Pope names 30 new cardinals, two from U.S.

VATICAN CITY (AP)—Pope John Paul II on Sunday named 30 new cardinals, including the archbishops of Baltimore and Detroit and the first-ever from Sarajevo and two former East-bloc states.

He also named cardinals from Vietnam and Cuba, the first-ever from the Caribbean country under leader Fidel Castro.

Search for missing boys continues, no leads

UNION, S.C. (AP) — Searchers on horseback scoured woods and red clay fields Sunday in the search for two missing boys after several thousand deer hunters turned up nothing.

"Not a lot has changed," Union County Sheriff Howard Wells said, five days after the boys' mother reported they were taken by a man who commandeered her car, then ordered her out at gunpoint.

National Guard gives health care to needy

HARTSVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Tennessee National Guard medics served their weekend drill duty at an elementary school, providing 276 Trousdale County residents with health care that's hard to find in the rural county of 6,000.

They counseled about nutrition, controlling diabetes and exercise clad in their battle fatigues. Physicians explained test results to the residents and referred them, if needed, for treatment.

They worked alongside local health workers as a peacetime mission.

Mock elections show usual weak turnout

JANET SINGER

Staff Writer

More than 500 students turned out in Keathley University Center last Wednesday and Thursday for the mock elections sponsored by College Republicans and College Democrats.

In the Governor's race, Phil Bredesen and Don Sundquist tied at 48 percent of the vote.

For the full U.S. Senate seat, Republican Bill Frist beat Democrat Jim Sasser 56 percent to 37 percent.

Republican Fred Thompson beat Democrat Jim Cooper 61 percent to 32 percent in the race to fill the Senate seat left vacant by now-Vice President Al Gore.

In the sixth congressional district race, Democrat Bart Gordon defeated Steve Gill 50 percent to 48 percent.

According to the chairman of College Republicans, Tim Harrell, the actual voting machines were operated by the Rutherford County Election Committee so as to insure impartial voting.

"We want to know who the faculty and students want to see in office.

We've let all the local television and radio stations know and the (Daily News) Journal," Harrell said.

"I think it's a wonderful opportunity," said Bettye Cates, an employee of the Rutherford County Election Commission who worked the polls.

Both the College Republicans and the College Democrats were disappointed by the voter turnout.

"The results at the end of yesterday (Wednesday) weren't as good as I expected but the apathy at this school is very high," said Geoff Jenkins, vice chairman of College Republicans.

"I know we didn't get out the word as soon as we could have, but it was pretty sad," said Jude Santana, vice president of College Democrats.

According to Santana, students' main excuses for not voting were that they were uninformed, didn't think they could make a difference, or didn't have time.

"I think students need to be more informed. It's sad that people don't care about politics, but the issues do affect MTSU students," Santana said.

Santana cited Don Sundquist voting against a raise in the minimum wage as a way students could be affected.

"I think it's sad that as few come out, and it only takes about one minute," said Brian Lewis, a freshman political science major who helped with the elections.

"I vote because it affects me. If you don't vote, you can't complain about anything in politics," said Kristen Lilly, a freshman pre-dentistry major.

Billy Stanton, a junior secondary education major, praised the media coverage of the races this year.

"I'm getting into it because of the weakness of the incumbents," Stanton said. "It's a tie race now. The media has had really fair coverage."

Matt Green, a senior broadcast journalism major, thought the character-bashing has been unfair.

"People are stepping up and saying 'I don't like you'. It's not appropriate," Green said.

However weak the turnout, Santana spoke positively of the voters.

"The people who actually voted were very informed," Santana said. □

Recycling program raises $190,000 for scholarships

CAROL IRWIN

Staff Writer

"One man's trash is another man's treasure" is an appropriate slogan for MTSU's recycling program.

Begun in 1972 as a fund-raising effort for the Science Club, it has grown through the years and has contributed $190,000 toward scholarships for students.

The current program focuses on aluminum cans, newspapers, and recyclable white office paper. This year 22 scholarships were awarded in amounts from $500 to $2,000.

Two new scholarships have been established for clerical and maintenance workers and their dependents. They provide a much-needed support network to ensure the continuing success of the recycling effort.

Scholarships are awarded based on academic excellence, not solely on the basis of need. An award is given to the Outstanding Freshman, Sophomore, Junior and Senior student in Biology. Also, students in pre-professional fields of study such as pre-pharmacy or pre-med are eligible to apply for scholarship money.

Recently, funding has become available for students involved in research or field work in related science areas.

An MTSU graduate student, Dobie Giles, spent the summer working with the Center for Disease Control (CDC) in Atlanta. He was involved in research on Legionella bacteria, which cause Legionnaires Disease.

The recycling program has grown to the extent that two workers devote almost full-time hours to the effort, and an additional three people work part-time in the program. Four of the five are funded by the financial aid work/study program. Students who have been assigned public service duty can work with the recycling program.

Mass Comm Building named for John Bragg last Friday

STACEY JOHNSON
Staff Writer

The Mass Communication building was dedicated last Friday in the name of State Rep. John Bragg, who was responsible for acquiring much of the financing for construction of the building.

"[We are] pleased and honored to name the Mass Communication Building after John Bragg," said University President James E. Walker. "John Bragg is a champion for MTSU."

Bragg has been instrumental in acquiring state funding for the $15 million, 88,000-square-foot building, which houses some of the most modern equipment and facilities in the country, by "...moving along legislation that has made a significant difference in the lives of all of us," stated Deryl Leaming, dean of the College of Mass Communication.

"John Bragg has made MTSU what it is today," said Tennessee Board of Regents chancellor Charles E. Smith.

"Representative Bragg has been known to say that MTSU made him what he is today," Smith said. "There is no one, no one who has meant more to education in Tennessee than Representative John Bragg."

"Outside of my family, this university has been my first love for 60 years..." Bragg said. "[I was] tremendously overwhelmed," by the dedication. "[I] had never dreamed of anything like that."

Bragg graduated from MTSU in 1940 after serving as editor of Sidelines for two years, being the student government president. He won varsity letters in basketball, baseball, and golf. He also received MTSU's distinguished alumni award and was inducted into MTSU's Sports Hall of Fame. He has been a newspaper publisher and is the owner of a printing company.

Bragg is currently serving his fourteenth term in the Tennessee House of Representatives. He has served as the chairman of the House Finance, Ways and Means Committee since 1973. He authored legislation which created the Sunshine (Open Meetings) Law and the Fiscal Review Committee, implemented to "strengthen accountability and money management both in state and local government," according to State Rep. Jimmy Naifeh, Speaker of the Tennessee House of Representatives.

