More Construction

New business building is part of MTSU master plan

RUSTY GERBMAN
Assistant News Editor

Construction of a new $9 to 10 million business building could be underway by fall.

This new building will be in the neighborhood of 95,000 square feet, said Charles Pigg, director of campus planning. The building itself has already been agreed to by Tennessee Board of Regents' Chancellor Otis Floyd.

"We have it in the budget for July 1," Floyd said.

He said that the TBR has a capital outlay plan which is a special allocation for buildings. Waiting for the business building to be completely introduced by the master plan would have meant the TBR would not have enough money to start immediately.

"You get more bang for the buck," Pigg said. "It (the new building) gives use more space and at the same time frees up more space at the existing building."

This is only one of the reasons why the building is such a part of the master plan, said Barbara Haskew, dean of business.

Also, the correct site for the new building will be very important to the complete outlook or layout of the campus.

She noted that the business school is one of the largest schools in the university in terms of majors and minors. With this in mind, the new building will be one of the primary focal points on the campus, so the site of the building will be very important.

"The new building will also house the aerospace program," Haskew said.

Haskew said that the new building will have to have a sizeable computer lab to be able to offer an up-to-date program. The current business building, Kirksey Old Main, has no student or faculty lounges and no seminar rooms.

"We have no space for any kind of meetings," Haskew said. "We are really excited about the new building."

Five of six students: money first priority

(CPS) A majority of students at five out of six colleges said salary was their number one priority when choosing a job, a new survey has found.

Most students—63 percent of those asked in the Coors Light College Survey released Jan. 10—said the most important factor in deciding whether to take a job was salary.

Moreover, 74 percent of the students expect of make between $20,000 and $50,000 per year in their first job out college.

In Coors' survey last year, students ranked the potential for advancement and responsibility as more important than salary.

"Given today's economic outlook, students may feel that salary is now a more important consideration," speculated Bob McBride, Coors Light brand director.

"Everyone I've ever known says money" is the most important consideration, agreed Jennifer Karas, a senior at Colorado State University.

Yet Colorado State was the only school surveyed where a majority of students didn't choose salary as a top priority.

Instead, 63 percent chose geographic location as their top consideration.

"It must be Colorado," Karas said of her schoolmates' choice. "Everyone chooses to stay (in the state)."

Among all the students who responded, "potential for advancement" was the second most important job consideration, followed by geographic location, benefits, flexibility, responsibility and getting a "foot in the door."

A survey released in June by Right Associates found that salary was not the primary factor in students' choice of careers.

In the survey, 67.3 percent said their own interests and skills were the primary reasons for their career choice.

The six colleges represented in the Coors survey were Colorado State, Memphis State and Ohio State universities, the universities of Connecticut and Texas and California State University in Sacramento.

Among the Coors Survey's other findings:

—Eighty-one percent of students surveyed plan to marry. Of those, 85 percent plan to stay married.

—Fifty-five percent are currently involved in a serious relationship. Sixty-six percent of the people in a relationship are "very happy" with it.

Roommates stick together: Kathy Paschall and Orinda Toney pose with their awards from the Clemson Open Forensics Tournament held at Clemson University. The awards were given for after-dinner speaking, poetry interpretation, and impromptu storytelling. The trophies are on display in Room 205 of the Boutwell Dramatic Arts Building.

Roommates win debate trophies

JASON HUNT
News Editor

Two MTSU roommates won trophies in the Clemson Open Forensics Tournament held at Clemson University Jan. 25-27.

Kathy Paschall, a senior majoring in speech, took first place in three events: after-dinner speaking, poetry interpretation and impromptu speaking.

Orinda Toney, a sophomore majoring in speech correction, placed sixth in impromptu storytelling.

"It was great for me," Paschall said Tuesday. "I've been in forensics for a long time and won a lot of awards, but never a first place."

"That was my goal for the year."

The sixth-place trophy is Toney's first award at the college level.

