IN THE NEWS...

WASHINGTON (AP) — Venturing where only two first ladies have gone before, Hillary Rodham Clinton is taking her case for reshaping America's health care system directly to key congressional committees.

Even more than Eleanor Roosevelt and Rosalynn Carter, she is going to Capitol Hill not only as an advocate for her husband's policies, but as an architect.

Befitting what has been until now a rare occasion, five House and Senate committees clamored for the privilege of hearing first from Mrs. Clinton.

She opted to appear first before the House Ways and Means Committee and later today before the House Energy and Commerce Committee. Two more Senate stops and a third House panel were on tap for today and yesterday.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Clinton administration is considering closing some of the Social Security Administration's 1,300 field offices, a cost-cutting move likely to stir opposition from lawmakers and advocates for the elderly.

The administration's desire to merge field offices first surfaced in the notes of a Sept. 8-9 meeting of Social Security managers and the agency's acting commissioner, Lawrence Thompson.

According to the 12-page document obtained by The Associated Press, Health and Human Services Secretary Donna E. Shalala favors consolidation of field offices and believes the department "can handle the politicians" when the issue arises.

Although spokesmen for the Department of Health and Human Services say Shalala would never claim to be able to "handle" lawmakers, they say she would consider closing field offices.

MOSCOW (AP) — Hundreds of helmeted riot police in flak-jackets staged a public show of force Tuesday around the Russian parliament, where rebel lawmakers have been holed up for a week.

Illegal drug use up on campus

TINA HARVEY
Staff Writer

Drug usage on college campuses is on the upswing, and MTSU is no exception to the growing epidemic.

There has been a significant increase of drug and alcohol related arrests on campus since Jan. 1, said Lt. John Wagoner of the Safety and Security Office.

Alcohol, pot and cocaine are the drugs MTSU police have found on campus, according to Wagoner. But the use of LSD does not seem to be problem, he said.

"I have never cited or arrested any student for possession of LSD," Wagoner said.

From Jan. 1 to Sept. 20, eight MTSU students have been arrested for possession of marijuana and there were none last year; 25 were arrested for driving under the influence (DUI), compared to 16 last year; and 22 were arrested for public drunkenness, up from 21 last year.

"Possession, buying or selling drugs on campus can lead to jail time if the student is caught," said Wagoner. "Having more than a half ounce of pot is a felony and that will go on your crime record."

Wagoner said alcohol and other drugs lead to campus theft and violence.

In these cases as well as any other criminal actions taking place on campus, MTSU police have the same authority as a Tennessee Highway Patrol officer.

"We're just like your small town police department," the lieutenant said. "We write citations, take people to jail. We handle all patrol and crime investigations. We're all graduates of a state certified police academy."

Possession of alcohol is the most common citation given to MTSU students.

"If a student, 21 or older, is caught consuming alcohol on campus he/she will be referred to the dean of students office, who will look at the student's previous conduct record," Wagoner said. "Prosecution depends on the student's previous conduct record. Under-age drinkers can be cited to court, depending on the police officer."

The largest drug and alcohol problems are found in the dorms, Wagoner said.

"The other day we got a call of a student smoking pot in the bathroom," he said. "When we got there [though], the student was gone."

A former dorm resident, who wished to remain anonymous, agreed a majority of the drug and alcohol related problems begin in the dorm.

"When I lived in a dorm, I would drink while I got ready to go out. It's cheaper," she said. "[and] Yeah, I drink at all football games and campus rec games—everybody does," she said.

Although campus police know about the drug and alcohol problem in the dorms as well as on the rest of the campus, they are not allowed to search students based only on suspicion.