"[Bragg is] known nationwide," Naifeh said. "He was the Chairman of the National Conference of State Legislators, [and has] worked for legislative and fiscal responsibility throughout his career."

Bragg also amended the bill which proposed the Better Schools Program to require benchmarks and goals for achievement for K-12 and higher education and added the Chairs of Excellence program to the bill which created 80 endowed chairs in higher education.

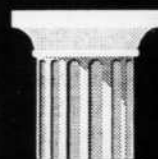

Bragg is a member of several committees, including Fiscal Review, Transportation and Business Tax committees, the Task Force on Children and Youth, and the Education Oversight Committee. He is Chairman to the Tennessee Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations and has been Deputy Speaker of the Tennessee House of Representatives for at least 12 years.

"I'm glad that he's an alumni of MTSU and that he has direct inroads to the needs of this university," said Michael Johnson, an instructor in the MTSU Radio/TV/Photography Department.

"The mass communication building has received national attention for it's state of the art design and equipment," Smith said. "You will not find a better facility for instruction of mass communication and related arts anywhere else in this country."

"Since it opened a few years ago this facility has had a dramatic impact on MTSU's recruitment efforts for the College of Mass Communication."

"To place John Bragg's name on this facility so that every student that ever attends this school will see the name of John Bragg is only fitting," said State Sen. Andy Womack (D-Murfreesboro). □

On some campuses recycling is funded through the University budget, but at MTSU the program is self-supportive.

"Students, faculty, administration and staff are incredible in their support of recycling," said Patrick Doyle, a biology professor who heads the recycling effort on campus.

Currently, 40 percent of all aluminum cans used on campus are recycled. Every can keeps three ounces of acid rain out of the atmosphere. It also eliminates 40 pounds of carbon dioxide, which would add to the Greenhouse effect, and saves 14 pounds of coal for other use, according to Doyle.

Recycling helps to reduce the imbalance of payment to foreign nations. Aluminum is an imported resource, and if it is recycled less is needed to be imported, which saves money.

Newspaper currently brings $15/ton. MTSU collects 4-5 tons each week, which adds $60-75 each week to the scholarship funds. It also keeps three cubic yards of recyclable materials out of the landfill, which saves costs to the county or state. This makes for a double profit when all factors are taken into consideration, according to Doyle.

More than 5,000 cans are placed in vending machines on campus each day.

Vending machines in Keathley University Center (KUC) and Kirksey Old Main (KOM) building have the most usage. If students in these buildings increased their rate of recycling, more scholarship money would become available to students, according to Doyle.

Aluminum and newspaper recycling bins are located in the Greenland Drive parking lot. Individual recycling cans are also located all over campus, and provisions are made to target certain buildings that generate an excess of recyclable materials, including Todd Library and the public relations department. Pick-up is made weekly, with the exception of KUC and KOM, which require biweekly pick-up.

The MTSU recycling program has been so successful that a number of other schools and businesses in the state, as well as around the country, have contacted MTSU for information about setting up a similar program, according to Doyle. Trevecca Nazarene College has recently expressed an interest.

Currently programs in Florida, New York, and Kansas are modeled after the MTSU recycling project. Palm Beach Community College in Florida is now operating a similar program.

Local businesses contribute to MTSU's recycling effort, Doyle said. Both city and county offices save office paper for pick-up. Vintec Co., which makes seats for Nissan, allows MTSU to pick-up recyclables, as well as Alexander Ford Lincoln-Mercury Mitsubishi, Neill-Sandler Buick-Pontiac-GMC, and General Electric.

Whirlpool Corporation gives an environmental award through the university each year. The $1,000 award was given to Steiner-Liff Iron and Metal Co. this year. Steiner-Liff then donated the entire amount back to MTSU's recycling program. A scholarship was set up in the name of Mitchell Migid, one of the co-owners of Steiner-Liff.

Cooperation from all students, faculty, staff, and administration has led to enormous success.

Twenty-two cans equals one pound of aluminum. If every student on campus would contribute 22 cans after the Thanksgiving break, over 15,000 pounds could be collected. Aluminum is currently worth approximately 50 cents per pound, and over $7,500 could be generated. That would fund additional scholarships and could be an easily achieved goal for other holiday breaks.

Stanford University to pay record fine

PALO ALTO, CA-CPS-Officials at Stanford University have agreed to pay nearly $1 million in penalties for numerous hazardous waste violations that date back to 1988.

The decision to pay the fine keeps Stanford out of court, where university attorneys would have spent a significant amount of time and money responding to the state's numerous charges, which include toxic spills, incorrect labeling, improper storage and others, said California state officials.

Stanford's penalty, levied by the California Department of Toxic Substances Control, is the largest amount ever paid by a California education institution for environmental infractions.

"The mishandling of hazardous wastes are just as dangerous in an academic institution as in a factory," said Allan Hirsch, spokesperson for the Department of Toxic Substance Control. "The problems at Stanford were as widespread and as serious as any problems we have seen anywhere in the entire state."

Stanford officials had been negotiating with the state for the past year to determine the severity of the financial penalty. By accepting the state's terms, Stanford has agreed to pay $460,000 to the state of California in penalties, $235,000 in reimbursement costs and more than $300,000 to various environmental groups. Stanford officials said the money will come out of the school's unrestricted fund.

Michigan Retires Ford's Jersey Number

ANN ARBOR, MI-CPS-The University of Michigan has retired the jersey of one of its most famous football players. Although the 1935 graduate can boast about some solid numbers on the girdiron, he is better known to most Americans for his time spent in the Oval Office.

Former U.S. President Gerald R. Ford had his old number 48 retired during halftime of the Michigan-Michigan State game on Saturday, October 7.

While playing under head coach Harry Kipke, Ford earned three varsity letters from 1932 to 1934. He was named Wolverines' Most Valuable Player in his senior year as the team's center and linebacker.

Ford, the nation's 38th president, helped Michigan win the national championship in 1932 and 1933 as back-up center to two-time All-American Chuck Bernard. The Wolverines compiled a 15-0-1 record during those two seasons.

Wolverines athletic director Joe

Roberson said he came up with the idea to retire Ford's number after seeing him at a golf outing in Palm Springs, California, where the two golfed together.

Ford said the football honor ranks high on his list of personal achievements. "Of course, it was great to be sworn in as president of the United States," Ford said prior to the game at a press conference. "But on a personal level, this is as meaningful to me."