"Impromptu storytelling is Orinda's favorite event, but it is not one of the ten standard events in a forensics tournament," Paschall said. "Clemson is one of the few schools that have it."

According to Paschall, Toney did not know until just before the event that she would be competing.

"She was a last-minute entry," Paschall said.

The 10-member MTSU Forensics Team is directed by Dr. D. Kirkland and Dr. Peg McCree.

The team is made up of students with a variety of interests, Kirkland said.

"Some are interested in current events, some in law, and some in criminal justice," she said. "Some participated in debate in high school."

The trophies are on display in Room 205 of the Boutwell Dramatic Arts building.

Clarification

Suma Clark requested the following clarification of our Jan. 24th student directory story:

The publications office received the student directory information from the housing office on Sept. 19, last semester.

On Sept. 27, they sent the typeset material to the printer.

Clark wanted to make it clear that the publications office had completed its work in time for student directories to appear.

Black History Month: something for all

February is Black History Month, and there are plenty of opportunities available that you as a student can participate in.

"Big Ten", performed by the Blues City Cultural Center of Memphis, is a play about a professional football player who is injured and subsequently loses his career. This is something that can happen to any football player, black or white. All of us could learn from this drama about diminished dreams.

The Pin Points Theatre Group, from Washington, D.C., will perform "1,001 Black Inventions," dramatizing the many contributions that black inventors have made throughout history. Technical advances in fields such as medicine could not have been made possible if not for these pioneers. This play could enlighten and even surprise you.

For intellectual food, The Great Debate will be held in the LRC. Entitled "Malcolm X or Martin Luther King—Philosophies in Conflict", the debate compares and contrasts these great men's theories. Once again, this event can prove very educational for everyone. Many public schools never discussed Malcolm X or his theories, and this would be a good way to find out what you missed out on.

Other events celebrating Black History Month include a special lecture by Dr. Raymond Winbush, provost/vice president of Vanderbilt University in the Davis Science building, a special entitled "African-Americans in the Military: Past, Present and Future" with Col. Cecil Calloway and Sgt. Robert Beverly moderating, and a lecture, "The Mother of Mankind," as the grand finale.

Special classes will also be offered during the day, with such topics as African-Americans in Criminal Justice, the Harlem Renaissance, Stereotypes Through Voice Qualities, African-Americans in Psychology, and Interpretation of Black Heritage. These classes will be offered at various times during the week of Feb. 18.

It has been said that knowledge is the key to understanding. Taking advantage of these opportunities can widen your perspective, increase your knowledge and help understand your fellow man better.

Letters to the Editor

Support the troops

To the Editor:

I believe that we should all show our support for our soldiers overseas. It's true that this money could be spent on something other than war, but what kind of people are we if we espouse the ideas of freedom while watching Kuwait being oppressed and raped by Iraq? Kuwait is suffering from atrocities we can scarcely imagine in our civilized world. Should they suffer anymore because some Americans feel this war is causing an inconvenience in their lives? Let's face it—Saddam Hussein would not stop with the invasion of Kuwait anymore than Hitler stopped after annexing Austria. I feel for all families who will lose their loved ones to this war, but what about the Kuwaitis who lost their lives at the hand of Saddam Hussein? Should they be swept under the rug and forgotten? I hope this war ends soon, but until it does, Americans should unite and stand behind our soldiers and the President.

Parking prob due to laziness

To the Editor:

I would like to address the ongoing problem about parking. First, I believe that all parking within the center of campus should cease leaving only the faculty lots. This will alleviate congestion on the streets so pedestrians will not have to fear being struck by a car. Furthermore, biking can be encouraged in a more safe environment. As for parking, my opinion is probably of the minority. It is my view that people are generally too lazy to spend an extra seven minutes to simply walk from their car to class. The distance from the furthest parking space in the Greenland parking lot to the furthest building (Cope Administration) is less than ten minutes doing a comfortable walking pace. I noticed last fall that parking in the Greenland lot and other perimeter lots were adequate. The fact is that parking will always be a problem as long as there are select spaces within the center proximity of campus. As for the previous complaint suggesting that faculty members should compete equally for spaces with students, I find this absurd. After all, students only have to endure this problem for four or five years and not for the rest of their careers.