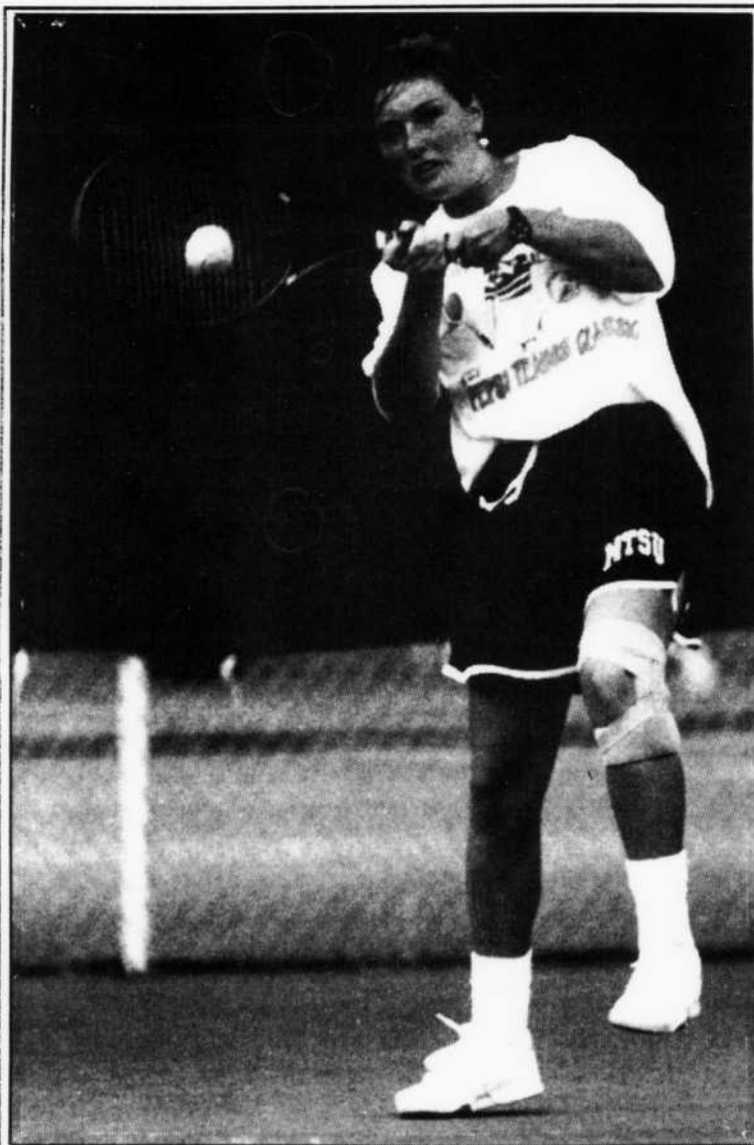

"There has to be probable cause to stop and search someone," Wagoner said. "We have to have more than our own suspicions to search."

Wagoner said he encourages people with information on people using drugs or committing other crimes to contact the Murfreesboro/Rutherford County Crimestoppers at 893-STOP.

Faculty to see more money for graduate research

SUZANNE MOORE
Staff Writer

An additional $15,000 in new monies is now available through the graduate office to award for research related to teaching.

The deadline to apply for Summer Salary Research Grants is Thursday, Sept. 30.

Any faculty member interested in applying for a research grant must fill out an application, and write an eight to ten page proposal indicating what their plans are for using the money.

These proposals must be submitted to the Vice President of Academic Affairs, who will distribute them to the Faculty Research Committee for review.

"We have a wide cross-section of teachers who have applied for grants, from business and psychology to education, said Dr. John Pleas, Chair for the Faculty Research Committee. "Every department is encouraged to take part. Around eight teachers have already applied for Summer Salary Research Grants."

Several awards have already been approved.

Dr. Michael Hinz of the Philosophy Department will be using his award to have research published.

"The grant money will contribute to publishing costs for a book entitled, Self-Creation and History," says Hinz. "The main focus of this book is to explain systems of thought and creation through history."

"Teachers may also apply for Academic Year Research Grants, through the 1993-94 academic year," said Dr. Marion Wells of the Graduate School. "The Faculty Research Committee meets at least once a month and has $91,000 allocated for research."

Foreign languages program offered as part of Continuing Education

YVONNE BARTHOLOMEW
Staff Writer

Continuing Education Division is offering several foreign language studies this fall to serve those who want to be able to communicate in different languages.

According to the Division of Continuing Studies, Understanding multiple languages can be beneficial on the job market. Beginning sign language, Portuguese, Spanish and English as a second language are being offered this semester.

Classes are scheduled from Sept. 7 through Oct. 26.

Introduction to French was the first course offered by the Continuing Studies department.

The French class along with the Introduction to Japanese class were cancelled because of low registration due to lack of prior public notice that the classes were being offered.

Oakland High School teacher Susan Brooks is teaching Beginning Conversational Spanish on Wednesday nights. Brooks said that 24 people are currently enrolled in her class.

"Most of my students' reasons for taking the class are to benefit their career," Brooks said.

A variety of people, including policemen and a church group, are learning the Spanish language and culture.

The class is predominantly middle-aged people with no prior Spanish background.

Jim Roley, who works as a purchasing agent at Nissan, said he is taking the class not only because it will benefit him on the job but also because of a personal desire to learn a second language.

Sign Language, Portuguese and English as a Second Language will begin in October.

Parenting workshops offer advice, support

AMY WADE
Staff Writer

Helping students who are also parents juggle the demands of school work and parenting is the focus of a series of workshops which started last week and sponsored by the June Anderson Women's Center.

Tuesday's workshop theme was: "Parenting: Authoritarian Or Permissive? or Somewhere In Between?" and was to help inform parents of alternative techniques that may work better with their children. The meeting was held in the Family Housing lounge.

The workshop also helped create an informal support group for those who share the hectic combination of motherhood and school.

Kathy Glascott, assistant professor, Elementary and Special Education, conducted the workshop.

Glascott provided background information on the emotional and physical stages of children and the different approaches to parenting.

At the end of the meeting the mothers discussed problems they were having with their children and exchanged tips and ideas.

"I think that these workshops would benefit the needs of student parents," said Candace Rosovsky, the Women's Center director.