Although he was considered to be a top prospect for the NFL at the time, Ford opted for law school instead. He did coach the offensive line at Yale while in school, however, earning $2400 for his pigskin expertise.

College student fights bank over credit card debt

RICHMOND, VA-CPS-A judge has given Michelle Bedell and the bank that issued her a credit card until October 17 to work out a dispute over how much the Radford University student should pay on her credit card debt.

Bedell says Signet Bank took advantage of her naiveté as a college sophomore when they offered her a credit card. After the company sued her for the outstanding balance on her Visa, Bedell countersued, claiming she was unaware of Signet's high interest rates and late fees.

Although both parties hoped for a quick decision, a judge's delay of the case has left the matter unresolved.

Richmond General District court Judge William A. Wimbish gave Signet and Bedell until October 17 to present what they believe would constitute a fair settlement in the case after the two sides were unable to agree on an amount in the courtroom.

Earlier this year, Signet sued Bedell hoping to collect a $1,481 Visa card debt, which includes penalties and interest charges at a rate of 23.8 percent.

Hoping to avoid paying nearly double the amount of her purchases in interest and fees, Bedell told the judge she is willing to pay $838, the amount for her actual purchases. She does not think she should be held responsible for late fees and interest charges after she told Signet that she wanted to close the account.

"I'm 50 percent wrong for not understanding the contract," Bedell told the judge, "and they're 50 percent wrong for giving credit to someone who does not have an income."

Signet Bank attorney Timothy Spencer said the bank would reduce the total owed to $1438 because of possible confusion over interest rates but indicated that Signet was seeking another $370 in legal fees.

The Student's Voice

Sidelines likes to know what students think. After all, this is a student newspaper. On Thursday, we asked several students if they use the recycling facilities on campus, asked for their opinions about recycling on campus and how MTSU can encourage students to recycle. Here is what you said:

Natasha Melton- Freshman Nursing

"I believe in saving anything that I can, as far as cans or anything that I see that I can... I think this campus does a good job of it."

Santha Philpot- Senior English

"I think [recycling] is very important, and I do use the [bins] that are available to me in my dorm, and in the English department where I work. I think that MTSU should emphasize the importance of that. A lot of people are uninformed. I think that's a problem."

Jeff Penix- Sophomore History

"Yes, [I recycle] whenever I'm drinking a beer. I think it's a good idea for the recycling bins to be set up around campus. I just think that everybody should [recycle], and not rebel against the system."

Brian Hopwood-Senior Graphic Design

"I do use [the bins]. I guess, if I can help anything it might as well be just something small to be a contribution in the long run, and, if anything, there might need to be a few more dropoffs. Definitely it's a positive step."

Will Beckett-Freshman Education

"I'm not even sure where [the recycling bins] are, but I would use them. I think it's a good idea to recycle... put it to good use, recycle the stuff so you can use it again. Why waste it? I think its a good step for the school to put [recycling bins] up."

Russell Campbell- Junior Geology

"I think it's a good program. I use it whenever I can... I'm definitely into recycling. I know it's not a big program yet; it's not a moneymaker, but it needs to be done. Recycle or die."

In Our Opinion By the Sidelines Editorial Staff

Have a safe Halloween

Halloween is here. That time of year when the ghouls come out of the ground and invite you to the cemetery for a party. The unofficial start of the holiday season.

It is also known in many places as the unofficial start of the vandalism season.

Technically the day is known as All Hallows Eve, or the day before All Saints Day (also known as All Hallows), the day set aside to honor all saints. Therefore Halloween, or All Hallows Eve, that being the day before the day to honor all saints, should theoretically be set aside for prayer.

Why, then, has this day become synonymous with violence?

Many cities around the country call in extra policemen and fire fighters in an attempt to quell the disturbances. In Detroit, firemen fight three times as many fires on Halloween as they do on any other day of the year. In New York City, more car windows are reported smashed out on Halloween than on any other day during the year.

Every major city in the country has some sort of special precautions in place to combat the violence that occurs on All Hallows Eve.

According to MTSU police officer Dustin Miller, the MTSU police take a few extra precautions for Halloween, such as putting a few more patrol cars on campus and a few more officers on foot around the campus. But Miller said there has not been any real trouble on campus since 1988.

According to Maj. Bill Todd of the Murfreesboro City Police, Halloween has been fairly quiet in the city over the last few years. The city experiences mostly minor vandalism, such as egg throwing. Halloween last got rough here in the late 1970s, according to Todd.

Murfreesboro also puts a few extra officers on patrol to help keep the peace.

This is good. Halloween and that time therein should not be used as an excuse to create mayhem and havoc.

Some of us look like we get dressed up for Halloween every day, but each to his (or her) own taste. It is all right to get dressed up and go to parties and get crazy. Just don't get too crazy. Be safe. We don't want to have to report on students being arrested for vandalism on Halloween night in Thursday's edition of Sidelines.

"The new phone book's here! The new phone book's here!"

- Steve Martin, "The Jerk"

Yes, boys and girls, the new Campus Directory is now available. I picked one up Wednesday afternoon in the KUC on my way to the Sidelines office.

For some reason, I opened it up to see if I was listed. There I was, and it made me mad.

I don't like people I don't know having my phone number. If you try to look me up in the South Central Bell phone book, you won't find me. If you call directory assistance, they can't tell you my number.

I pay extra to the phone company to have my number unlisted and unpublished. This is because I don't like telemarketers and pollsters pestering me and I don't like Republicans or Democrats telling me to "remember to vote for (fill in the blank: Republicans or Democrats) on Nov. 8!"

So when I first came to school here I filled out the forms necessary to make sure my number was not published in the Campus Directory. I filled out those same forms again this year to protect my privacy.

Last year my name was left out of the directory. This year my name and phone number were right there in black and white.

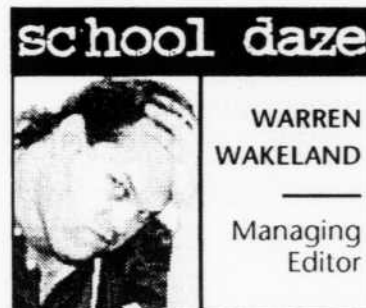

In the last two weeks I have received two anonymous phone calls at my home from people who would not identify themselves. They called to tell me that they liked what I was writing in this space, but that's not the point.

The point is that they got my phone number when it was supposed to be unlisted and unpublished, thanks to the incompetence of the university.

