Vice president search under way

RICK JENNINGS
News Editor

University President James Walker is interviewing three candidates for the vice president of Development and University Relations position.

Dr. Walker previously interviewed three candidates, and this week one of them will be returning along with two new prospects.

The new vice president will receive between $60,000 and $70,000, Walker said.

"These kinds of people generally run about $120,000 per year," Walker said. "I would like that kind of person that would generate $10 million a year, but I don't have $120,000 to pay them."

"Among the three (candidates) one is from Pennsylvania, one North Carolina, and one from an Ivy League New York school. One is female and the other two are male" said Daniel F. Parker, vice president of A.T. Kearney, Inc., an Atlanta based firm conducting the search.

"No one that I know has applied from inside the (MTSU) organization," Walker said. "What I'm doing right now is my job and that vice president job as well. I'm filling all those responsibilities and meeting with the staff in that area. That position has, for all practical purposes, been vacant since July 1, and I will be very relieved to get someone."

"Although it's a new title, it's not a new position," he said. "The title was vice president for Administration. Some responsibilities were moved and some were added. I think bringing those offices together is the right mix for the kinds of things that we want to do in the areas of Development and University Relations."

"We contacted over 400 people and over 65 expressed interest. Due to Dr. Walker, as well as the growth and quality of MTSU, there was no shortage of candidates," Parker said.

"This university has grown by leaps and bounds," Walker said, "and we've reached the level where we've got to start thinking about how we do things and the kind of image we put out to the public. The time is right for us to really move in that area and to do the kinds of things that need to be done."

"I expect the person to provide the leadership, knowledge and skills necessary to make sure that we as a university continue to move forward," he said.

Walker said he is looking for a current assistant or associate

Cheerleaders will go

SAM GANNON
Assistant News Editor

Middle Tennessee State's football cheerleaders will be able to travel to three of the school's five out-of-state games, a university administrator has said.

Dean of Students Paul Cantrell, who supervises the cheerleaders, said he was notified Monday afternoon about the matter.

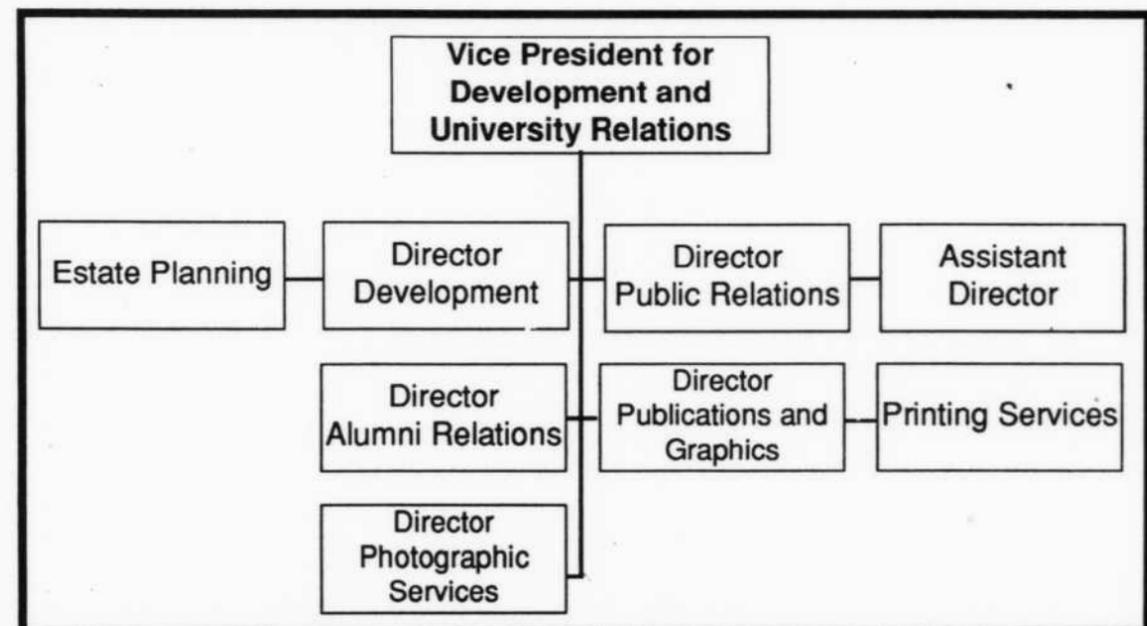

The decision about the cheerleaders was left to MTSU President James Walker. "We now have approval for three out-of-state games," Cantrell said.

Walker's decision came shortly after the University of Tennessee's first game last Thursday in which the school's cheerleaders did travel out-of-state. That may have set the tone for other state funded schools such as MTSU.

The games to be attended by the cheerleaders are close to be decided.

vice president who "has been very successful at what they are doing and is now ready to move to the next level and run their own shop as a vice president."

Walker also said that "With luck I'll be able to keep him/her for five or six years until someone steals them away for about $120,000 to $130,000, if they are any good."

As far as the vice president position, research sources say that recent shifts in higher education administration normally pay close to $100,000 for a position like that.

