitation students, staff

By RANDALL WITT Staff Writer

Fourth District Rep. Albert Gore Jr. urged state Vocational Rehabilitation counselors and students in a speech here Wednesday to "get active" in the fight for federal funds.

Addressing about 40 Vocational Rehabilitation supervisors, counselors and students at the University Center, Gore warned of limited services and major appropriation cutbacks for the disabled student program.

GORE SAID the program, which is 80 percent federally funded, faces a recommended reduction by the Department of Education from $851 million in 1981 to $573 million in 1982 to $450 million in 1983.

Calling such a reduction an "absolute disaster," Gore asked counselors to write letters to (Continued on page 2)

"THEY FOUND someone to design a study that would show that. They don't have to have a study to make up their minds," he said.

Although the study was designed to measure the supply and demand for teachers, or quantity, THEC is using it to point out a lack of quality among applicants for available teaching positions, Hodge said.

"We [the committee] only met twice," Hodge pointed out.

At the first meeting, he said, the committee members came 'armed" with information and ideas for the study, only to be told by THEC staffers that a consultant had been secured to design the study.

THE COMMITTEE did not meet again until the THEC staff had the results of the study, Hodge added.

The committee was given a draft report that included the THEC staff conclusion.

Committee members protested some of the staff's conclusions, Hodge said, and were able to change the wording

Stephen Moriset, head resident of Gore Hall, and his wife, Karen, took that big step back to nature Saturday, at 3:50 p.m., when they brought their daughter, Sariah Kay, into the world in their dorm apartment with the help of a midwife, two friends of Karen's, and Stephen's mother.

"I DON'T like the sterile way you are treated at hospitals," Karen explained yesterday. "Our midwife was here all the time-and also I couldn't have done it without my husband.

"It was really neat," she added.

The Morisets had many reasons for having 8-pound, 6ounce Sariah Kay at home. They had a bad experience in the hospital when their last child, Chad-Michael, was born.

MTSU coed is newly crowned Miss Tennessee USA 1982

By JANENE GUPTON

Copy Editor

An MTSU junior broadcast journalism major was chosen Miss Tennessee USA in the pageant Saturday night at Nashville's Sheraton Hotel.

Nise Levy, 20, from Nashville, has been competing in pageants since she was 12-years-old. After her first competition at age 12, she took a hiatus until her junior year in high school.

SHE HAS been modeling since she was 16 and has appeared in such magazines as Time, Newsweek, and Seventeen.

Levy says she competes in pageants because she wants to pursue a career in broadcast journalism and thinks the exposure might be helpful.

"Look at Phyllis George and Linda Carter," she said. "It's [competing in pageants] a good way to get exposure and it may benefit my career."

LEVY HAS made placing well in pageants her goal. And although she has thought about quitting several times, she said she didn't want to look back later on and wonder how she would have done in the pageants.

Last year, she was first runner-up in the Miss Tennessee USA pageant, and in 1980, she was crowned Miss MTSU.

"It's hard to believe," she said, that she would ever even compete in the Miss Tennessee USA pageant, let alone win it.

AS WINNER of the pageant, Levy will represent the state in the Miss USA-Universe Pageant, which will be held in Biloxi, Miss. in May and televised nationally.

"Everybody thinks about winning," she said when asked about her hopes for the Miss USA-Universe Pageant, "but I would really just like to make the finals—that's more realistic than expecting to win."

Gore said the current-but temporary-$863 million budget appropriation represents a 1 percent increase from last year, but that with inflation "it means 125,000 fewer will be served."

Saying we should seek a "different solution" (than Reaganomics), Gore stressed the financial soundness of the Rehabilitation Vocational program.

CITING a report from the Congressional Budget Office, a "highly respected, nonpartisan organization," Gore said "offsetting savings" as a result of the program would pay off in the amount of $640 million within 10 years.

"When you provide a sensible, effective, meaningful Rehabilitation Vocational program," Gore said, "you are taking people off other programs, at the same time giving them more dignity and more opportunity to participate in society. And you're investing in the future of that individual's life.

"Now that's an investment that pays off, not just in terms of that individual's personal future, although that in it itself is so important, but it pays off for the public as a whole."