Now I am going to have to spend both the money necessary to have the number changed and the time it will take to tell those I wish to have my number what that new number is.

I am not a happy camper.

American concentration camps? Read on

The Omega Report

JIM MOORE
Special to SIDELINES

ITEM: A report claiming military bases ordered closed are quietly reopening with new names or missions is inaccurate, a Pentagon spokesman said yesterday. "It's full of errors," Defense Department spokesman Glenn Flood said.

The report by the Business Executives for National Security states that 26 out of 67 major bases ordered closed since 1988 remain open in one form or another—either as bases for reserve units or housing federal agencies. (Tennessean, Oct. 11, 1994, p. A-4)

Case closed, right? Wrong. For months we have been receiving intelligence reports, including photographs, of supposedly closed bases being converted to other uses—training for the 1.2 million foreign troops now on U.S. soil, Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) "detainee camps" housing up to 50,000 people each, and other facilities we're not being told about.

This "base closing" is a shell game spanning decades of power by both Republican and Democrat regimes.

Not too long ago, President Clinton pledged to take two-thirds of America's homeless off the streets, putting them in government housing facilities—whether they like it or not. Some of these bases are being converted to that purpose.

As long ago as 1986, we reported on the existence of "detainee camps" in eight states. Call them what you will—detainee camps, boot camps or concentration camps—their purpose is the same: round up American citizens who do not go along with the New World Order plan of a global dictatorship, along with the homeless, AIDS patients, gun owners, patriots, tax protesters, etc., and put them away.

On Apr. 6, 1984 (remember George Orwell?), President Reagan signed a secret plan to place as many as 400,000 Americans into regional detention centers. Although the scheme was revealed by the Phoenix Foundation in 1986, it was ignored until it was brought up again by a public interest lawyer Dec. 15, 1986.

The plan, to be implemented by the military, was in a national security directive Reagan signed in 1984, according to Daniel P. Sheehan, a lawyer for the Christic Institute, in a $24 million law suit against ex-CIA officials and Contra leaders.

"We're not even permitted to acknowledge such a document exists," replied Reagan spokesman Don Mathis. Sheehan said the secret Reagan directive authorized FEMA to undertake "a secret, nationwide 'readiness exercise'" code named REX-84.

Reason for the custody plan, Sheehan said at the time: "Known communist terrorists" from Central America who might "undertake the launching of military assaults" within the U.S. Sheehan's affidavit

I decided to try to find out who was responsible for this mistake. I called the Office of Student Affairs first. I was told that the Telecommunications Office handled putting together the directory. I called them and was told Publications and Graphics was responsible for the directory. I called them and was told Admissions and Records did the job. I called them and was told Telecommunications didn't know what they were talking about—that they did the job.

About this time Sidelines assistant features editor Sunny Beasley walked in the office. She picked up the directory, found her name and number and about had a cow.

See, Sunny has been the recent victim of a stalker in her hometown and has written of the experience in these pages. Recently this guy has begun calling her again, and she couldn't figure out how he found her. Now she knows.

Having her number in print and in the MTSU operator's directory was an open invitation to this guy to come find her. She had filled out all the forms, as had I, and somehow they had gotten lost in the shuffle, the same way as mine seem to have been misplaced.

She felt she had to do something about it quick. So she made the mental sacrifice and jumped on the MTSU departmental merry-go-round in an effort to correct this as fast as possible.

Now I'm not going to describe every step Sunny had to take because I could probably fill this entire section with the story. To make a long story short, she made 14 phone calls with no success!

On call number 14, she spoke to the office of Assistant Dean of Students Rodney Bennett. She was told by Bennett's assistant she had to make an appointment with Dean Bennett and explain the situation to him, and he would decide whether or not to approve the changes she wished, namely that she be given a different phone number and that it be kept out of the directory and off the operator's list permanently.

Bennett was out of town the end of last week, so the earliest appointment she would be able to get (this is Wednesday afternoon when Sunny is calling, mind you) was today at 3:15.

When she told me this I was reminded of something my late father used to preach to me: when you have a problem, go to the top.

I recommended she call University President James Walker with her dilemma. I told her Dr. Walker would get it straight in a big hurry.

I left the office at that point for about 20 minutes. When I came back, Sunny had a grin on her face from ear to ear. I asked her what happened, and she said, "I now have a new phone number and it's not in the directory!"

Now don't you think it's strange that not one person she had communicated with before could tell her what to do to get the change done immediately, but one call to the President's office did the job? It's like that pizza chain says, "One call does it all!"

What this is is an example of bureaucratic SNAFU. A person hears there is a problem but doesn't want to take responsibility for causing the problem. So they pass the problem on to the next guy, who passes it on to the next guy, and so on, until you get so frustrated with the ignorance you say the hell with it and quit.

This is a problem that is rampant at MTSU. Everyone is so afraid to take any responsibility here that you wind up having to bother the president of the university to get one simple thing done.

This should not happen. One of those 14 people she talked to should have been able to tell her who to talk to, but they just kept passing the buck. People around here are getting too good at that, and this is a prime example.

To Sunny's credit, even though she is someone who has little patience and gets flustered very easily, she hung in there and got the job done when faced with this incompetence.

When there is a problem to be dealt with, it is the administration's overall job to deal with it. If someone calls with a problem, try to help them handle it, don't pass them off to the next sucker.

We all wonder why there seems to be so much apathy here toward getting things done. This is why. You know what is going to happen before you try to do what you want to do. It's time for this to stop. □ says FEMA was also authorized to distribute "hundreds of tons of small arms and ammunition" to enforce the presidential order.

FEMA, of course, had no comment.

"The people I need to talk to aren't available," said FEMA spokesman Russ Clanahan. How convenient!

Court documents revealed other aspects of the plan:

—to maintain secrecy during discussions of the plan, FEMA installed a "special mental security door" on a meeting room. Staff members attending planning sessions all wore small, cross-shaped lapel pins.

—detention camps were to be built at military bases in New York, Pennsylvania, Virginia, Florida, Georgia, Arkansas, Arizona and California. (USA Today, Dec. 16, 1986, p. A-4). That story was virtually ignored by the national news media.

It was also revealed that Reagan, like Nixon before him, had installed a secret taping system within the White House, according to private sources within the National Security Agency. Many of these conversations between Lt. Col. Oliver North and higher officials were preserved on those tapes, which were since erased. However, the Oval Office has long been bugged by the NSA, the CIA and other agencies, and those copies still exist.