The big dollars and high tech requirements help justify using an outside company for a search such as this one, Walker said.

"It is becoming more common in searches at this level to find a company that will give you the expertise necessary to find the kind of person you really want," he said. "I'm using a search committee. The only thing I'm not cumbering the committee with is going out and reading and calling. They are doing the interviewing."

Research firms such as AT Kearney are "working well as a very productive method to find the right person to fit with the right job," he said.

"I've found it to be much more productive," he said, "but we do it very rarely. This is the second time we've used a search firm. MTSU previously used AT Kearney as a search firm for an MTSU Chair of (MGF?) Excellence."

Because of the success of the first search, the AT Kearney firm was recommended by the Chancellor and the Tennessee Board of Regents for considerations for the current search.

Cantrell said about the cheerleaders. "They seem to be really pleased."

The university student publications also will be able to travel to the out-of-state games so that the Midlander and Sidelines can provide coverage.

Decisions about other school-related out-of-state travel have not been made.

26 out of 26 nursing graduates pass national licensing exam

GREG ADKINS
Editor

All of Middle Tennessee State's nursing graduates passed the National Licensing Exam on their first attempt.

The 26-student class, which took the exam after graduation is May, is the second four-year class that has passed the boards on the first meeting. The class is the second four-year nursing class to graduate.

"We're very proud," said Mary Brewer, instructor of last semester's nursing students. "Everybody has contributed to the students' success."

"We have good leadership," Brewer said. "I don't see why we can't continue to succeed."

According to Brewer, the nursing department uses a continuous review of the teaching materials to ensure that students receive fresh, quality instruction. The department also follows a strict set of guidelines set by the National League of Nurses.

"It's mainly because the students and the faculty worked hard," said Judith Wakim, chairman of the nursing department.

Wakim said there were only two years between 1982 and 1990 when the program did not have a 100 percent pass rate. Since the associate program began in 1968, there was one year when the program had a 87 percent passing rate. Every other year 90 percent or more have passed.

Nursing students take the exam after graduation to receive legal license to practice, Wakim said.

"I think it is an indication of the outstanding quality of our nursing program," said Robert Jones, associate vice president for Academic Affairs. "They are maintaining the standards set by the original two-year program."

ARMS's purpose is to give students a feel of what the music

Students vote on name change

On Wednesday students will vote on changing the name of the Associated Student Body to Student Government Association (SGA).

The main reason for changing the name is that Middle Tennessee State University is the only school in the state Board of Regents that calls the student government ASB instead of SGA.

"Many freshman and new students don't associate the name ASB with the student government," said Shawn Burgess, ASB president.

Changing the name would increase student participation, he said, because they would clearly know where to bring their problems and ideas.

Students will also be voting to keep the ASB activity fee.

"These funds are essential to

ARM's agenda for this fall begins Sept. 29-30 with the TJ Martell Foundation Benefit for Leukemia, Cancer, and AIDS held in Nashville.

Tentative dates for the spring 1992 may include the National Association of Recording Merchandisers (NARM), and the famous country radio seminar in Nashville.

student organizations in carrying our various activities that affect the student body," Burgess said. "These activities include the Mr/Mrs MTSU pageants, state and local conferences and student scholarships to name a few."

To vote on these issues, students should go to the Keathley University Center from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. or Peck Hall from 8:30 a.m. to 6:15 p.m.

Smoking policy all bark, no bite

Is the university serious about their new smoking policy or are they just blowing smoke?

The policy, which was approved last month, bans smoking in most university buildings except in designated areas. These areas include all first floor bathrooms and private offices with department approval.

One needs only to walk through Peck Hall to realize that the new policy has had no effect. The reason for this is simple—very few smokers are aware of the change, and those who are aware of it don't seem to be concerned about it.

Any policy enacted without notification is meaningless. Unless people are informed, change will not occur. Posted notices and "No Smoking" signs in the affected areas are necessary if the new policy is going to succeed.

Any regulation without enforcement is powerless. What will be the consequences of non-compliance? Who will enforce the policy? Will it be left up to the individual student to report those who do not smoke by the rules?

The result of the policy's weak implementation is predictable. With the lack of information and enforcement, the new rule is viewed as little more than a well-intentioned "please don't" and is being treated as such.

Whether you believe the policy is right or wrong, you expect consistency from the school. Smokers need to know about the guidelines and non-smokers deserve for the rule to be followed.

As it stands, the new policy is similar to tossing a thimble-full of water on a raging fire - it's a nice gesture, but it's simply not enough and only creates more smoke.

Letters to the Editor

Traditional student strikes back

Dear Miss Greenbank,

I found your column in Sidelines both offensive and frightening. To begin with, your references to traditional students are demeaning and erroneous. I, like many of my friends, share the cost for college with my parents or pay for it myself. I'm sure you'll find that more than one or two shop at Wal-Mart on occasion, BECAUSE WE CAN'T AFFORD TO GO MALL-HOPPING. The liquor store comment is unnecessary and shows your obvious prejudice against people under the age of 50 having the right to consume.