GORE said Congress hasn't sufficiently considered the amount of money Vocational Rehabilitation's success will save programs like Social Security Disability Insurance, Supplemental Security Income, Medicaid and food stamps.

"This is an issue," Gore said, "that doesn't hinge solely on passion-in the sense of human dignity. It's a decision that involves our ability to look into the future and make intelligent decisions that will change the future for individuals and for our country."

Gore recommended that all government programs be examined carefully to avoid wasted tax dollars and "to try to get spending under control."

"We hear a lot aout costbenefit analysis," Gore said. "I think this is something that can play a useful role. But if we're going to use cost-benefit analysis, we ought to also be willing to make investments where our analysis tells us that investments will pay off.

"As we look at those potential investments, let us keep in mind the human investments and not concentrate totally on machinery and buildings, but spend more time looking at the minds and bodies of American citizens in the future.

"And, as we do that, let's keep Vocational Rehabilitation right up there in the first tier, because it is an investment that can be made and will pay off. And it's the right thing to do."

GORE cited as an example of future benefits investments like the new Nissan plant, which, according to priority sheets, would not have located in Smyrna if it were not for easy accessibility to interstate highway transportation made available at a great cost years

Answering post-speech questions, Gore touched on the country's financial state and the Reagan budget, saying that he believes the current recession will end in April, May or June.

Gore said he favors significant, reduction of the deficit, but added: "I think we did cut taxes too much."

On the subject of defense, Gore indicated he favors an "increase" in the defense budget, "but with smaller increases."

The statement was based on the volunteered comments of eight out of 132 superintendents for Tennessee school systems that there exists a shortage of qualified applicants for teaching positions.

Two other superintendents volunteered the comment that there is an adequate supply of qualified applicants.

MTSU coed in critical condition

By JANENE GUPTON Copy Editor

An MTSU coed remains in critical condition in the intensive care unit of the Atlanta Northside Hospital following a Saturday accident which killed her two companions.

Eighteen-year-old Tracy Turner of 268 Sailboat Drive, Nashville, and two other women were en route to the Vanderbilt-University of Georgia basketball game, in which their boyfriends were to play, when their vehicle was struck head-on by a pickup truck that crossed over into their lane.

The driver of the truck, Timothy P. Smith, 25, of Douglasville, Ga., was drunk at the time of collision, according to the Gwinnett County, Ga. police department.

THE MARISETS have been at MTSU since August. Stephen is working towards his four-year degree in ROTC and a commission in the Air Force. They have four older children: Richard, 10; James, 7; Charlotte, almost 3; and Chad-Michael, almost 2.

"I think the kids are closer to her [Sariah]. When Chad-Michael was born, they were scared because Mommy was in the hospital," Stephen said.

Neither Karen or Sariah spent any time in the hospital.

"My midwife came back and did a day-after check and a third-day check," Karen noted."We had to take her to a local doctor at three days to get a checkup, like in the hospital, but that's all."

The Marisets said the boys in their dorm, Gore Hall, were great. (They asked the Marisets to name the baby Gore if it were a boy.)

STEPHEN and Karen, members of the Mormon Church, chose the name of Sariah from the Book of Mormon-where Sariah was the mother of a prophet. For Stephen and Karen, the birth was a spiritual experience.

"It was very definitely a spiritual experience," Stephen reflected. "I made the bed she was born in. It is kind of oldfashioned."

Nashville's McGavock High School and the fiance of Vanderbilt basketball player Kevin Linder, is a freshman transfer student from Austin Peay State University. Turner has been previously identified by the Nashville media as an Austin Peav student.

the girlfriend of Jeff Turner and a sophomore at Nashville State Technological Institute, were killed in the accident. Services were held earlier this week for both women.

High court gives police more freedom

By RICHARD CARELLI Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) Supreme Court on Wednesday gave police officers more power to conduct searches without warrants.

In reinstating a drugpossession conviction stemming from a 1978 incident on the Washington State University campus, the court created a new exception to the rule that police must first get a warrant before searching someone's home.