I encourage everyone to better themselves and our environment by walking or biking to class. No one wants to admit that we are too lazy to walk. Perhaps our attitude is an inevitable consequence of enjoying our technological conveniences. There are more benefits than we realize if we take a more selfless view toward this parking problem. Actually, this answer will help not only ourselves by improving our physical and mental well-being, but also conserves our resources. Environmental pollution will continue to be a problem if we are not willing to change. Furthermore, this solution wastes no money or land. So let's make a resolution and not a revolution against ourselves and our precious environment.

Black History Month

Educating America: toward workforce 2000

Guest speakers, plays and a debate are some of the highlights of this year's Black History Month celebration on campus.

February is recognized as Black History Month across the nation.

"We are looking forward to African-American Black History Month here at MTSU with great anticipation," said Erice Doss, chair, Black History Month planning committee.

"The notion that Black History Month is only for African Americans is a myth. With campus and community support, this year's Black History month will be a cultural and educational awakening for the MTSU community at large."

The month gets off to a theatrical start with the performance of two plays. "Big Ten" is the story of how a football star deals with life after a disabling injury. The play kicks off the month Friday at 7:30 p.m., in the Boutwell Dramatic Arts Building's Tucker Theatre.

"1,001 Black Inventions" is set for Monday at 7 p.m. in the Wright Music Building. The play points out the many accomplishments of blacks in history from a dramatic and comical point of view. The play is performed by the award-winning theatre company, Pin Points.

MTSU's Housing Office is sponsoring a bulletin board contest for the dormitories relating to the month's theme of "Education America." The winner will be announced on Feb. 12, said Ralph Metcalf, director of the Minority Affairs Office.

Housing will sponsor the movie "Glory" which will be shown at 6 p.m. Feb. 12 in the lobby of Corlew Hall. A discussion session will follow, Metcalf added.

The ROTC department will sponsor a reception and presentation at 11 a.m. on Feb. 14 on "African-Americans and the Defense of our Nation," Metcalf said. This presentation will also honor the men now serving in Saudi Arabia, he added.

And the Baptist Student Union will sponsor a "Race Relations Day" on Feb. 17, Metcalf said.

Some of the speakers scheduled during the month are:

*Patricia Russell-McCloud, president of Russell-McCloud and Associates, a motivational speaking and training professional association, based in Atlanta, Ga. She is a graduate of Howard University Law School and served as chief, Complaints Branch, Broadcast Bureau and senior managing attorney for the Federal Communications Commission, Washington, D.C. She is also certified to practice before the U.S. Supreme Court, District of Columbia and the Indiana Bar Association. She will be on campus Feb. 13, 7:30 p.m., in the Tennessee Room of the James Union Building.

*Asa Hilliard III, the Fuller and Callaway professor of urban education, department of educational foundations, counseling and psychological services, and early childhood education at Georgia State University in Atlanta. He is a reviewer for The Georgia Educational Research Journal of Teacher Education and Educational Studies. He is the current director of the Historical Research Project on "Indigenous African Education from Ancient Times to the Present and has served as project director for several inner-city development projects. Hilliard will lecture in the Wright Music Building, Feb. 27, at 7:30 p.m.

The Great Debate, Feb. 19, at 7:30 p.m., in the LRC's Multi-Media Room will be conducted by Andrew Jackson, Tennessee State University department of sociology. The topic is "Social Change from the Perspectives of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. and Malcolm X."

The week of Feb. 18 focuses on African-Americans in the curriculum. A number of MTSU professors will address accomplishments of African-Americans in their academic disciplines.