Now to the frightening part. You are picking out a group of students (18-23) and treating them as if they were children. Many of those you see sleeping in class are doing so because your wonderful federal government has cut their financial aid forcing them to work nights. This idea of further taxing college students is ludicrous. What you support, Miss Greenbank, is against the Constitution. Singling out one group of America's population and forcing them to submit to higher taxation simply because they are college students is against everything our boys (mostly college age males) went to Saudi Arabia for. Your "pleasure policy" smacks of high school teachers' regulation. C'mon dude, like give us a chance to ride some really gnarly waves before we have to ride a steady job. I don't want "Mom" watching over me again. By the way, for those "non-trationals" who don't understand my "collegese," it means, "Let me have some fun while I'm still young."

Traditional and proud of it,
Chris Trout

Non-smokers targets of discrimination?

Dear Editor,

At last, students and faculty will be able to breathe fresh air, enjoy a cleaner campus and perhaps face a reduced risk of fire on campus. That is, these privileges were officially realized on Aug. 12 when President Walker signed MTSU's new smoking policy.

Many students, myself included, applaud the long awaited change in policy. Nevertheless, the policy contains a serious omission concerning smoking in the grill and in other campus eateries. For these locales, the policy specifically reads, "Smoking areas may be designated in the grill and cafeterias by the managers of those facilities."

Anyone who visits the grill soon discovers that smoking is very much permitted. There is a no-smoking section, but it is relatively small and inconveniently located away from the food line. Okay, I realize that this is a crazy suggestion, but why not create a smoking section for a predominantly smoke-free grill? The current policy favors a smoke-free area in a smoke infested grill.

How is it that the grill's smoking policy can be biased towards the minority of students who choose to smoke? While smoking is not as common at the university's other cafeterias, the habit is still encouraged. Each cafeteria sets aside a non-smoking area, but once again it is relatively small and inconveniently located.

Regretfully, a morbid analogy can be made in comparing MTSU's cafeterias with apartheid in South Africa. That is, a minority group in each society has been successful in suppressing the rights of the majority. No, I am not suggesting economic sanctions against the university's dining service, just a simple and long over due change in policy.

Incident at 'the sub' highlights the need for black unity

The other day, I read a most unnerving article in Jet magazine.

It commemorated the 50th birthday of Chicago native Emmett Till and the naming of a street in his honor. Well, like any occasion in which a street is named after a Negro, there has to be a totally devastating reason behind such an endeavor. And there is.

In 1955, at the tender age of 14, Emmett Till was lynched and murdered in Mississippi for whistling at a white woman. But "lynched" and "murdered" don't give nearly enough justice to a crime of such extreme grotesqueness. Let me enlighten you.

Reports state that Till's nude body was found in the Tallahatchie River with a 200-pound iron-gin-mill fan wired around his neck and a bullet hole one inch above his right ear. And if these events weren't enough to ensure his death, the autopsy revealed severe beating. The left side of his face was crushed to the bone.

As one newspaper editor described, the killing was

Total Eclipse

LUCAS JOHNSON II

"nauseating and way, way beyond the bounds of human decency."

Unfortunately, the judiciary system at the time didn't share the same sentiment. The three white men convicted of the crime were found not guilty by an all-white, all-male Mississippi jury.

After the reading of that verdict, if there was any nausea to be felt, it was that of Till's mother and his family. Not only had they lost a loved one, but the black's in the courtroom that day had once again lost to discrimination. And the devious grins of the whites as they left the courtroom, their mouths' dripping with the saliva of hate, only made matters worse. They had cinched another victory.

I must say the Till article left me with an angry feeling. But I grew even angrier when I stumbled upon another article that dealt with black actor Wesley Snipes (best known for his leading roles in the movies Jungle Fever and New Jack City).

The article mentions that while shooting his soon-to-be-released film The Waterdance, Snipes was manhandled by Los Angeles police (not because he was with a white woman as you recall from the movie Jungle Fever) but because he was suspected of driving a stolen car.

The fact is, the rental company from which Snipes rented the car had made a mistake. Despite numerous third party attempts to explain the error, the article said Snipes was handcuffed to a bench and held for hours at the station.

"Everybody was coming out looking at me like a monkey in a cage," the article describes Snipes saying. "Walking past me smiling and snickering and shaking their heads like, 'Umph, umph, umph. You see that. A nigger is a nigger. You know you can't give the niggers nothing. He's gonna steal a car and he makes movies.'"

By this time I was steaming. Till and Snipes, though they were from different eras, they had both been the butts of racial discrimination, the same discrimination that is presently breaking up the foundation of Affirmative Action and other civil foundations our forefathers slaved so tediously to lay. Like Till was beat down, I wanted to scream out the word racism, and beat down all those bigoted die-hards who continue to make a bad name for their race. But, after the incident that took place later that night at a party in the James Union Building (SUB) here on MTSU's campus, my anger quickly dissipated to shame.