The justices, by 6-3, struck down a Washington Supreme Court decision that would have made a new trial necessary for Neil Martin Chrisman, who was convicted for possession of marijuana and LSD found in his Washington State dormitory

A university police officer saw Chrisman's roommate, Carl Overdahl, leave the dorm carrying a half-gallon bottle of gin the night of Ian. 21, 1978. State law bans both possession of alcoholic beverages by people under 21 and possession of alcoholic beverages on university property.

The officer stopped Overdahl and asked for identification, at which point Overdahl was considered legally under arrest. The student was accompanied by the officer to his 11th-floor room to get some proof of his

If you have ever fantasized of basking in the hot sun of the Mediterranean, or perhaps skiing in the Swiss Alps-but despaired of having the opportunity-take heart.

Others before you have harbored such desires, and have perfected what is now the Eighth Annual European Cultural History Program to satisfy just such seemingly remote dreams.

MTSU IS one of several sponsors of the program, which will direct three in-depth tours of Europe this summer at an estimated cost of $2,200 for six eventful weeks. This price refers to the first tour leaving May 9. Later tours, lasting seven weeks, are slightly higher.

The cost also includes six hours of tuition, three of which can be Western Civilization.

If the cost seems high to you, think again. With the cost of airfare and additional fees, visas, food and lodging expenses skyrocketing yearly, you may never have another chance to see Europe, with excellent tour guides, quite so economically.

"THE PROGRAM is 30 percent to 40 percent cheaper than other programs of comparable length and activity," according to Professor Ron Messier, associate director of the program.

Messier believes one of the reasons the program is so inexpensive is that students use local transportation and buy food in local groceries. The group stays in youth hostels, and in one instance in South Tyrol. Italy, in a Catholic seminary.

In addition to being less expensive, Messier feels that I am thrilled to report that we have made remarkable strides in this area since the embarkation of this semester-i.e., the date of the beginning of classes was successfully moved forward with minimal advance notice given to the menial educatees.

Kudos must also be awarded to our illustrious financial aid department. Prior to this time, work scholarship students have not been required to labor during the week of registration; however, when they received their assignments during registration, they were instructed they would be responsible for working that very week. (Everyone knows students have no responsibilities other than the meager hours they spend in class.)

Good work!

(2) The registration procedure must remain under the strict control of the faculty and administration of this university.

Students are not capable of personally selecting the courses they wish to take; therefore, all trial schedules must continue to be signed by the adviser before any class cards may be selected.

Remember: You, as an adviser, are held accountable for the time it takes a student to graduate.

(In order to personalize this procedure, future "Meet Your Adviser" days will be publicized as "Meet Your Surrogate Parent" days.)

(3) The distribution of class schedules must be strictly monitored in order to prevent confiscation by broccoli conglomerates. In order to assure that each student takes only one booklet, I suggest placing a simply worded notice above the schedules warning all potential thieves that they are "under observation by electronic equipment." Students are gullible enough to swallow this.

(To facilitate the deception, I recommend all English 102 students read 1984.) (4) Mandatory attendance at all classes is required and should be the primary consideration in the determination of grades. Comprehension of a subject is not valid as a chief means of establishing proficiency. (5) Freshmen living on campus will be required to purchase meal tickets to insure they receive adequate nutrition and to encourage thrift. We do not, after all, want our children wasting their money on non-nutritious meals at area restaurants. Besides, the university food service needs all the business it can get. (6) Finally, a note to head residents: Remember, you have the right to inspect all rooms for cleanliness.

This task is of the utmost importance because Cleanliness Is Next To Godliness. If a resident continues to demonstrate an inability to maintain an orderly room, you may wish to send a note to his mother.

To secure even greater respect from residents, you might also consider having your charges call you "Mom" or "Dad" (according to your gender).

I recognize that strict enforcement of all of the above regulations will necessarily cause some inconvenience. However, you must remember that the median student age is only 21.

Consider not what the students can do for you; consider what you can do to them. Sincerely,

Union sacrifices to aid car sales

Auto workers accepting reality

By MICHAEL TOMPKINS Editorial Editor

America's auto workers are finally beginning to see the light. Their severely depressed industry is floundering in the face of foreign competition, especially imports from Japan. And faced with the prospect of further lay offs and an uncertain future, the United Auto Workers are making concessions to the likes of General Motors, Ford, and Chrysler.