For more information on other events scheduled throughout the month, contact Erice Doss, MTSU Department of Psychology, at 898-2188, or Ralph Metcalf, director, Office of Minority Affairs, at 898-2987.

The Great Debate

King, Malcolm X perspectives differ

LUCAS JOHNSON
Special to Sidelines

The scene is the early '60s. From the Southern part of America comes a voice crying freedom, but whose tone is that of nonviolence — "peacefulness, togetherness and patience," he says.

Yet, in another part of the nation there is likewise a voice crying out for freedom, but his tone is much more aggressive and less peaceful.

"By any means necessary," is what he says.

Today, in the '90s, the philosophies of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. and Malcolm X are still remembered and practiced. However, as in the '60s, blacks today are deciding on which philosophy to follow. They ponder over which philosophy will help them forge into reality their dreams, in a society that they claim still treats them unequally.

Which philosophy is most effective for them, or does it matter?

"I favor the philosophy of Malcolm X because of his directness," said Anthony Coleman, a sophomore here at MTSU. "I feel that in order to get things accomplished in today's society, we need to show more aggressiveness rather than passiveness."

However, Tina Shaw, a senior, thought differently.

"I prefer Dr. King's philosophy. In this time of war and mental suffering we need a peaceable philosophy in our society. And indeed, Dr. King's philosophy of peace and nonviolence definitely embodies the type of atmosphere we should each try to create."

"Peacefulness, togetherness, and patience"
"By any means necessary"
Malcolm X

Likewise, Monique Reeves, a junior, said that she would chose the philosophy of Dr. King because in a sense it tried to pull 'all' people together on one accord.

"His philosophy was appreciated by not just black people, but white people as well. Therefore, by not being radical or violent, he was able to promote a better sense of understanding in all people. I think this concept is very important in today's society," Reeves said.

However, some students compromise and incorporate the philosophies of both men in their day to day lives, like senior Kelvin Wyatt.

"I cannot really pick one over the other without first trying to share them. They both wanted the same thing, which was to achieve equality, but they each just used different means.

"Because of their similar objectives, I must say that I respect both of their philosophies," Wyatt said.

Big 10 - see it!!

All-American quarterback Barry Turner is hit with a disabling injury. He loses his scholarship to a Big 10 university and has to come home, his chance at pro football stardom gone.

He is tempted by the big money in drugs. His family offers him the church. Friends, family, everyone offers him a choice but how can any of it equal what he has lost?

This is a unique and effective drama. Make reservations today to see this touching drama. Friday, 7:30 p.m., Tucker Theatre, Boutwell Dramatic Arts.

Afro-American cultural conference set at TSU

Nashville's award-winning local conference on Afro-American Culture and History will be held Feb. 13 at the Avon N. Williams Jr., downtown campus of Tennessee State University, 10th and Charlotte.

The American Association for State and Local History awarded the conference a Certificate of Commendation at its annual meeting in Washington, D.C., in September. The Afro-American Conference was the only project in Tennessee to receive an award this year.

Sponsored by the Historical Commission and the College of Arts and Sciences at TSU, the one-day event brings together historians, students, educators and all people interested in the contributions of African Americans to the culture and history of Middle Tennessee. Hours are 8:30 a.m. until 3:30 p.m. Registration is $6 ($5 for senior citizens, $4 for students) which includes lunch and publications.

For more information, call 862-7970.

New comedy a hit

If you want entertainment, Woody Allen's new film Alice will definitely keep you laughing.

This contemporary comedy stars Mia Farrow as Alice. She is the wife of a very wealthy man (William Hurt) and the mother of two children.

At the beginning of the movie, Alice is unsure of her happiness and begins her journey of self discovery. As Alice tries to "discover herself", she goes through an extraordinary series of experiences.

STEPHANIE DOCKERY Movie Review

Due to back trouble, Alice goes to see a Dr. Yang (Keye Luke). Yang detects Alice's unhappiness. He tells her that the trouble is not in her back, but that it is in her heart and mind.