Rosovsky said she wanted to reach out to the married community to let them know that there are many resources on campus that are available and ready to help them cope.

Though the group was small, Glascott said she was not discouraged.

"I enjoyed the workshop and learned how to respond to my children more," said Cynthia Primm, a student and mother.

Many of the women said they would try to attend the other workshops also.

The second workshop, "Teaching Children To Be Responsible," will be held on Oct. 21 at the Family Housing lounge from 7 to 9 p.m. The speaker will be Dr. George Livingston.

On Nov. 18 the third workshop, "How To Survive Christmas With Your Children Still Intact", will be instructed by Dr. Connie Ellis.

IN THE NEWS...

Russian Orthodox priests in flowing black robes and holding crosses blessed the defenders.

Police appeared to be stepping up the war of nerves to demoralize the parliament's supporters. The panic swept parliament Monday when defenders said police were about to attack, but nothing happened.

Special Interior Ministry soldiers with assault rifles were among units ringing the parliament building and grounds today in the biggest display of force yet by the government. Police used trucks and barbed wire to block roads leading to parliament.

TBILISI, Georgia (AP) — Georgian leader Eduard Shevardnadze returned safely to his headquarters Tuesday after escaping from the city of Sukhumi following its capture by Abkhazian separatist forces.

Government officials said Shevardnadze arrived in Tbilisi on a plane and was in good condition. Georgian government forces were still holding Sukhumi airport and the surrounding area, they said.

Like Shevardnadze, thousands of Georgian troops and civilians were trying to escape today from the area around Sukhumi, officials said.

Abkhazian fighters captured the devastated provincial capital of Sukhumi on Monday in one of the fiercest battles during 13 months of conflict for control of the lush region on the Black Sea coast.

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Retired Gen. James H. Doolittle, whose daring, daylight bombing raid on Japan during World War II stunned the Japanese and lifted American morale, died at 96.

Doolittle, who died Monday at the home of one of his sons after suffering a stroke earlier this month, set a string of aviation records in the 1920s and '30s, as an Army pilot and then as an employee of Shell Oil Co.

But he was remembered above all for the first bombing raid of the war on Japan. It took place on April 18, 1942.

The raid inflicted no major damage. A later Naval War College study could find no serious strategic reason for it.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The head of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms — under fire for the ATF's deadly raid on a Texas cult — is retiring just days before the release of a report expected to criticize the agency's handling of the raid.

"Continuing discussions with Treasury departmental officials lead me to believe that the department and I have substantially different views for the future of ATF following the Waco review," Stephen Higgins wrote Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen on Monday.

The officials see the Feb. 28 raid on the Branch Davidian compound near Waco — which killed four agents and a half-dozen cultists and wounded 16 agents — as a reason to change ATF, he wrote.

"In my view, Waco was a tragic event from which all of law enforcement can learn, but I believe that ATF was, and continues to be, an outstanding law enforcement agency," wrote Higgins.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison, indicted on charges of misusing her office during her 2 1/2 years as state treasurer, called the allegations "sleazy politics" aimed at erasing GOP gains in Texas.

Mrs. Hutchinson, whose landslide victory in June made her the first woman senator from Texas and a rising star in the Republican Party, was accused along with two former aides Monday of using state employees and state equipment for personal and political reasons and destroying records as part of a cover-up.

The grand jury did not specify whether she used her Treasury office to further her Senate bid and didn't elaborate on the alleged abuses.

But former aides have charged that she made a habit of sending staffers on personal and political errands, including helping her find and fix up her home.

A word from the Editor...

On my way to the Sidelines office Wednesday, I was approached by a student who was concerned about the paper. Unlike many who approach me, this person was sincere. He got right to the point and no punches were pulled.

Since I was in a hurry, he walked with me as I made my way under the towering trees between Cope Administration and Peck Hall. As he spoke, I listened attentively.

"Why are you writing about the Rebel flag," he asked. "Why are you beating a dead horse," he added as we approached the James Union Building.

I have known this person for quite some time, though not well. I met him at the last year's College Republican rally when Pat Buchanan spoke. He was one of the protesters who interrupted the rally.

Despite our political differences, his concerns about the paper made a lot of sense. Many students and faculty members may have misunderstood my motives and the motives of many columnists of Sidelines. My purpose is not to impose Southern heritage on anyone. I simply want others to know how many feel about a very sensitive issue. I want all students, regardless of color, to get along and respect each other's heritage. Therefore, it greatly concerns me that many students feel that only one point of view of the issue of the Confederate flag or the mascot is being shown. I want to hear your concerns.

If you disagree with the stance this paper has taken on either issue, please write in and vent your frustrations. This newspaper is for all students - black, white; Yankee or Rebel; or even for those who could care less.

NAFTA good for environment

The most vociferous opponents to the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) have been environmental groups. Three such groups, the Sierra Club, Public Citizen and Friends of the Earth obtained a court order preventing NAFTA's implementation until an environmental impact statement is filed.