REX-84 was not Reagan's brainchild. It extended back to Nixon. Each extension of the plan carried a slightly different code: REX-84, REX-83, REX-82, etc. The plan continues today, unabated, under President Clinton.

Our current intelligence indicates that facilities have now been built in 26 states to hold as many as 10 million Americans, placing them in wretched facilities much like Japanese-Americans were placed during World War II, in a shocking and flagrant abuse of their Constitutional rights as U.S. citizens.

Integrate this knowledge with other facts and developments such as massive secret stockpiling of food in underground caverns filling hundreds of acres (such as those near Kansas City) with the developments I outlined last week; re: gun control, UN command of U.S. troops, the influx of foreign troops and equipment, etc., and you begin to see the picture that develops.

By Thanksgiving, we will begin to see the "new money" that will trigger an economic collapse. The "domestic" money, different in color from the "external" money, will be devalued. Section 4 of Senate Bill 2154 calls for all people to turn in their old money within 18 months after Phase One. This is in direct contradiction to what we have been told by the news media.

By this time next year, look for food shortages, economic chaos, a national imposition of martial law, and the end of the America we once knew.

There are literally hundreds of laws and executive orders that provide for the complete takeover of the media, all farms, all businesses, all health facilities, springs, ponds, streams, creeks, agriculture, food, etc. For example, it is now a federal crime to "hoard" food, hoarding meaning anything more than a 90-day supply (some sources say as little as 30 days).

By themselves, each action may not mean much, but put them altogether and you cannot help but see what is happening: the gradual imposition of the police state George Orwell warned us against.

Handgun Control, Inc., for example, is pushing for a national "thought police" that would confiscate "politically incorrect" books and literature and imprison those caught wearing "politically incorrect" clothing such as combat fatigues, camouflage clothing (much in style these days as a fashion statement), and even boots.

Like predator wolves circling a wounded and bleeding prey, the globalists are circling a wounded America. It's not all liberals, either. Some of the darlings of the conservative movement, such as Newt Gingrich, have sponsored the very legislation creating the "state of national emergency" that makes this possible.

America is the big enchilada; when it falls, the rest of Planet Earth will be easy pickings. □

Hell to freeze over this spring

WARREN WAKELAND
Managing Editor

The two Eagles concerts postponed this fall have been rescheduled for Apr. 11 and 13 at Starwood Amphitheatre, according to a report on WLAC radio Saturday morning.

Representatives from Starwood could not be reached for confirmation of the report.

The original dates, Sept. 27 and 28, were postponed, along with the remainder of the "Hell Freezes Over" tour due to the illness of guitarist Glenn Frey. Frey was diagnosed with gastroenteritis, a digestive disease, and underwent successful surgery to correct the problem three weeks ago.

Students who held their tickets will be able to use them for the April shows, according to the radio report. Tickets that were turned in went on sale Saturday morning. Prices for the April shows remain the same as for the September shows.

For ticket availability, call the Starwood ticket information line at 737-4849. □

Snow White coming out on video

Myles Callum
T.V. Guide

A lot of people in the movie industry hooted when Walt Disney set out in 1934 to produce the first full-length animated feature. Who'd sit still for an 83 minute cartoon? When you watch it, keep in mind that this masterpiece—which now comes out on video for the first time—is the movie that made the Disney empire; its success vindicated Walt's vision and bankrolled much of what followed. If you haven't seen it in a long time, I can report that I enjoyed watching this handsome, newly restored version. I had forgotten too many details: the beautiful but vicious stepmother turning herself into an old hag, the poisoned apple, the dwarfs' distinct personalities. □

Witches are a thing of the past, present and future

By Jack W. Noe
Special to Sidelines

A desolate dirt path. A peaceful moonlit night. A field of grazing cows and a witch dressed in black, dancing around an open fire! It seems the ways of the witch are alive and well in the small community of Fairview.

"It's a good night for creating a spell," remarks Toni, a name she would rather use to protect her identity from her family and friends.

"I've been coming to these woods for about 10 years now," Toni remarks. "The cky is my cloak. The visiting my cousin, I found a book on the craft and quickly adopted it as my art. It was a way of expressing myself."

The book was about Wiccan magic. Wiccans are people who worship the deities of nature. They practice what is called the Wiccan craft. They are nature-oriented and use their skills of "white magik" to become one with the Earth. Wiccans celebrate a spiritual experience that allows them to become harmonious with nature. The Wiccan spiritual roots can be traced back to Paleolithic times. Today, after and not pollute. The Earth is all we have. If we continue to pollute it, then we have nothing."

Fotter is the leader of a coven of Wiccans who meet late at night, in a secluded Woodbury area, to cast their spells. His coven has eight members, both male and female, ranging from 17 to 47 years of age.

Unlike Fotter, Toni likes to work alone. She likes to do her worship late at night after her husband and children have all gone to bed.

moon is my protector and the trees are my friends."

Toni is about 5 feet 1 inch tall, with dark brown hair that cascades down to her waist. She is wearing a long black hooded robe that comes down to her ankles, and she carries a sack of useful ingredients for spell casting.

"I became interested in witchcraft when I was 12 years old," Toni recalls. "I was very impressionable, and I had always questioned the traditional Christian behaviorisms. One day, while centuries of being considered evil and Satan worshippers, Wiccans are finally being recognized as doers of good.

"We like to be one with nature," says David Fotter, a student at MTSU who has been practicing his craft for about five years.

"Us Wiccans not only prance around the woods at night, but we help clean up the environment," Fotter remarks. "Ecology is a big factor these days. We all must do what we can to recycle says.

According to her, he did find out about five years ago. The revelation was not a pleasant experience for her.

"He burned all my books on the craft. He took away my caldron and confiscated all my special ingredients," Toni says in a sad tone. "It was truly horrifying."

Even though it was a setback, it did not take her long to rebuild what she had things that go bump in the night

Though this story does not take place on Halloween, it is still terrifying. I want to say up front that this story changed my fears. I used to think that ghosts were just a figment of the imagination (notice that I used the words used to).

I used to spend the night at my friend Christy's house on a weekly basis. She lived in what we called the "black bottoms." The place got its name from the rich black soil that was great for growing crops. It was also known for the insanity of the elder generation that had lived there all of their lives. There is a house down the road from Christy's, that has not been lived in since a son went crazy one day and killed his father and then himself.

One of the weekends that I spent there, we stayed up late watching movies and fell asleep on the floor of the living room. Christy woke me from my peaceful slumber. "There's someone outside." She said.