To cure her problem, the doctor gives Alice some herbs to drink which have affects that cause her to get into some amusing situations.

While under the influence of the herbs, Alice meets a man (Joe Mantegna) that she becomes infatuated with. Aware of Alice's feelings, the man invites her to spend some time with him. Suddenly, Alice is faced with a dilemma: does she follow her feelings of infatuation or does she remain faithful to her husband?

The film continues and so does the humor. Talented actresses such as Cybil Shepherd and Bernadette Peters also appear later on in the movie.

The realistic problems of Alice will probably draw people to the new film. It is a movie the audience can relate to. Funny and captivating, Alice is truly an enjoyable, worthwhile movie.

HERBS FOR MEDICINE: Alice (Mia Farrow) and Dr. Yang (Keye Luke) discuss Alice's illness in Woody Allen's latest comedy "Alice." In the scene above, Dr. Yang prescribes herbs to cure her back problems.

Event benefits Heart Association

Do you like to dance? Are you concerned with your health?

If you answered 'yes,' then the Fourth Annual Dance for Heart Benefit may be just for you.

Volunteers from all over Rutherford County will participate in the event which has been scheduled for Saturday, February 16 from 9-11 a.m. in the Alumni Gym.

This two hour aerobic dance is sponsored by area business and Chi Omega to raise funds for the American Heart Association's programs of cardiovascular research and education.

The event is part of a nationwide effort to fight Heart disease and stroke. The dancers who participate will collect money from friends, relatives, and co-workers for the event. Each dancer will be able to win prizes based on the amount of donations collected.

Dance for Heart demonstrates how dance-exercise can benefit cardiovascular health and AHA.

"Dance-exercise is a popular activity because it emphasizes fun and fitness. Participation is not limited by age, sex, or shape, so anyone can try it," explains Karen Millar, local Dance for Heart coordinator.

"Through Dance for Heart, we have the opportunity to help fight against heart and blood vessel diseases, as well as show that dance-exercise is fun, easy and heart-healthy," she adds.

Sponsorship forms for those interested can be obtained from Chi Omega, Sportscom, PACE, Smyrna Town Club, Theracare, Courtsouth, and First Tennessee Bank, Main Office.

Raiders get physical, muscle TSU around

Middle Tennessee continued its recent domination of Tennessee State by whipping the Raiders 92-80 at Monte Hale Arena Monday night.

The Raiders raced to a 16-0 advantage while holding the Tigers scoreless over the first five minutes of the game.

Robert "Cat-Eye" Taylor led the Raider scoring spree as he sandwiched a lay-up between two long-range three-point field goals for eight quick points. Super Sophomore Warren Kidd dominated the paint, intimidating the Tiger players, while blocking four of their 35 first-half field goal attempts.

The Tigers responded quickly as league-scoring leader J.J. Eubanks came off the bench to score five points. The Tigers' next 10 points cut the Raider lead to 16-5.

MTSU maintained a steady 10-point lead as senior Chris Ingram, along with Taylor and Kidd, continued to thwart a Tiger effort to keep the game close.

"We had a very balanced attack," said Raider head coach Bruce Stewart. "Kidd dominated the middle and Taylor did a good job on the perimeter."

The Raiders saw nine players score in the first half, with Taylor leading the way with 14, Ingram and Kidd tossing in 10 while pulling down an incredible 11 first-half rebounds to go with four spectacular blocks. Junior college transfer Greg Christian ran the Raiders' show with seven assists and no first-half turnovers.

"I thought Greg did a really good job running the offense," Stewart later commented. "He kept his head up and I think he runs the break as well as any guard we have on the team."

MTSU continued to build its defensive reputation as the Raiders held the Tigers to a 28 percent field goal shooting performance while out-rebounding the Tigers 32-23. MTSU held a 46-33 lead at intermission.