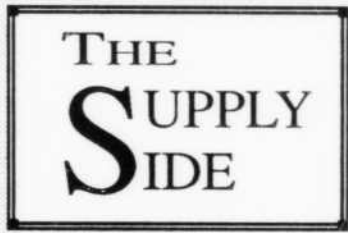

The Clinton Administration subsequently appealed the ruling in August. If upheld, however the cost and time necessary to complete the statement could kill the treaty.

Environmentalists have proven one thing as far as NAFTA is concerned: they will be extremely careless with the truth in voicing their opposition.

The economic benefits of NAFTA were spelled out in part one of this article. The free-trade zone in North America would represent the largest free-trading region in the world, producing an estimated $6.2 trillion in goods and services per year. While the agreement appears most likely to pass in Mexico and Canada, environmentalists in the U.S. could effectively block its ratification.

One argument against NAFTA, used by various environmentalists, is that Mexico's environmental standards are much lower than those of the U.S., and U.S. companies will ultimately flee to Mexico to escape expensive environmental regulations. Indeed, Mexico has experienced persistent environmental problems. But things are beginning to change.

Under President Carlos Salinas de Gortari, government spending on environmental protection grew from $12.5 million (U.S. dollars), or .05 percent of GNP, in 1988 to $1.1 billion, or .44 percent of GNP, in Athletics more than just a game

It has recently been suggested, in this publication, that athletics is promoted at this university to the detriment of academics. In fact, it has been implied that athletes, football players in particular, receive preferential treatment.

CHARLES ALY
Staff Writer

While I will not attempt to argue numbers and percentages, I find the assertion that MTSU's academic and administrative problems would fade away if we were not supporting athletics to be totally ludicrous. Furthermore, the charge that football players receive special treatment is not only very serious, but baseless and ignorant of the realities of playing football at MTSU.

In an ideal world, all universities would be judged by the quality of their faculty, content of their curriculum and success of their alumni. Unfortunately, we don't live in an ideal world and must, therefore, deal with reality.

We all know MTSU is a quality university. Certainly, many of the administrative decisions leave something to be desired (can you say parking ticket?), but I am sure most of you will agree when I say the quality of education here is first rate.

However, excellent academic programs aren't exactly something most universities can hang their hats on. With a few exceptions, the Ivy League for instance, name recognition for a university is based on athletics, primarily football.

You've heard all the put-downs, I'm sure: Middle Tennessee Community College, "Middle what, where's that?" MTSU is the third-largest university in the state, but the perception remains that we're just the ugly step-sister of Tennessee's universities.

I can think of two things this institution could do to greatly improve its image:

1. Change the Name: The University of Middle Tennessee is a much more appropriate name for this school. By placing 'University' in front and dropping the 'State' one emphasizes the institution rather than the area and affects an immediate perceptual change.

2. Play Ball With the Big Boys: If you want to be known as one of the premier universities in the state, you need to start acting like one. Memphis State and UT play Division I-A football and their football programs attract enormous publicity and attention for their universities.

It may not be right, it may not be fair, but having a successful I-A football team will do more for our degrees than almost any academic advances the university might make. If you graduate with an MTSU degree today and in five or ten 1991. Mexico City, which is generally considered as having air pollution problems unparalleled among large metropolitan areas worldwide, began stringent control measures almost two years ago and will spend $2.5 billion over the next four years to clean its air further.

Also, last year, Mexico City's Pemex oil refinery was closed by the Mexican government at a cost $500 million in lost revenues. The plant employed 5,000, but also dumped 224 tons of pollutants into Mexico City's air annually.

Many environmentalists in the U.S. have unfairly painted Mexico as a backward, undeveloped nation oblivious to environmental concerns. This is not the case. Mexico is, in fact, an industrial society experiencing uncharacteristic political reform and economic growth. Analysts have contended that Mexico's environmental clean-up is directly attributed to the general improvement in its economy. As its economy grows further, Mexico will spend even more to ensure a clean environment for its citizens.

An important study, produced by Princeton economists Gene M. Grossman and Alan B. Krueger, concluded that "economic growth tends to alleviate pollution problems once a country's per capita income reaches about $4,000 to $5,000." Mexico's per capita income is just below the $4,000 level now. Acknowledging this fact, President Clinton said, "Only a prosperous society can have the confidence and the means to protect its environment."

Indeed, as Mexicans become more prosperous, their concern for their environment will grow.

"Among people just working in the country, worrying about getting to eat, the air in Mexico City is not a big concern," said Wesley Smith, a Mexico expert with the Heritage Foundation in Washington, D.C. "But as you get higher up on the economic ladder, people are more concerned about the environment because they're no longer worried about subsistence living."

Environmentalists have also taken exception with the so-called side agreements, many of which were agreed upon to placate the same people. Many have said that the agreements "have no teeth," and will be easily side-stepped. Under most U.S. trade laws, only aggrieved industries or nations can institute complaints against U.S. trading partners. The NAFTA side agreements allow citizens and interest groups unprecedented access to dispute resolutions.