In contract talks with GM, the UAW workers employed by GM agreed to contract concessions that should result in at least a $100 per car savings passed on directly to U.S. consumers. That's a start. The concessions are not in wage cuts but in certain fringe benefits, such as paid personal holidays and cost of living increases. Ford UAW workers are expected to follow suit.

THIS IS A GOOD trend for America's auto industry. Not because the UAW is making concessions, but because it is concerned with the future of the industry.

Chrysler's UAW workers, faced with the death of their employer, swallowed substantial wage cuts a few years ago. Their sacrifice paid off because they still have jobs and Chrysler, as the only major U.S. auto maker to show an increase in sales in 1981, does indeed seem to be making a comeback.

The average wage for auto workers under UAW's current contract is about $19 an hour. The average wage for a Japanese auto worker is roughly $12 per hour. This contrast is the major reason that Japan can manufacture millions of cars and trucks, ship them across the Pacific Ocean, and then sell them in GM, Ford, and Chrysler's own back yard.

BUT THERE ARE other reasons. Auto workers with seniority can get away with almost anything short of murder on their jobs. Many have taken their jobs lightly, thinking "I've got seniority, I'm in the union, so screw GM" (or Ford, etc.). The quality of the products made in Detroit has been questionable at best. Cars made on Monday or Friday, for example, are notorious for being lemons—apparently because the workers are daydreaming about, or recovering from the weekend. Conversely, Japan's auto industry is run like a large, extended family. Workers rate their jobs as right behind their families in importance. They have pride in workmanship and look at management as an ally, not an opponent.

Americans haven't bought millions of Japanese imports just because they were cheaper. Those Japanese cars sold in the United States because they were designed better, functioned better, and lasted longer. And of course Japanese cars (and other imports) had good gas mileage long before Detroit realized people were looking for that quality in a car.

SO, NOW THAT both the management and the workers of the Big Three are belatedly coming to terms with Japanese competition, maybe the future of Detroit and America will be brighter.

Granted, Japanese domination of the U.S. market could be quickly ended with the imposition of a heavy import tax. But the free enterprise system is designed so the best product at the best price sells the most. If Detroit and the UAW can effectively regroup and beat the Japanese competition by producing a better, less expensive product, we will all be better off.

Creature from Black Lagoon' doesn't show

To the editor:

The MTSU Films Committee would like to apologize for any inconvenience caused by the cancellation of The Creature From the Black Lagoon.

The film company mistakenly sent a print that was not in 3-D.

Efforts to obtain another print from the company for the Thursday shows failed because of the weather. We hope to reschedule the movie sometime this semester.

Convenient parking sometimes prudent and necessary

To the editor:

Despite past published reports, MTSU's parking problem still persists.

I am aware of the available parking spaces scattered around the MTSU campus. I am also aware that everyone, including myself, looks for a convenient place to park, which is seldom found.

However, seeking convenience is not selfish but prudent when security and wellbeing are involved.

Do you have any advice for an 18-year-old young woman who must walk quite a distance at night, alone, and in freezing temperatures from a westernly parking lot to her dorm on the southern end of the campus?

Perhaps everyone does look for convenience, but is that always unreasonable?

MTSU's men, women lose to 'Toppers

By DON HARRIS

Sports Writer

BOWLING GREEN, Ky. — For about the last week, temperatures in the mid-state area have been frigid, but not as frigid as Middle Tennessee's field goal shooting here last night against Western Kentucky.

The Blue Raiders shot a horrendous 30 percent, 18 of 60 from the floor, while the Hilltoppers warmed their nets for 51 percent on their way to a 65-49 thrashing of MTSU.

THE LOSS halted Middle's winning streak at nine games, and dropped their OVC record to 5-1, 11-3 overall. Western now stands at 4-1 in league play and is tied with Murray State-a game behind the Blue Raiders.

Middle Tennessee's 49 points is their worst offensive showing since late 1979, when the Blue Raiders lost to South Alabama 55-49.

Head coach Stan "Ramrod" Simpson credited the Blue Raiders' morbid shooting more to the Hilltoppers pressure defense than to poor shot selection.

"The key to this game was Clem [WKU head coach Haskins] having Western prepared defensively. We had to rush some shots we didn't want to take. His defense was prepared for our strong points."