The incident was a fight between two all-black organizations. This time, I became nauseated. I couldn't yell out racism. I couldn't denounce the establishment, because that fight had once again proven what racists have reverberated about the black man, and that is, he's yet to get along with his brother.

Then the stories I had read took on new meanings. I thought about how insane it must be for a thousand Tills' to die each day at the hands of their own brothers. They don't have to lynch us, we're lynching each other. And like the Snipes story, they pass by us and laugh, knowing that if we stay at each others throats we're never going to progress.

But that can change. I have faith. We can wipe away those smiles and secure our existence by coming together. We have to. Because if we don't, we'll all end up like our dear brother Emmett Till, at the bottom of the river.

You're never too old to quit blowing smoke.

MTSU art exhibits have busy week

This has been a very busy week. Three art exhibits all happening here at MTSU. As I was "making the rounds" I was thinking about what to expect. After being involved in the fine arts for seventeen years and studying the art works at galleries all over the world, I have become rather jaded. Now it seems like I crave the new, the innovative, the daring, and that seems to be getting more and more difficult to find.

Needless to say, I was delighted that the MTSU Art Department has brought in works by two of their former students, and these artists have chosen to display work that dares to be different, each in its own way. If Vincent Buwalda and Wayne White are examples of the kind of artists our school is producing, the School of Art is to be commended for a fine job of teaching not only technique but creative artistic thought.

Vincent Buwalda has an exhibit of one canvas and six sculptures in the CUBE Gallery in Keathley University Center (across from the grill). The first piece I noticed was the canvas titled "Artsy Fartsy". For those of you who don't know, 'artsy fartsy' is a term which is used to describe things or people who are stuck in stuffy, closed-minded artistic thought, and tend to be rather pretentious about it. Mr. Buwalda is definitely poking fun at these people and things, as well as anyone should.

When you first look at his sculptures you can't help but notice that they required a lot of work and imagination. And then the electricity comes on! Literally! Mr. Buwalda has included small electric motors in some of his sculptures which animate the pieced in various interesting ways.

Buwalda says the works are semi-autobiographical. The nervous movement of a leg, seen through the movement of a foot; the bored tapping of fingers. One piece has one arm turning a wheel and another arm waving a hand. This seems to be the general idea many people have about art (including many so called artists): that you turn on the motor and art magically comes out.

One of my favorite pieced is static (non-motorized). It portrays a locked book with the keys inside. If you want to open the book you need the key, but to get the key you need to open the book. Mr. Buwalda says that this portrays "read knowledge and the power it has". I cannot think of a more appropriate place to have this sculpture than a university. After all, knowledge really is no good if it is locked up, even if it's trapped inside somebody's head.

Vincent Buwalda presents a very interesting exhibit both visually and conceptually. He pokes fun at intellectual snobbery and artistic ignorance. And if you really don't want to think, the works are fun to look at.

Mr. Buwalda's work will be on display through September 27. The CUBE Gallery is open from 8:00 a.m. until 10:00 p.m.