Expert environmental advice will be made available to any party requesting it, also laying the burden of proof on anyone challenging on environmental law, thus aiding efficiency. One can easily see that the arguments of environmentalists are not baseless, but are not particularly strong either.

On average, only 2 percent of expenses (among U.S. businesses,) go toward compliance with environmental regulation, although it is higher with some industries. To suggest that there will be a wholesale relocation of companies fleeing regulation in the U.S. is absurd. There has been nothing to stop them so far, and NAFTA will not make it any easier or appealing. NAFTA will allow economic growth to expand in Mexico, thus facilitating further environmental concern. This will be of importance, and to the betterment, to all three nations involved. Those unsure of their support for or against NAFTA should look past the hyperbole of environmental interest groups and examine concrete economic facts.

Student accuses university employees of sexual harassment

Yesterday I witnessed two glaring examples of not only poor behavior, but sexual harassment. Around 4:00 p.m. I went to the Grille for a bit of dinner. While standing in line waiting for my reprocessed chicken nuggets, a rather attractive young lady strolls into the food court. She was greeted by shouts of "Whoops, der it is" from behind the serving line. She smiled and ignored it. This my friends was inappropriate by any standard of measure.

Standing at the cash register, another Grille student employee was telling a patron how beautiful she was. She too ignored this behavior, in turn paid, and walked off. The young lady working at the second cash register was stuck there, she had no escape. Here again this was inappropriate behavior.

My point is simple, people come to the Grille to eat, not to be verbally accosted! As a longtime Conservative and member in good standing of Phi Beta Ditto, I have always held a somewhat tight definition of what sexual harassment is and how it could take place. These two young ladies should not have been forced to endure these assaults. Two of the student workers in the Grille changed my opinion yesterday. It's okay to tell a woman she is pretty, and I still believe that most women enjoy getting these compliments, but using the above methods to deliver them is by any definition, incorrect!

Confederate flag OK for home, not for courthouse

I feel compelled to enter the current campus debate over raising the Confederate flag at the Cannon County Courthouse, despite what represents to many its racist connotations. To me, all of the letters by your Southern native writers (some of which contained fine and noble points) have missed the most fundamental point: raising this flag specifically at the Courthouse is what would be so revolting to some of us, Southern and otherwise. While I believe in your right as an American to raise the Confederate flag on your property—or one that reads, "It's a black thing—you wouldn't understand"—to raise such a flag on the Courthouse is distinctly un-American.

Indeed, it is the legal sanctioning of such a flag that I cannot stand. Personal beliefs range from the utterly insane to the naive to the logically insupportable, and we all can choose to reject, entertain or even accept such beliefs. The point is, we do not give legal sanctity to them by raising them on government property, local, state or federal. We do not raise them in front of a building that symbolizes justice and equality for all.

Rather than get mired in the heat of certain cultural and regionally patriotic ideas, let us instead make and insist upon this fine but essential distinction: In our homes, any flag may reign supreme, but on our courthouse steps, let us pledge allegiance to the flag of the United States of America...with liberty and justice [toward] all.

years UMT football is nationally prominent, your degree will be worth more based on name recognition alone.

You see, MTSU's image is more important to its standing among this nation's universities than are its merits as an educational facility. You may not like it, but that's the way it is. If you wish to change society I suggest you take a long hard look at yourself first.

The Athletic Department and President Walker understand that a prominent I-A football program can do for this university and are acting accordingly. The university is exerting tremendous effort to get the community and student body behind the football program in anticipation of a move to I-A. This new focus is apparently resented by some students, but it truly is in the best interest of the student body.

The most serious charge leveled at MTSU athletics concerned preferential treatment of football players. This is not a charge that should be made lightly by someone who obviously knows little about Coach Donnelly's program. The NCAA takes such charges very seriously and can do, what is in some cases, irreparable damage to a football program with an investigation.

Sure, there are advantages to being a football player at MTSU. What one must consider is trade-offs players make to be part of the Blue Raider winning tradition.

Now what I know about football will fit in the navel of a flea, but I am certain that playing for Boots Donnelly is no bed of roses. Donnelly's is a very disciplined and demanding program and anyone who disagrees needs to strap on a helmet and try their hand at a week of practices.

Football players are students just like you. They sit next to you in class and worry about tests just like the rest of us. There are no prima donnas on Donnelly's team; no one is above the rules. The slightest infraction can get you kicked off the team in a heartbeat. I'm not talking about NCAA rules, either. I'm talking about guidelines much stricter. So strict, in fact, most of us would be hard pressed to abide by them.

Preferential treatment? Sounds more like a major sacrifice of independence to me. And except for a very few with the talent and good fortune to make it in the NFL, they leave the program with a degree and little else to show for hundreds of hours of hard work.