"You've lost you're damn mind. Go back to sleep!" was my reply.

"He's inside of the fence! How did he get into there? It is locked from inside!" She nagged.

"Freddy makes you hallucinate. Either that or you shouldn't eat pizza that late." I replied groggily.

The door then swung open and a cold breeze blew on us. The hairs on the back of my neck stood at attention. Christy passed out.

The door closed back without a sound. The chilling breeze passed through room as the ghost of the father from the house passed through. We saw him walk through the kitchen, to Christy's mother's room. Neither Christy nor I could breathe we were in such a state of shock.

After we finally got a grip on the reality of what was happening, Christy's mother walked through the room and out the back door wearing nothing but what she was sleeping in. We followed her out the door and over to the house. She walked as if she had been led on a leash. Following her through the yard and up to the house, we saw lights come on in the upstairs part of the house. As she walked in the door, it slammed shut.

The Black Bottom Ghost
by Sunny J. Beasley
Assistant Features Editor

We were left standing out in the cold March morning. We had decided to walk back to Christy's house when we heard a blood curdling scream. The front door, which was still locked, began to shake as Christy's mom was trying to get out. The lights from the upstairs started to flash on and off. The door that was dry rotted finally gave way and came tumbling out bringing Christy's mother with it.

Running for dear life, we finally reached the gate to the back yard. Just to add to our panicked state of mind, the gate was locked from the inside. We went running to the front door, which we found to also be locked. We finally found a cracked window, and Christy climbed in. When she came to the door, she was in tears. Her mother and I walked into the room and noticed that all of the furniture was turned either upside down or had to be dug through to open.

The next day we went back to see what we could find. We found nothing.

As God as my witness, I will never return to that house. □

The October wind whipped through the trees alongside the lonely highway. Carter walked as quickly as he could through the darkness, in a hurry to get home but also moving fast for a reason could not quite admit to himself: He was afraid. It wasn't the darkness, really, the moon was full and there was plenty of light to walk by. Nor was it the thick brush beside the road that could easily be hiding things Carter didn't want to see. He just had a feeling, a nervous anxiety, a desire to be around people and not on this God-forsaken stretch of road in the middle of the night.

The confederate cemetery was approaching on the left side of the road when Carter began to hear what sounded like voices coming from that direction.

The voices sounded human, and though he thought it was creepy for people to be in a cemetery at night Carter needed a ride, and decided to ask whoever was there. He made his way down the short gravel road that led to the huge, black gates. There weren't any cars in the small parking lot, but Carter could still hear the voices. The gate was open, and he moved through.

The cemetery was about two-hundred yards long, with two-foot stones in neat rows stretching from front to back. Here and there larger monuments marked the passing of generals and other officers. Carter had been here before in the daytime, but it seemed like a different place at night. Lots of big oak trees had been nice then, providing shade from the Sun, but now the trees caused the cemetery to be veiled in darkness, and it took some times for Carter's eyes to adjust. The trees also made it impossible to see most of the cemetery from the gate. Carter moved among the trees and the rows of stones carefully, not wanting to trip on one of the markers.

The voices had stopped, and for a moment Carter considered turning and leaving. He was getting the creeps. His eyes were adjusting slowly, but before long he was able to see pretty well. Walking through a group of trees, he looked to his left and froze.

The origin of the voices was obvious now, as Carter could see a few dim figures moving around among the stones. About twenty feet away a man was hanging upside-down on a tombstone, his white face looking bloodless. His eyes were large holes in his flesh, looking at Carter without seeing. Carter's heart began to beat fast, and a cold shiver went up his spine.

Among the Gravestones
by Brent Andrews
Assistant News Editor

This can't be happening, he thought to himself. I'm not really seeing this. He closed his eyes and opened them again. The man was still there. Others were nearby too. One soldier was laying on the ground between the rows of stones. Another standing atop a monument holding his arms out like a scarecrow. Carter didn't know about crows, but he thought the man made a good scarecrow. He decided then that the walk hadn't been so bad after all, and turned back to make a dash for the gate. What he saw when he turned around made him change his mind. A tall, grotesquely fat woman with an axe stuck in her head looked at Carter through a stream of blood. Beside her was another soldier, his chest stained red from a bullet wound. Behind them were others, and all were looking at Carter and beginning to move slowly toward him.

These people are dead, Carter thought. He turned and ran, but there was nowhere to go. He was surrounded by dead people, and they were tightening the circle. The blank looks they were giving him let him know they would have no sympathy for him once their arms began to grab him.

Hearing a rustle behind him, Carter whirled to see a woman with half a face reaching for him. The half

Now she practices in privacy about a mile from her home in a secluded rural area.

It was a cool and eerie night as we ventured forth into the heart of her sacred circle. The landscape was covered with trees that blanketed the night, virtually blocking the light from the crescent moon. The only sounds came from the owls far above us in the trees and the crunching of leaves by our feet as we ventured closer to the circle.

"Being a witch," she remarks, "gives a person a sense of power and being. You have more control over what is going on in your life. You become more disciplined."

As we arrived at the circle, roughly 10 feet in diameter and outlined with rocks, Toni approached the black cauldron in the middle of the circle and began to chant certain phrases to the gods and goddesses of the night.

Tonight Toni is casting a spell for money. With her black satin pouch in tow, she places several key ingredients into the cauldron to promote the effectiveness of her spell. Keeping the ingredients to herself, she decides not to share the contents of her pouch. After about 30 minutes of chanting and dancing in a circle, the spell has been cast, and the show is over.

"It generally takes a day or so to happen," Toni quips.

"Trust me," she smiles. "It will happen!"

Toni is glad that witches are getting a better reputation in today's society, compared to the burnings in 16th- and 17th-century Europe and the hangings during the Salem witch trials which began in the late 1600s.

"I'm glad the stereotype of witches is finally fading away," Toni smiles. "However, it is fun to dress up and be able to make believe. Halloween is my favorite holiday. I get up early and make a batch of bat cookies. I pull out my broom and my black hat and put my cauldron in the front yard.

"However, I believe everyone in my community is scared of me, because no one ever comes around," she says, while frowning.

"One thing I love to do is to catch a bat the night before Halloween and release it into the night on Halloween," Toni says. "It's a symbol of rebirth."

Halloween is the celebration of Samhain (pronounced SOU-en, with the "ou" as in "sound"), or the festival of the dead. It is believed one has a better chance of contacting the spirits on this day. Samhain is a celebration of death, the ending of summer and the harvest season, and the beginning of the dark time of the year.