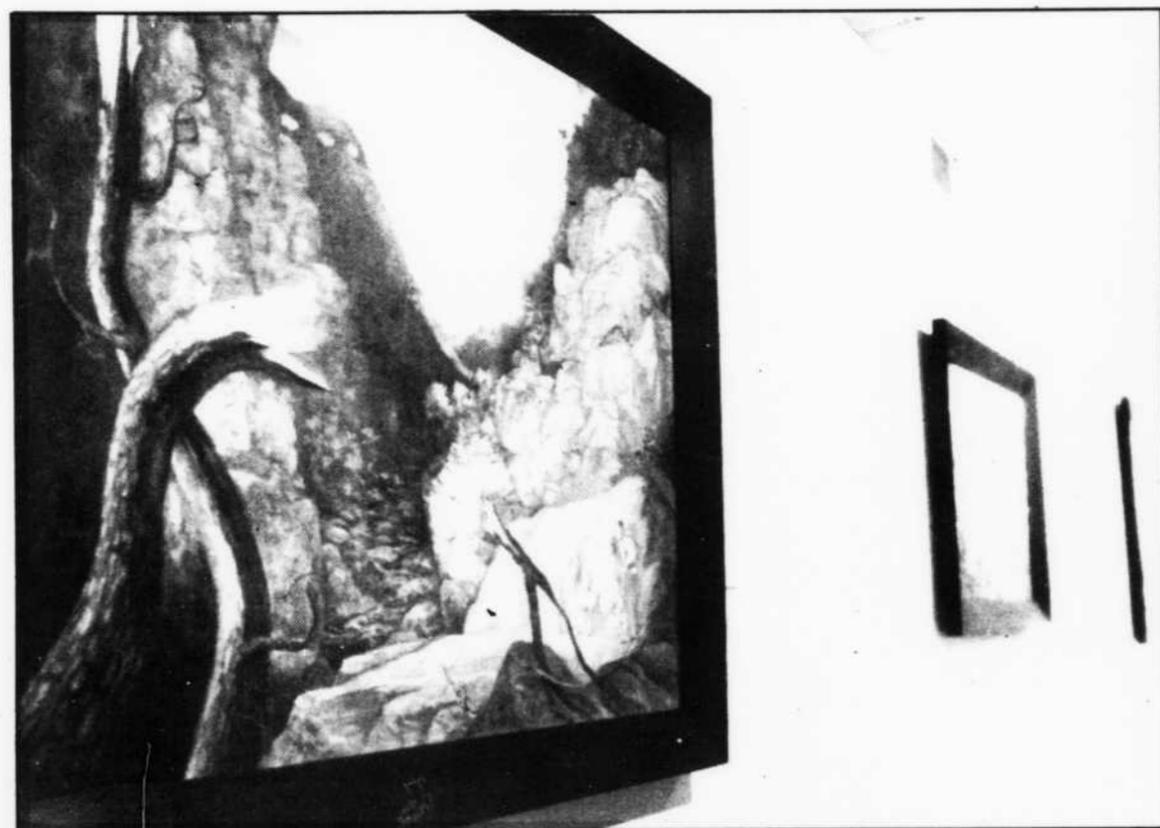

At the Art Barn Gallery you will find the work of Wayne White, three time Emmy award winner for his production work on

"Pee-Wee's Playhouse", and winner of the Best Art Director award for the music video "Big Time".

I am (still) a fan of Pee-Wee Herman, and having seen his show quite a few times I had to wonder what Mr. White would put on display. When I arrived at the gallery Mr. White was speaking with a group of art students and showing them some of his sketch books. I managed to get close enough to peek over someone's shoulder and saw drawings that stagger the imagination. From surreal to minimalist.

But the real treat was hanging on the walls - some of the most stunning paintings I have seen in a long time. Representing various historical events, the paintings are done in either an impressionist or a "neo-Italian Renaissance" style for the most part.

Not making a connection between the drawings and the paintings, I asked Mr. White about them. He explained to me that he began the paintings as an "exercise in discipline" to see if he was still able to produce works of subject matter he dearly loves in the style of Titian (and other great painters of large works) and also the style of the 19th century landscape artists. Not only does Wayne White have the discipline to produce this sort of work, he is able to do it in grand style.

Mr. White's works range from dark and creepy (in 'Swamp') to bright and bold (in 'Lookout Mountain'). The paintings not only graphically portray historic events, they reach out and make you feel something, from the exultation of 'Young Washington's Dream' to the mystery of 'Messenger.'

This critic strongly recommends that you take the time to see these works. The Art Barn Gallery is open from 8:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday, 10:30 to 12:30 a.m. Saturday and 1:00 to 4:00 p.m. on Sunday. For further information about either Wayne White or Vince Buwalda, call the Art Department at 898-2455.

The third exhibit on campus, at the Learning Resource Center's Photo Gallery, is a collection of photographs by Chilean photographers entitled "Chile From Within." The photographs span the years 1973-1988, or from the time Gen. Augusto Pinochet began his authoritarian dictatorship until popular elections for a president were scheduled.

"Chile From Within" is a very powerful exhibit giving an insider's view of what life is like in a military dictatorship. The photos portray scenes ranging from everyday life and people to graphic portrayals of the results of inhumane treatment by the authorities. It is very chilling to look at a picture of someone being arrested by the authorities and to be able to tell from the picture that they will not come back.

Within the display are several explanatory panels to help guide you through the exhibit.

One of them says "Most of these photos were taken in defiance of the danger which has become our way of life." Civil rights abuses, fear, tyranny and danger. All of these can be seen in the display. It makes you wonder at the ability of these people to survive what to us seems like hell on earth.

Go and see "Chile From Within." Take your time and think about what you are seeing. If it horrifies you-that's OK. If it makes you angry-that's even better. Try to imagine being there. And think about the people who were there. Maybe you will come out a bit more humble and a bit more appreciative of what you have.

Nashville sculptor will address art educators

Alan LeQuire, sculptor of the 'Athena' in Nashville's Parthenon, will address art education teachers from across the Mid-South at a conference Sept. 27 and 28 at Middle Tennessee State University. The conference will include a trip to Centennial Park to view the colossal work which took nearly a decade to complete.

The conference, "Sense and Substance: Teaching in the Content Areas," is sponsored by the Tennessee Arts Commission and MTSU's Department of Art and will be held in the Keathley University Center.

Speakers, topics and times will include:

-Al Hurwitz, chair emeritus of the Department of Art Education at the Maryland Institute College of Art in Baltimore—"Methods Courses: Education's Perennial Whipping Person," 9:00 a.m.

-Eldon Katter, professor of art education at Kutztown University, "Global Perspectives and the Content Areas," 10:30 a.m.

Lunch follows at 11:45 a.m.

-Anne Lindsey, who heads the Southeast Institute for Education in the Visual Arts at the University of Tennessee at Chattanooga, "Exploring Approaches to the Practice of Discipline Based Art Education," 1:15 p.m.

-MTSU associate professor of art Charles Jansen, "Diagrammatic Strategies for Exploring Art History," 2:15 p.m.