To top it off, MTSU's fourth ranked program represents a student body that, for the most part, could care less. There are probably more people walking around this campus with UT hats on than there were students at the Murray State game. The university and the community are working hard to get MTSU into I-A. The main beneficiaries of such a move will be students and alumni, but most of you don't appreciate that fact.

The question that needs to be asked isn't what the student body gives up to support athletics. It is: What will nationally recognized athletics do for the student body?

Some rules are made to be broken

DANIELA GOPPERT
Assistant Life! Editor

Joe is minding his own business — he's listening to some tunes while studying. Joe's never been easily distracted by music or any other kind of noise while studying, so he doesn't realize that he is bothering the resident next door with his loud music. As a matter of fact, he is not even aware that he is violating his housing contract. His resident assistant then comes to his room and gives him a residence violation notice, which is a formal reprimand.

Later, after reading a copy of his housing contract, he will realize that he should have been forewarned when he signed his contract.

But he really didn't think he was being too loud.

"The most difficult thing [on the contract] to enforce are the quiet hours, because noise is such a subjective thing," explained Bill Crum, hall director at Sims Hall.

"What might be a lot of noise to someone, may not be a whole lot of noise to someone else," added Crum. "Some people are used to studying with their television and radio both on. That may not be noise at all, to them."

Are students carefully reading their contracts?

"Most people don't even read their contract before they sign it," said Lisa Marie Pomfret, the first floor resident assistant at Deere Hall, when I brought up the subject of dorm rules and regulations.

Pomfret said one item in the contract that many students and especially freshmen are unaware of is that legally MTSU can make you pay the second semester of dorm fees whether or not you decide to live on campus. This is because you've signed a legal and binding contract which states that you plan to live on campus for both semesters.

There is also the 'No Pets' rule to argue about.

Now in dorms, this seems pretty reasonable. After all, there's a room made to consider and there is simply not enough space in that tiny room.

"I can understand about pets being illegal in the dorms, but family housing should have a different set of rules," said Stephanie Webb, a family housing resident.

There are several good reasons why Webb believes different rules should apply for family housing residents.

One is that the apartments are not carpeted and usually residents bring in their own furnishings and other personal belongings, so it's not as if any of housing's furnishings would be destroyed, she concluded. In a dorm room, by contrast, all the furniture is provided by housing so if the furniture was to be damaged by the resident or by a pet, the resident would be held responsible.

"How much damage could be made to concrete and linoleum?" asked Webb about keeping pets in family housing.

Webb finished by pointing out that there should be no problem keeping a pet on campus as long as the pet is a small housebroken animal, the owner walks it and the owner is responsible enough not to let the animal roam around campus. Unfortunately, the key phrase is "responsible owner."

Now we're down to what you can and can't have in a dorm room.

The biggest complaint I hear about is that extension cords are not allowed in dorm rooms, though most residents agree that they should be if they are plugged into a circuit breaker.

Elizabeth Bell, a former resident of Lyon Hall, emphasized the importance of circuit breakers. Bell states, "A circuit breaker saved my life when an old lamp almost blew up. I was sitting right beside it when it [the circuit breaker] cut off the power."

"I threw out the lamp immediately," she said.

"I understand about having to have circuit breakers for safety, but not being able to have extension cords is going overboard," Bell explained. Extension cords should be approved to be used "as long as they are hooked up to a circuit breaker."

Angie Poston, a resident at Deere Hall, had the same idea. "We should be able to have extension cords, but they should have to be plugged into outlet strips," she said.

Poston added that the reason so many residents would like to use extension cords is because the outlets in the rooms tend to be concentrated in one area, which creates problems when two people are trying to get ready in the mornings.

Richard Smith, Associate Director of Housing, said that the "no extension cord" rule was "strictly a matter of safety, because the circuit can still be overloaded."

One of the reasons that extension cords are banned is that we [housing] can't control what appliances the extension cords are being used for once they get into the rooms, said Ivan Shewmake, Director of Housing.

"If we have a rule that's not rational we check it out, because we are always looking to modify, as needed. We don't have rules simply for the sake of having rules," said Shewmake.

Residents seem to believe that the campus rules and regulations are pretty reasonable. I was not surprised to find many residents did, in fact, read their housing contracts before signing them.

Womyn's Political Action Group: not just man-bashing

CORRIE CRON
Features Writer

Mention "Womyn's Political Action Group," and some people picture women who claim to be so oppressed that they hate all men or others who are trying to deny their femininity.

Members of the campus Womyn's Political Action Group, however, are proving those people's views wrong.

Actually, the organization of students is concerned with raising public awareness about issues related to women. "Anything that is an issue, we want to bring it up," said Janice Duncan, one of the founding members. "We're not a male bashing group. We're a women's issues group."

The group is about three years old. During the fall 1990, Deborah Ray, who is now the club's president, and Duncan took a women's studies course and were prompted to action. Ray remembers a classmate saying, "We've sat around and complained. Now let's do something about it."