WESTERN'S constant pressure on defense and patient offense took MTSU out of their game plan and allowed the Toppers to slowly pull away in the second half.

Leading by only three points at halftime, 21-18, Western's shooting caught fire after the intermission as the Hilltoppers burned the strings for 65 percent defense into a man-to-man and eventually into a must-foul situation.

Simpson would not comment on the officiating, a factor which took three Blue Raiders out of the lineup. Rick Campbell fouled out with 4:12 left in the game, Buck Hailey left with 2:21 to play and Jerry Beck sat down at the 2:00 mark.

"If we'd have taken our time and converted our free throws [MTSU hit 13 of 20], it [the officiating] would not have been a factor," Simpson said.

COMING into the game, Haskins was worried about the Toppers ability to rebound. WKU had been averaging 32.8 per game, but Western took to the skies and pulled down 40 rebounds to MTSU's 32.

"This was a big win for us," Haskins said. "It opened up the league race for three teams now [Western, Murray, and Middle]."

Jerry Beck and Rick Campbell paced the Middle Tennessee scoring attack before fouling out with 15 and 14 points, respectively. No other Blue Raider reached double figures.

MTSU women go to 6-3 with loss

By DON HARRIS

Sports Writer BOWLING GREEN, Ky. -Things have been up and down for MTSU's Lady Raiders most of this season.

Here at an up-and-down game against the Lady Toppers, MTSU ended up on the downside of a 67-63 final score.

"WE'RE JUST not consistent enough," Lady Raider head coach Larry Inman said.

MTSU's inconsistency proved to be their downfall as the Lady Raiders' OVC record fell to 2-2, 6-3 overall.

MTSU led early by as much as five points, 15-10, but Western scored eight unanswered points and the Lady Raiders never led

THE LADY Toppers had a 10-point halftime lead and held it throughout most of the second half.

But, with the score 61-48 in favor of Western, Middle outscored WKU 15-4 to cut the margin to two points and had possession of the ball.

Western's defense, however, rose to the occasion and held off an MTSU rally.

"WE NEVER gave up," Inman said. "I'm really proud of the girls. They just never gave

"We made the steals, but we just didn't capitalize. There are three things we have got to work on. One, better consistency on free throws, two, eliminate floor mistakes and three, we need

As they have done all year, MTSU's defense did an excellent job, holding Western 10 points below their season average of more consistency on offense.

Raider teams on road at TSU Saturday

Middle Tennessee's men's and women's basketball teams take some time off from the Ohio Valley Conference title chase in the next few days, but they'll be working just as hard on the floor as if they were playing for their respective OVC titles.

Saturday night, Stan Simpson and Larry Inman will take their clubs to Nashville for contests with the Tennessee State Tigers and Tigerbelles. On the men's side, TSU is a sore spot in what otherwise has been a banner campaign for the Blue Raiders thus far.

The Tigers chalked up a 60-55 win over Middle Tennessee, one of only two losses against 11 wins for the Raiders this season. To add a bit of insult, they did it right here in Murfreesboro.

THE TWO teams have taken markedly different paths since that earlier contest. MTSU, as everyone knows, has gone on a nine-game winning streak, while TSU took an extended road trip that proved none too successful. The Tigers are currently 5-8 on the year.

Despite Tennessee State's record, Blue Raider Coach Stan Simpson isn't taking his upcoming opponents lightly-he remembers last December too clearly.

'We have to be on our toes against Ed Martin's club," Simpson said. "They proved they were tough when they came in here last December. It's a very exciting rivalry, and I look for a good game."

WITHOUT A doubt, the top Tiger is Larry "Skywalker" Wilson. Wilson currently leads his club in scoring with a 16.1 points per game average. TSU's leading rebounder is Robert Cross, who's currently pulling down nine boards per contest.

Tip-off for the men's contest is 7:30 Saturday night in Nash-MTSU's Lady Baiders, meanwhile, have a struggle of their own in Nashville against the Tigerbelles. Coach Larry Inman's club already owns a victory over TSU earlier this season, a 53-43 triumph here in Murfreesboro, but Inman is nonetheless wary this time around.