-Karen Hamblen, professor of art education in the Department of Curriculum and Instruction at Louisiana State University, "Art Criticism: Critical Thinking and Questioning Strategies," 3:30 p.m.

-Hurwitz returns with "Methods Courses: Moving Forward" at 4:30 p.m.

LeQuire's lecture will follow dinner in the James Union Building.

There will be a workshop for the teachers from 8:30 to 11:45 on Saturday morning dealing with strategies and content areas. The group will make the trip to the Parthenon in Nashville Saturday. The round trip bus fare is $15.

No registration is required for Tennessee teachers, but a $16 meal fee is required. Registration for out-of-state teachers is $50, which includes meals. Registration must be mailed by September 20 to Box 25, Middle Tennessee State University, Murfreesboro, Tennessee 37132. For more information on the conference, contact conference coordinator Lon Nuell at (615) 898-2505.

Akron senior gets singer's apartment

Erika Aldan, a senior at the University of Akron, just wanted to meet the band. She didn't expect to walk away with the lead singer's house, too.

Aldan sent one postcard to an MTV contest that was giving away Guns-N-Roses lead singer Axl Rose's West Hollywood condo, estimated to be worth about $425,000. The odds of winning were 400,000-to-1.

"They called me a few weeks ago and I wasn't sure what to think," said Aldan, a mass communications major. "I was just amazed. The main reason I entered the contest was to meet the band."

Ricketts and racing Raiders roll

MTSU sets world's land speed record for hydrogen

SCOTT HASSLER
Sports Writer

Last month in Wendover, Utah, at the Bonneville National Speed Trials, a Middle Tennessee State University group set a world's land speed record.

A 1973 Chevrolet pickup truck with a 350 cubic inch V-8 hydrogen fueled engine ran the course at a speed of 108.157 mph.

Dr. Cliff Ricketts, who is an MTSU associate professor of agriculture, graduate assistant Terry Young, and a team of former MTSU students combined to set the record pace.

For Ricketts it was a dream come true.

"Everybody has a dream to set a world's record, to be the best at something," Ricketts said. "I knew if I had a shot at the world's record, I'd better go for it now."

The record was not an easy accomplishment, though.

After 12 years of research and trials, the hydrogen fueled engine became a reality. For Ricketts the challenge reminded him of those faced in the

Luna remains positive despite weekend losses

MARY RHUDY
Sports Writer

Despite a poor showing this past weekend, volleyball coach Jim Luna has every confidence in his Lady Raiders' play.

"I felt we played against Alabama and Tulane real well," he said. "They're big, powerful teams. Their rosters read like a 'Who's Who' of the best in the nation."

The teams playing in the weekend tournament were some of the toughest ones the Raiders will face this season — Austin Peay, University of Alabama at Tuscaloosa and Tulane.

MTSU lost straight games to Alabama and Austin Peay and won one game against Tulane.

But Luna likes playing teams that are competitive. He said playing the tougher teams will help his freshman gain experience.

classroom each day.

"In academics, you do research and turn in a paper," he said. "I view the race as me turning in a research paper."

The people at Bonneville gave Ricketts a resounding A+. Ricketts added, "Actually the race was just the icing on the cake of the work we've been doing here (at MTSU)."

The race wasn't just all work and no play for Ricketts. As he said with a smile, "Quite frankly, even though we won the time and the race, I just wanted to blow everybody away."

And that they did.

The nearest competitor to MTSU was 22 miles behind. As if that wasn't bad enough, the MTSU truck that won was the second best vehicle available.

"Our premier vehicle running on 100 percent hydrogen fuel broke down in warmups. So we had to go with the ethanol-hydrogen mix in the truck," he said.

After the performance at Bonneville, second place seems to be good enough, but not for Ricketts.

"I still want to turn 140 or 150 mph with our premier vehicle, and we'll go back next year and try if the administration lets us. This race got us into a world class category. Even though we lost our premier vehicle, we've learned so much. If we go back next year, we can add to this."

"Hydrogen is the fuel of the future," Ricketts said. "When everyone thinks of hydrogen, the first negative thing to come to mind is the Hindenburg."

The Hindenburg was a dirigible filled with hydrogen that went down after being struck by lightning, killing people. But as Young said, "If the Hindenburg was using any other kind of fuel, everyone would have been fried."

Hydrogen is so light and fast that leaked gas rises up and away before an explosion can occur. BMW has even published materials on hydrogen tests

Ready to run

Cross country teams set for action

DIANNE DEOLIVEIRA
Assistant Sports Editor

Middle Tennessee's men's and women's cross country track teams will begin their season Friday at the University of the South Invitational at Sewanee.

The Lady Raiders are a veteran team this year, with three seniors and four juniors returning from a year ago.

Coach Dean Hayes has successfully led the team to a third-place finish in each of the past four years. During the past two years, Hayes said, injuries have ruined previous chances of winning a championship. Therefore, the key to 1991 is staying healthy.

The women were able to remain healthy for the 1991 indoor and outdoor track championships and contributed heavily to two titles as well.