Since that time Ray and others have been raising awareness of issues such as the safety of women, opportunity for women and effects of sexism in everyday life.

Every other Thursday night, a group of about 10 to 12 students exchange ideas about what can be done to solve problems affecting students, such as no day care for children younger than 5 and no Raider Xpress for night students.

The group also makes plans to participate in events, rallies and fund-raisers in the community and across the nation that are of interest to women. For instance, group members are planning to attend "Take Back the Night," an international conference about campus violence against women.

Last year several members went to the pro-choice march in Washington, D.C. However, the group itself takes no political stance on issues. "The members of the group who wanted to go, we helped them go. We would've helped those who are pro-life as well," said Duncan.

The group's main thrust is urging people to vote and to be politically active no matter what position they take.

Ray said she has registered many voters. "I carry voter cards at every meeting," she said. At a previous meeting, members received telephone numbers of senator's offices that they could call in order to voice support for the appointment of new Surgeon General Jocelyn Elders.

Other group goals include another "Take Back the Night" Oct 8 in order to bring awareness to the fact that rape is a reality on every campus despite statistics. "There are many unreported rape cases," Ray said.

Group Vice President Debra Jackson said she wants to see all violence against women stopped. She said, "That includes sexual assault, rape, verbal assault and sexual harassment."

As far as the group's position years from

Charles Hogue /Staff

Brook Davenport (little girl) gets an early start in politics: while attending the women's political action meeting with her mother. Deborah Jackson in middle.

now, Ray said, "I'd like to see us have enough money so that everyone who wants to can attend conferences and events."

Duncan added that the group also wants to have more people of a wider variety involved. "I know we're missing opportunities because most of us have similar interests," she said.

The group members emphasized that men are not seen as the enemy. "We're not here to take power away from men," member Kim Smith said. "That's not the goal of our group."

In fact, members encourage men to join, and since the semester's beginning, four men have considered themselves members. "We don't live in a vacuum," Ray said. "Men need to be aware of these things as well as women."

the GOOD SON

Review by
DANIELA GOPPERT

Macaulay Culkin stars as Henry Evans in the thrilling new movie, "the Good Son."

Henry Evans (Macaulay Culkin) is a boy with secrets. On the surface he seems a bright child who is loving to his parents, protective of his sister and loyal to his friends. However, Henry has a deadly sense of play which would horrify those around him if they knew the thoughts he keeps hidden behind that angelic face.

But what an adult can not or will not see is often visible to another child. When Henry's cousin Mark Evans (Elijah Wood) comes to live with his relatives following the death of his mother, Mark quickly comes to learn that evil has many faces.

Will anyone believe him?

So begins the exhilarating thriller of Henry and Mark, which is definitely a movie to see.

"This movie is about two kids; one good, one bad," observes director Joseph Ruben. "But at its core, it's about evil; pure unexplainable evil. It's about evil in an unexpected place - inside a beautiful, charming twelve-year-old boy."

"When you're a kid one of your biggest worries is that you won't be believed. We take that worry to its extreme - Mark knows what Henry is up to, but no one will listen because what he's accusing Henry of is impossible to believe," adds Ruben.

Culkin's role in this movie and the way he handles it showed me his bright future in acting. His career will be based not simply on being cute, but on professional ability.

Watch out for Culkin and Wood in the future. They're definitely in the next generation of great actors.

Tigers tale could read trouble

Tennessee State has deceiving 0-3 mark going into Sunday showdown

TONY J. ARNOLD
Sports Editor

In each of the Raider's games this season, they've been able to gear themselves to stop either the run or pass. This weekend, they'll have to do both.

"This will be the best run and throw football team we've played so far, which will create our secondary a lot of problems" said MTSU head coach Boots Donnelly.

That team is Tennessee State, with whom the Raiders pair up against in a rare Sunday afternoon contest. Annually, the two squads butt heads to open the season. This year, in order for MTSU to play Division I-A Hawaii, the game had to be rescheduled. The game is played at Vanderbilt's Dudley Field because of the large crowds. Vandy hosts Auburn Saturday, therefore kick-off is slated at 3 p.m. Sunday.

Tennessee State comes into the game with an 0-3 mark, having lost to Grambling, Jackson State and Florida A&M. But records don't matter to Donnelly who is wary of his opponent.

"Personnel-wise, they have nine defensive starters back from a team that totally dominated us last year," Donnelly commented. "We've got seven brand new defensive football players and it takes a while for new starters to mold themselves together."

Annually, Middle has dominated the season match-up, winning the last six contests. However, the Raiders had to come back with a fourth quarter rally to defeat the Tigers last season 35-31.

"The game will likely come down to who makes the most mistakes," said Raider quarterback Kelly Holcomb. "We will prepare for it like it's any other game. We need to have a balanced attack and play error-free football."

The Raiders are coming off a strong performance against Murray State which Middle won 45-3.

The Raiders amassed 451 yards of total offense during that outing, while the defense gave up 239 yards.