The heat is on, as coach Mike Rasper and the MTSU Lady Raider track team open the 1982 indoor track season tomorrow here at Murphy Center with the Lady Raider Invitational track

The events are to begin at 11 a.m. and will continue until 4 p.m. in Murphy Center; there will be no admission charge.

THE INVITATIONAL meet, which will be a team scoring event, will be highlighted by top-quality sprinting from such participants as the Tennessee State University Tiger Belles and Alabama A & M University. Alabama A & M holds the national championship record for the mile relay with a time of 3:44.2.

Other teams in the field include Jacksonville State University, Austin Peay, Fisk University, Belmont College, Berry College, Western Kentucky, Vanderbilt and the host Lady Raiders.

Although MTSU will face some tough competition tomorrow, Coach Rasper has confidence in his athletes and in the past history of the Lady Raiders' track program. MTSU was fourth in last year's Ohio Valley Conference outdoor season and also finished fourth in last fall's OVC cross-country competition.

MTSU WILL be led by at least 14 top-quality athletes, according to Rasper. Those to watch closely are Diane Oleka, Lisa Mitchell, Donna Sims, Jackie Wilbert and Sharon

I know most of you are waiting for me to alibi for my Kentucky Wildcats in today's column, but there are a few other things to get to

First of all, I do want to welcome Joe Fisher. Joe, as you know, will be writing "Sports Stuff Tuesday" for this newspaper, while whatever this is becomes "Sports Stuff Friday." Other than a lack of judgement in picking the winner of the Super Bowl and a blatantly disrespectful reference to his editor, I thought he did an exceptional job. A couple of memos should get the bugs out of the system.

SECONDLY, CONDOLENCES from all of us who write sports here at Sidelines go to our neighbors to the north at Vanderbiltespecially Al McKinney, Jeff Turner and Kevin Linder. These are trying times for them; their coach, C.M. Newton, has shown great compassion in this time of grief for his three players. For this he deserves the highest accolades.

As Coach Newton himself observed, something like this serves to put the game of basketball in proper perspective.

The tragedy this past week brings back memories of what happened four years ago involving the MTSU basketball program. The University of Evansville Purple Aces were scheduled to fly to Nashville and then bus to Murfreesboro to take on the Blue Raiders.

They never made it.

THEIR PLANE CRASHED en route to Nashville, and the entire team was killed. A memorial service was held in Murphy Center. where the game would have been played. Few students here were around then, but for them and many in the Blue Raider athletic department, it was a time of great sadness. Like the incident that shook the Vanderbilt basketball program last week, it does indeed put the game in perspective.

Moving on, don't forget that the Blue Raiders will soon strut their stuff on national television from right here in Murphy Center. On Feb. 13, our home contest with Western Kentucky will be televised nationally on cable's Channel 10, Entertainment and Sports Programming Network (ESPN).

Suffice it to say that we need lots and lots of visual effects for this upcoming contest. Let's have lots of banners (try not to be too vulgar), and remember to get lots of rest the night before the game, because a superhuman effort will be necessary to impress the national television audience.

NOW, FINALLY, I have run out of preliminary material. Now is the moment of truth. I now would like to announce the names of the two newest PRE-EMINENT TENNESSEE VOLS ON CAMPUS, and welcome them with their first WEEKLY DIG. So ...

I'm a bit upset right now, and not really thinking straight because my Kentucky Wildcats took the gas twice this past week. The loss in Knoxville I was expecting. The nature of Kentucky-Tennessee games in Stokely has become such that if the 'Cats lose by less than 10, I'm not undone.

HOWEVER, THE DISPLAY on Wednesday night in Oxford was inexcusable. I mean, I thought Tennessee was the only team that was supposed to lose to Ole Miss consistently, especially in Oxford.

Anyway, while I try to collect myself, consider the upcoming weekend. Your Vols are playing Vanderbilt in Knoxville, and I personally feel that they're due for a loss. Vanderbilt is, as much as I hate to admit it, a pretty capable club with the addition of C.M. Newton and Phil Cox, and they just might jump up and bite you right in the tail. At least for the weekend, count me as a Vandy fan.

Gotta go now-I'm going to Jack Turner's office (he's the other pre-eminent Wildcat) and confer on what changes we may want to make in Lexington.