Returning to the team are seniors Karen Barnes, Linda Brewer, Sharon Smith and juniors

Dianne DeOliveira, Kiya Thomas, Leigh Weathers and Lea White.

Thomas and Barnes finished fourth in the Ohio Valley Conference in 1989 and '90, while Smith was one of the best freshmen distance runners in the OVC during the 1988 campaign when she finished ninth.

DeOliveira won the OVC indoor mile, and White placed second in the OVC 10,000 meters last spring. Half-milers Brewer and Weathers, the OVC champion, round out a well balanced team.

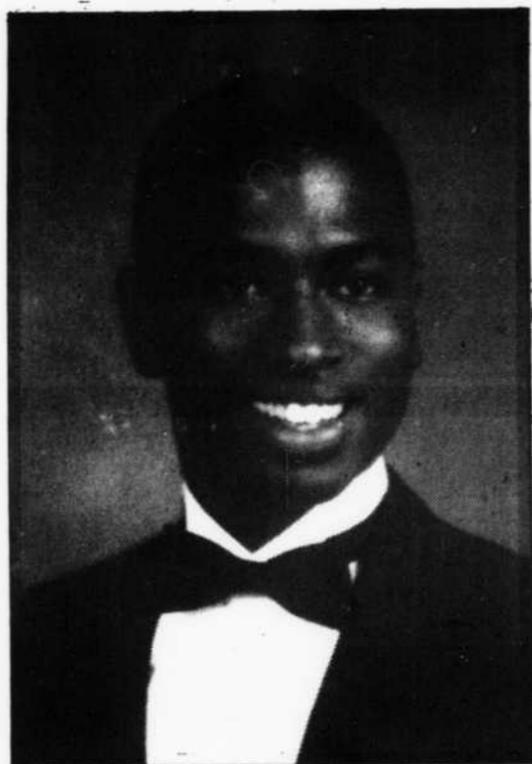

Although Eastern Kentucky is the defending OVC champion, Hayes has confidence in the Lady Raiders as long as they remain healthy.

"It's hard to win something you have never won, which was true of the 1991 track titles, but if the ladies are healthy, they should saying that it has less than one-twentieth of the chances of exploding as gasoline.

"Hydrogen is completely environmentally friendly except for nitric oxide, and you won't have that if the engine is tuned properly," Ricketts said.

Hydrogen is also practical as a means of fuel for the future.

"What we're really working on here is a tri-fuel vehicle. You can use hydrogen backed up by propane in the city, and then for longer trips you can use gasoline," Ricketts said.

The race at Bonneville was a chance to strut hydrogen's stuff in front of the top dogs of racing.

"We wanted to show the versatility of hydrogen," Ricketts said. "We wanted to show different ways of injecting hydrogen into an engine. It (the race) was a great success because very few people in the world have ever run an engine on hydrogen."

The people at the Bonneville National speed race in Wemlover definitely have something to talk about as a result of Ricketts and his staff at MTSU.

challenge Eastern Kentucky's eight-year string of championships," Hayes said.

MTSU's men's team will continue to reconstruct after being reinstated last summer. With only one year of experience under their belts, the returnees include last year's top runner, junior Jason Welch, and juniors Steve Ryann and Chris Layne.

Jeff Lingwall, an Army veteran, is the top newcomer and, according to Hayes, is a solid, hard worker who is a leader.

Freshman Michael Burkett is expected to be an asset to the team as well, although he has never run cross country before. Marty Plott showed promise in the 800 meters after coming out for track last winter and Hayes thinks his competitiveness should help. Last year, Layne ran well in the OVC and adds some needed depth.

The team finished sixth in the 1990 OVC meet and is expected to make an improvement this year.

"Hopefully that men will be able to improve their place," Hayes said, "and most of them will be able to score some points in the distance events in the OVC track championships, which is something they were unable to do last year, even in winning the indoor track crown."

Team

"I feel we learned a lot," he said. "We played some tough teams that pushed us hard, and that's what we're looking for this early in the season while we're getting ready for the OVC (Ohio Valley Conference)."

Results of the tournament were:

MTSU vs. Alabama — 5-15, 5-15, 7-15

MTSU vs. Tulane — 15-3, 4-15, 9-15, 6-15

MTSU vs. Austin Peay — 12-15, 7-15, 4-15

Lisa White led the team in kills with 20. Tonya Keen led the team in blocks, and Becky Tomlin was the team leader in sets.

The team's next major tournament is Sept. 20 and 21 at Clemson University in South Carolina.

The squad's first home contest will be at 7 p.m. Tuesday against Evansville University.

The Sturm truth - Dan goes 6-0 with picks

Week one is out of the way and sports writer Dan Sturm has bolted out to the lead with a perfect 6-0 picking record last week.

I didn't do so bad myself with a shining 5-1 mark, while Greg Adkins posted a 4-2 mark and Terry Massey brought up the rear at 3-3.

"I told you boys to follow my lead," Sturm boldly said.

"Don't worry, we just wanted you to lead once so you wouldn't get mad and quit. Why else do you think I picked Vanderbilt?" Massey said.