Kippy Bayless, who currently leads the OVC in rushing, racked up 145 yards on 13 carries and two touchdowns - most of which came in the opening half. For his efforts, Bayless was rewarded with the OVC Player of the Week honor.

The Raiders also saw the return of Brigham Lyons, who with Bayless makes MTSU's backfield arguably one of the best in the nation. Lyons had 64 yards in his debut.

The big question mark will be Caneil Kimpson who will be starting at defensive guard on Sunday. He is replacing the injured Preston Sensabaugh who is out for at least a month with a knee injury.

Otherwise, MTSU enters the game without any serious injuries.

Tennessee State, which enjoyed an off week last week, enters the game ranking first in the league in passing and hungry for a win over MTSU.

"They should play extremely well and be excited about it being their conference opener," Donnelly said.

Tickets are available at the MTSU ticket office located of the upper level of Murphy Center. Students with a valid ID can purchase up to two for $6 each. Reserved seating is also available for $15.

Middle Tennessee vs Tennessee State

Kick-off: 3:00 p.m.
Site: Vanderbilt Stadium
How to get to Vandy

- 1) Take I-24 North to Nashville.
- 2) Get on I-440 like your going to Memphis.
- 3) Get off at either the 21st Avenue exit or at West End and go east.
- 4) Either way will take you by Vanderbilt and the stadium should be visible.

Ticket Information
Student's can purchase up to two tickets at $6 each with a valid ID. Reserved seats can be purchased at $15 each. Tickets can be bought at the MTSU athletic ticket office located on the upper level of Murphy Center.

Allison picks up the pace, gains two games

Even the perfect have off-weeks.

Such was the cry of Sidelines Sports Editor Tony Arnold who suffered through a 5-5 mark last week, allowing Joe T. Allison to pull within a game.

"I picked those games with my eyes closed," Arnold said. "I never really thought anyone would dare to try and compete with me. I guess I need to wake up and try a bit."

Allison's mark of 7-3 moved him into second as guest picker Steve Peterson went 5-5 as well.

Tripp Ballard is still treading water at the .500 mark with a 5-5 mark that brought his season total to 20-20 but Coley Jackson slipped with a 4-6 record.

"Well, I see some things don't change," Arnold commented. "Ballard and Jackson are back there where they belong. I wouldn't expect anyone with their IQ's to challenge a being like myself."

This week we feature the selections of Jim Horton.

Jim works in the Sports Information department here at MTSU has various duties. He'll be vying to beat the 7-3 mark which is the leading guest record to date this year. That was posted by both Dale Short and Jason Whatley.

The leading guest picker will return at the years end for a special bowl picks.

Lady Raiders enter home match with win streak

Things were beginning to look bleak last week for head volleyball coach Dianne Cummings after her team dropped its first 12 matches.

It wasn't as if the youthful Lady Raiders weren't in a position to win, the problem lied in their ability to close out a match.

Tuesday, all questions were put to rest as the Lady Raiders tasted victory for the first time humbling Tennessee State in three sets (15-2, 15-1, 15-5) Tuesday.

Anjanette Van Gotten led the attack with seven kills in 13 attempts. Setter Beck Tumblin also had an outstanding performance with 17 assists.

The Lady Raiders (1-12) return to action tonight when the team host OVC foe Austin Peay at 7 p.m. The match is free and will take place in the Alumni Gym.

Correction: In the Monday, Sept. 27 issue of Sidelines, some quotes were incorrectly credited to Crystal Crossman in the volleyball story. They were actually said by Krissi Van Schelven.

We are sorry for any inconvenience this has caused.

Raider tennis squads suffer from tough action

Both tennis squads were busy this past weekend, but in different locales. The women hosted 15 teams at the MTSU / Pepsi Fall Classic.

But things didn't exactly go well for the host.

"To be honest, the competition was a lot tougher than we expected," commented head coach Dale Short.

No Lady Raider won more than two matches. But the competition including nationally ranked teams like Kentucky and it was an educational experience.

"We didn't fare well as some, but we learned a lot about ourselves," Short said. "We have depth, but maybe too much balance."

The men had a disappointing weekend at the Southern Intercollegiate.

Top performances came from Patrick Zackrisson who made it to the quarterfinals of the 'A' Division, and Rob Williams, who played extremely well in the 'B' singles.

"We didn't play well, but that will improve," Short said. "(Shane) Scrutton (who is one of Middle's top players) was hurt and could barely move.

"I also think maybe after the way we dominated play in Jackson (last week) we got a little cocky and too high on ourselves."

The Lady Raiders will next hit the courts in Greenville, SC, at the Furman Fall Invitational Oct. 8-10.

Eight schools will be there including three each from the SEC and ACC, along with Furman and MTSU.

The men will also be out of town Oct. 8-10 at the University of Kentucky Fall Invitational. Several top 20 teams, as well as many Big 10 schools will be in attendance.

"The road doesn't get easier but its good for us to play against teams like these," Short said.