The Raiders maintained their 13-point advantage until the 16:15 mark, when TSU's Kevin Howard and Brian Coffee decided to make the game more interesting.

The Tigers went on a 9-0 run cutting the Raider lead to five. Eubanks drilled a three-pointer with 12:45 remaining to cut the Raider lead to four, 57-53.

MTSU's Kidd promptly took a return pass from Kelvin Hammonds and jammed it home, at the 10:43 mark, to increase the Raider advantage to seven at 61-54.

"We've had trouble putting teams away all year," said Kidd. "I said to myself, oh no, not again."

TSU refused to fold as Eubanks, who was held to seven first-half points, picked up the pace and

THE PIPE: MTSU senior Pippa Gibson attempts to put in the lead goal in the Lady Raiders 77-67 win Monday. Gibson scored 20 points and grabbed seven rebounds in her starting role. Capley leads MTSU back into OVC race

TONY J. ARNOLD
Sports Editor

There's something special about playing Tennessee State for MTSU senior Stephanie Capley.

Although she doesn't quite know what it is, she has concluded that she always has a great game against the Lady Tigers. That streak was extended Monday night as the Lady Raiders downed TSU 77-67.

"It seems I always play better against them," Capley said. "I scored my career high against them my freshman year."

That high was a 34-point performance and although she didn't equal that total Monday, she managed to toss in 21, including some crucial buckets at crunch time.

The biggest shot came with 3:12 remaining in the game. TSU had just sliced the Raiders' lead to six and was in the midst of a 6-0 run. It appeared that the Tigers might overcome the deficit when Capley calmly stepped beyond the bonus arch and buried a back-breaking 3-pointer.

"I was unconscious," Capley said jokingly. "Sometimes you feel like you got it and sometimes you don't. I just felt confident tonight."

Not only did Capley finish off the Tigers, she got the ball rolling early in the contest.

TSU scored the opening bucket but Capley answered with a trey at the other end to give MTSU a lead it would never relinquish.

Less than three minutes later, the senior knocked in another 3-pointer and started working on her duties inside as well to pace the team with 12 first-half points and push them out to a 42-31 halftime lead.

"It wasn't a work of art," head coach Lewis Bivens said. "But we handled the ball a lot better and got the ball inside."

"I was pleased with our execution and thought we had good shot selection."

The second half resembled the first as Priscilla Robinson and Pippa Gibson combined with Capley to dominate the inside.

The trio's efforts accounted for 27 of the Lady Raiders' 35 second-half points on the way to

RAIDER NOTES

FOOTBALL: MTSU's football program got a shot in the arm this week when they learned about the recruits that verbally committed to the program.

Two Lincoln County stars announced that they will sign with the squad next week. These are quarterback Kelly Holcomb and tailback Rod Buchanan.

Both players were instrumental in leading their high school squad to the state championship this year.

TENNIS: The men's tennis team will return to action this weekend when they visit two southern states.

Friday, the squad will visit Atlanta, Georgia and face Southern Alabama.

Saturday, they will face a tough Georgia Tech team. The Raiders nipped the Yellowjackets earlier in the year at the O'Charleys Classic in Knoxville.

On Sunday, they will be in action against the University of Alabama Crimson Tide in Tuscaloosa, Ala.

MTSU rallies to win

TONY J. ARNOLD

Murphy Center literally clicked Wednesday night when South Carolina State came calling.

It was "clicker" night and all 2,000 fans were making some noise. Luckily, MTSU did the same in the second half of the contest and overcame a nine point halftime deficit to pull off a 81-63 victory. The Bulldogs had handed MTSU its first defeat earlier in the season.

"We were awfully sluggish to start off with," head coach Bruce Stewart explained. "The first half was one of our worst but we were able to turn things around in the second and I think it was one of our better half's this year."

The Raiders did indeed start off slow as they fell behind to the Bulldogs 16-8 in the opening five minutes.