Whether the first week was fixed or not, several of the picks were lopsided victories. However, this week has some matchups that could go either way.

Although the Blue Raiders are not in action, some of the top collegiate teams from across the nation will butt heads, and the results from this week's predictions could drastically shake up the "On the Line" standings.

MTSU will return to the field next weekend in one of its biggest tests of the year when it faces Eastern Kentucky in Richmond. Eastern will tune up for the 1-0 Raiders by taking on the Ohio Valley Conference's latest edition, Southeast Missouri State.

Therefore let's start this week's picks with the Colonels.

SEMO at EKU

Southeast Missouri played well in its opener against Southern Illinois, but something happened last weekend.

UT-Martin ran over the team from every angle, and it's certainly not a good time to be facing one of the OVC's most potent powerhouses in Eastern Kentucky.

The Colonels dropped their opener to Louisville 24-14. Although the Cardinals were a highly respected team, EKU gave them more than they wanted and nearly pulled off the upset.

Some folks say that this is Roy Kidd's best team ever and that's saying quite a bit for a team that has won two national crowns.

This one is simple.

EKU 62 SEMO 10

SIU at APSU

The steak is over.

Austin Peay's 23-game losing streak, the longest in the nation, came to a halt last Saturday when it scored 11 points in the fourth quarter to take the win over Western Kentucky.

Roy Gregory apparently has his troops on the rise, and the Governors now find themselves atop the OVC with a 1-0 record.

Southern Illinois barely slipped by Southeast Missouri in its opener. Last week, it played Murray State and won by four.

This week, it plays at Austin Peay and the Gobs are fired up. Therefore, Peay is going to pull out another close one and be off to a impressive start.

football conference, the Southern.
However, it was the season opener for Morehead so maybe it will have the problems worked out. It has a solid team on paper and is expected to have a solid OVC season.

Marshall has two games under its belt and always finds a

Both squads once possessed prominent squads only a few short seasons ago, yet recently they've hit rock bottom.

This battle of has-beens will be close, but Western is at home and that's always a tough place to scale the 'Hill's.

WKU 32 Murray 17
TSU and Jackson St.

A neutral ground contest being held in Birmingham, Ala., this one will attract a lot of attention.

Both schools have solid support, and the turnstiles will be put to good use.

Unfortunately, TSU has looked less than impressive in its opening two contests. Quarterback James Wade came in for Jimmy Bethea during the MTSU loss after setting out the first week with an injury. However, he reinjured his leg in the closing minutes and is going to be lost for the contest.

Jackson State lost its opener by a narrow margin and the talent level compares to that of TSU.

Look for the TSU Tigers to get things going and make a first-half close game, into a second-half romp.

TSU 37 JSU 20
TN. Tech at Ohio
Tennessee Tech can't seem to settle on a quarterback, although it does have some talent at the position.

Last week, several players saw action, but UT-Chattanooga was too much for anyone to overcome at home as it fell 35-14.

The Ohio Bobcats are members of the Mid-American Conference and opened their season with a 17-17 tie with Central Michigan.

Tech needs to have some players step forward to solidify a starting team in order to contend for the OVC crown, although this weekend the Eagles will be nabbed by the Bobcats and still searching for the answers.

Ohio 49 TTU 10
UCLA at Tennessee

Remember what Tennessee did to UCLA a year ago?

They snuck up on the Bruins in California and beat them, so you know the Bruins will be coming to the hills for revenge.

Tennessee looked good in its win over Louisville, yet UCLA will be a bigger test.

Don't expect the upset. However, do expect the Volunteers to break out in a worrisome sweat at some point in the contest.

UCLA will leave a impression on the Vol fans after Tennessee has to come from behind in the final half.

UT 30 UCLA 24
SMU at Vanderbilt

This is one that everyone can look at and say Vanderbilt should win.

That's the same thing everyone did last year, too, when the 'Dores went to Dallas and were embarrassed by the Mustangs, signifying an end to Watson Brown's head coaching career at Vandy.

This will be the home opener for the Commadores, who actually looked decent in one half of the Syracuse 37-10 win last weekend.

SMU also looked impressive in a marginal loss to an unimpressive Arkansas squad.

I said last week that Vandy might not win a game all year, and this one might be their best shot. However, I'm not a believer and expect it to be tight before the Mustangs pull it out by a nose.

way into the playoffs at the season's end. Therefore, considering the fact that it is also home, the Thundering Herd will overrun the Eagles this weekend.

Marshall 42 Morehead 10
Murray at Western Ky.

Murray's 31-27 loss to Southern Illinois last weekend wasn't the right foot to start on.

Western, too, stumbled out of the gates, falling victim to Austin Peay.

Band Together and Buy Bonds!

America, like a good marching band, needs the cooperation of all members to move forward efficiently. Purchasing U.S. Savings Bonds is one way to help the national economy, and at the same time, help yourself. For the individual, Bonds pay competitive interest rates, are guaranteed by the U.S. Government, and have certain tax advantages. For the nation, Bonds are a cost-effective way to finance the national debt.