A day after casting the money spell, Toni found a puppy and soon learned there was a reward of $250 upon return of the dog.

"I wasn't at all surprised about my money spell working," Toni says happily. "I told you it would come in some form or another.

"I wasn't expecting the form to have four legs and big brown eyes."

Toni says she believes that more people should be open-minded and allow themselves to embrace new experiences.

"People need to leave their own back yard in order to see what lies beyond the horizon," Toni remarks.

Toni has managed to take in stride the offensive remarks leveled at her witchcraft practice. She does, however, issue a warning for those who cross her. □ of her face that was normal was almost pretty, but the other half was only a mass of flesh. It looked like a fire had claimed her life.

The woman lunged, screaming, and Carter moved to the side to avoid her. Grabbing a handful of soft, brown hair as the lady moved past, Carter smashed her face into a tree. Then the rest were upon him, grabbing him and trying to hold him down. Some of them spoke, but Carter wasn't listening. He was fighting for his life.

Lashing out when he could, Carter felt a nose crunch under his fist. His fingernails ripped at the face of another ghoul, bringing out warm, red blood. He jerked his head up, crunching another nose and earning a scream from a soldier above him. He punched over and over, injuring several more people before their combined strength was too much for him. He braced himself for the moment when they would take his life, but a painful blow to the back of his head knocked him out before he knew how he would die.

Carter woke groggily, a sharp pain in his neck. He looked around and wondered where he was. Coming out of the daze, he suddenly jumped from the bed he had been on. He had thought the ghouls would eat him for sure, but with the exception of the large lump on the back of his head he was uninjured. But where was he? The room he was in looked like a jail cell, but he hadn't done anything wrong.

Carter moved to the wall of bars and screamed into the hallway outside. Soon, an irate looking policeman was staring at him from the other side.

"You little bastard," the man said. His name was Beech, and he was a friend of Carter's father.

"Do you have any idea how much damage you've caused? Melissa Daniel's nose is going to be almost non-existent without surgery. The Reverend Wilson won't be able to preach for a week, and about ten upstanding community members had to visit the hospital last night because of you." The man's face was red already, but it was getting redder by the second. It looked like it was going to explode when Carter laughed out loud in relief. Today was Halloween, and Carter had stumbled upon the dress rehearsal for the annual fund-raiser held by the Citizens For A Better Community. He hadn't been assaulted by a group of ghouls last night. His assailants had been good citizens. His happiness didn't last long, though. When he realized how much explaining he was going to have to do the smile on his face disappeared. He looked down at his dirty shoes, and shifted under the heat of the policeman's stare. □

Utility & Infrastructure Project will block road near BDA

October 31, 1994

B street in front of Boutwell Dramatic Arts Building will be cleared of cars on Monday, Oct. 31 in preparation for further infrastructure work. The street will be blocked all day Nov. 1 and possibly half a day on Nov. 2. Faulkinberry Street will also be blocked at the intersection with B Street as a result. Traffic can pass from Faulkinberry north onto B Street via a gravel detour.

Bill Smotherman, director of physical plant, says the Utility and Infrastructure Improvements Project is an 18-month program scheduled to be completed next summer. Anyone planning outdoor activities on campus through next summer should contact Smotherman at 2414.

Blue Raiders top Jax State in offensive battle

SCOTT STEWART
Sports Editor

Going into Saturday's game with Division II Jacksonville State, the Blue Raiders knew they were going to have score a lot of points to beat the Gamecocks.

MTSU's offense stepped up when it had to, racking up 527 yards total offense and answering every JSU threat to beat the Gamecocks 45-37 at Horace Jones Field.

"We knew they were good offensively," said MTSU quarterback Kelly Holcomb, who hit 21 passes on 23 attempts for 313 yards and two touchdowns. "We were trying to keep the defense off the field against them."

"Our offensive line did a great job, and the receivers were brilliant," Holcomb said. "They made the catches, and we made the plays today. It was a great win."

JSU came into Saturday's game averaging 325 yards a game rushing, and had amassed over 2,000 yards with their highly touted wishbone offense.

The Gamecocks were true to form, gaining a total of 538 yards, with 304 yards rushing split between eight different players.

"Jacksonville State is a great football team," said MTSU coach Boots Donnelly. "We never stopped a single thing they were trying to do."

Jacksonville State took the ball first and moved methodically down the field, scoring on quarterback Chuck Robinson's one-yard run. The drive covered 81 plays and took 7:01 off the clock before MTSU ever touched the ball.

Both teams remained scoreless through the first quarter, but MTSU wasted no time in the second, scoring on Holcomb's 13-yard pass to receiver Cory Simpson. Petrilli added the extra point, leaving the score tied 7-7 with 14:18 left in the first half.

After JSU

With the game in control the Blue Raiders lost concentration and JSU took advantage when Eric Powell busted through the MTSU defense for 40 yards and a touchdown. Lee Sutherland added the extra point, and the half ended with MTSU up 21-14.

"That was a big drive," Donnelly said. "It turned the game around and gave them momentum going into half-time."

"Our team has been very unemotional all year, and we make it hard on ourselves every game."

JSU carried their momentum to the field in the second half, and took a fumble by MTSU fullback Mike Thomas 50 yards in five plays to tie the score at 21.

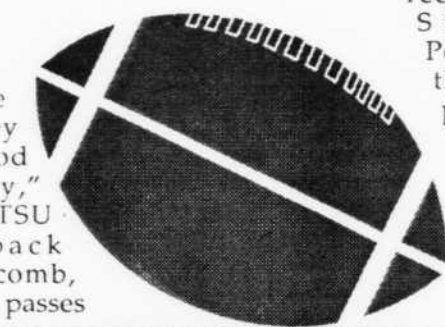

MTSU's offense stepped up the pace by scoring on their next four possessions, with fullback Robbie Roberts scoring two touchdowns, Bayless scoring one and Petrilli kicking a 22-yard field goal.

"In the second half Kelly started checking the plays at the line of scrimmage, and he knew what he was doing," Donnelly said. JSU would not go away, tying the score again at 31-31 late in the third quarter and pulling to within eight points, giving them a chance to drive for a potential tying score.

The final drive began when Holcomb fumbled a snap and the Gamecocks recovered at their own 41-yard line. They drove the ball to the MTSU 36, when Robinson hit Powell at the Blue Raiders' 8-yard line as time expired.