Each time the Big Blue would make a charge, South Carolina was able to hold them off and cushion their lead. It didn't hurt matters that the Bulldogs attempted 20 first half free throws and knocked down 18. Finally, the whistles stopped blowing and the half ended with MTSU trailing 41-32.

However, the referees got back their wind and got jolly with their plastic pieces again in the second half. But despite SCS's 24 second half free throw attempts, MTSU's defense proved to be too strong and the offense started grinding the Bulldogs up.

SCS only managed to hit 5-of-28 shots in the half (18 percent) and could only connect on 12 of their charity attempts.

MTSU, on the other hand, found its groove as Kelvin Hammonds started cranking from the outside and Warren Kidd did his usual duties from the inside.

The Raiders took their first lead when Hammonds nailed his second straight trey attempt at the 15:14 mark to make the score 46-45.

Kidd would later put together a string of eight straight points to give MTSU the comfortable edge and the defense finished off the kill.

"I was proud of our effort," Stewart said. "It was our second half defense that won us the game. Our guys held their ground and just went toe to toe with them tonight."

The defense only allowed the Bulldogs to get two field goals in the final 11 minutes of the game. SCS's only other points came from the free throw line.

Kidd led the Raiders with 19 points and he pulled down a game-high 15 rebounds. Hammonds finished with 12.

MTSU (13-6) will now head south for a few days. The Raiders will find themselves in Miami, Fla. Saturday when they play Florida International. Tip-off is slated for 6:30 (CST).

Capley

the win.

"Priscilla Robinson, Stephanie Capley and Pippa

Gibson had another good game and did the job," Bivens said. "We hung in there tonight and did what we had to do."

Another bright spot in the victory included the return of the guard play.

After having trouble with poor shooting and numerous turnovers in recent contests, Lady Raider elite were able to push the ball up the floor and the jumpers or dump it off in with relative ease compared to past.

"We shot the ball fairly well from the perimeter tonight," Bivens said. "We still had several turnovers but we also had assists and that's a good sign."

A most impressive performance was turned in by point guard Mary Smith. The transfer dished off 11 assists, three short of an MTSU record and poured in 10 points, coming from 3-pointers.

Other double figure performers included Robinson with 19 and Gibson who tallied 10.

The victory raised the Lady Raiders' record to 9-10 overall but more importantly 4-2 in OVC and the mid-conference season mark.

MTSU's only OVC loss have come at the hands of Eastern Kentucky and Tennessee Tech. EKVU will visit Murphy Center later in the year but MTSU will have to travel to Tech. The Raiders will also find themselves on the opponents' courts five times compared to two home games.

"This was an impressive home win," Bivens said. "We're in good shape as we head out the road."

The Lady Raiders will return to action until Wednesday evening next week when they will be Vanderbilt at 7:00 p.m.

scored 17 in the second half to finish with 24. It was not enough as MTSU's candidate for freshman-of-the year Jeff Clifton scored 14 second-half points to offset Eubanks' performance, giving the Raiders a well deserved victory.

"We've got our work cut out for us in the second go-round," Stewart commented. "We have some young players and now they know what it is all about. If we forget about old news and make some new news we'll roll down the stretch with some momentum. I think this team is going to grow and our confidence is getting stronger. I'm really pleased and excited with this squad."

The Raiders saw four starters reach double figures as Taylor led the way with 19 points, followed by the scoring tandem of Ingram and Clifton, who tossed in 16 points apiece. Kidd tallied 15 points.

More Than Piggy Can Bear

By the year 2006, the cost of a four-year college education could be nearly $148,000 — way beyond the capacity of most people's piggy bank! Face that staggering statistic now by starting your child's education fund with U.S. Savings Bonds. Bonds pay competitive interest rates and are exempt from state and local income taxes. The Federal income tax liability on bond earnings can be deferred and, for some families, may be completely eliminated when the proceeds are used for qualified education expenses. Ask about the new Education Bond Program that applies to bonds purchased after January 1, 1990*.