Next week MTSU travels to Austin Peay as they return to OVC action. Game time will be 1:30 p.m. □

COMING RIGHT AT YOU— MTSU tailback Kippy Bayless busts through would-be Jacksonville State tacklers in the Blue Raiders' 45-37 win over the Gamecocks. Bayless carried the ball 25 times for a total of 157 yards and two touchdowns, leaving him just 17 yards short of 1,000 for the season. He will try to reach the 1,000 yard mark this Saturday as the Blue Raiders travel to Clarksville to take on Austin Peay at 1:30 p.m.

Soccer team struggles to 1-1 tie with Mississippi College

DREW BUTLER
Sports Writer

After 50 minutes of soccer between MTSU and Mississippi College Saturday, it seemed the game would end scoreless.

However, each team scored one goal in the second half, and the game ended in a 1-1 tie.

The first half saw two major moments. The first had MTSU lose a player just 2:02 into the game after receiving a red card, leaving the Blue Raiders short of the game for the remainder of the game.

"It was very costly for us having to play a man down, because normally if we'd been at full strength, we would have done a little better," said MTSU coach Charlie West. "Our guys played extremely well under the circumstances."

The second highlight of the first half was a great save by the Mississippi College goalkeeper. The MTSU goal was prevented when the goalkeeper deflected a shot over the net near the end of the half.

In the second half MTSU attacked the net, spraying random shots at the MC goal and finally connecting on a Brad LaBauve goal six minutes into the second half.

MC scored their goal on a breakaway 80 minutes into the game, set up by a save from their goalie at the other end. MTSU finishes the season next Saturday at Tennessee Tech. □

INSTRUCTIONS

Place a mark beside your predicted winner. Entries must be received by Thursday, Nov. 3.

Pickers with a perfect week will qualify for a MTSU T-shirt. The picker with the best total record at year's end will receive a plaque, and will pick against the staff on the Bowl games. You must pick at least 6 (six) weeks in order to be eligible.

If a game has 'vs' it means the game is at a neutral site. Send entries to 'On the Line', Box 42, MTSU, Murfreesboro, Tn. 37132 (Box 42 if sent through campus mail), or come by the JUB room 310 and leave them in the sports mailbox. Late entries won't be accepted unless postmarked by the deadline date.

Student Picks

We are coming to the home stretch in this year's college football season. The student race is tightening up, as nine people are within 10 games of leader William Wood, who went 12-4 last weekend for a 94-32 record. On the strength of last week's 16-0 and this week's 12-4, Emeri Gordon moved into 2nd with a 92-34 record. Here's the rest of the top fifteen.

IN OUR OPINION

SENIOR PROFILES

FROM THE SPORTS EDITORIAL STAFF...

What factors should really decide who's number one?

Picking the number one team in Division I football has become as difficult as picking out a four-leaf clover in recent weeks.

Is it Auburn, Nebraska, or Penn State? No one seems to know who the number one team is now, but during the first week in January, everyone suddenly has an answer.

One of the debates this season involves whether a football program on probation should be included in each national poll. The CNN Coaches and Bowl Coalition Poll refuse to include probation teams. The Associated Press poll, however, allows probation teams to be ranked, but even it appears to fear listing such teams number one.

Auburn University, currently 8-0, has not only been on probation the past two years, but it also hasn't lost a game during this time frame. They have beaten quality teams such as Florida, Alabama, and Georgia (okay, so maybe Georgia's not that great this year) at least once the past two years. Most teams don't play in a league as tough as the SEC, which has the annual potential to produce up to five Top 25 teams.

We realize Auburn broke NCAA rules, but does it mean the nation's longest Division I winning streak should be punished and ignored?

On the other hand, Nebraska and Penn State, 9-0 and 7-0 respectively, have followed all the rules. They play in tough conferences and also play Top 25 teams. Their fans don't feel they should have to take a back seat to a team on probation. After all, Nebraska and Penn State are too busy trying to fight each other for number one.

The solution to this problem is also an annual debate. We've all heard it before—it's time for a playoff system.

We realize bowl sponsors want to keep tradition intact to make money, but most people only want the top eight teams to participate in a playoff. This leaves plenty of other teams, including the 17 other Top 25 teams, for bowls to consider. Shouldn't we have the best of both worlds?

If the coaches want to know who's really number one, they should have a playoff system.

To be fair, a probation team should not be allowed to play for a chance at number one, but it should still be ranked. It's ridiculous to ignore the achievements of teams like Auburn. Allowing the other high caliber teams to participate in traditional bowl games should keep the sponsors happy.

Most importantly, in our opinion, everyone has a fair chance at being happy. □

LINNEY G. MOORE/MTSU Athletics

Mimms, a graduate of Glenduff High School, is majoring in aerospace technology and minoring in industrial technology.

Mimms' number one hobby is football, but in the off-season he likes to build models and sing.

Many assume Mimms builds model airplanes, cars, and maybe ships, but you'd have to ask him to find out for sure. If you hear someone singing in the corridors of Murphy Center, it will probably be Mimms. He likes to sing all types of music, from country to gospel.

Mimms chose MTSU because he was impressed with both the aerospace and football programs. He said he also liked the well-known winning tradition which he was accustomed to and that MTSU has a humble way of being winners.

Mimms says he's troubled when he sees MTSU students wearing other universities colors, but he tries to understand that everyone has a right to wear whatever they want.

"If you're going to be an MTSU student, at least have the decency to wear our blue and white sometimes," Mimms said.

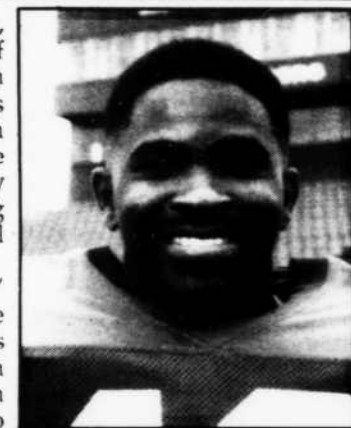

Mimms advises all first-semester freshmen to be serious in what they're doing and try not to let their minds wander too much.

"Utilize the opportunities MTSU has to offer and consider yourself fortunate to be here. There are some people who'd love to have some of the opportunities that you have," Mimms said.

Meeting strangers comes easy to Mimms, and he would like all MTSU students to know he's real and there's nothing fake about him.

"What you see is what you get," Mimms said.

After graduation, Mimms wants to try out for the NFL. However, if he doesn't make it, he hopes to get a job related to his major. □
