

'Mass meeting' to discuss energy crisis

Sen. Henry (Scoop) Jackson (D-Wash.) and members of congress from Tennessee and Alabama will attend a Feb. 15 "mass meeting" in Fayetteville sponsored by the Energy Committee of the Tennessee Valley, according to assistant professor of political science Imogene Bolin.

Bolin said the meeting is designed to help people "get the full facts" on the energy crisis and to organize individuals so that the government's policy can be effected.

"We're interested in delivering the message to representatives in congress and to the executive branch that the solution to the crisis must be in the interest of the American working man," said Bolin, one of the organizers of the meeting.

She said the meeting will be political because of the nature of the issue, but that it will be non-partisan.

In addition to Jackson, whose Senate committee is investigating the conduct of major oil companies in the energy crisis, Sen. John Sparkman (D-Ala.), Rep. Bob Jones (D-Ala.) and Rep. Joe L. Evins (D-Tenn.) will attend, Bolin said.

Other members on the Tennessee congressional delegation, including the two senators, have been invited but have not yet accepted, Bolin said.

The meeting is scheduled to begin at 7:30 p.m. in the Fayetteville High School auditorium.

Chairman of the Citizens Energy Committee Fayetteville businessman Joe Sir said the group formed because the energy crisis had fallen on the public without due notice and without sufficient explanation.

"The federal agencies and the people need the real facts so that they can begin to shame the major oil companies into becoming good citizens," Sir said. "This is the direction in which our group wants to push," he said.

"This is a meeting of the people," Sir said. "Absolutely no admission will be charged and no special invitations are needed."

The purpose of the meeting is not only to create a better understanding of the energy crisis, but to create a grass roots organization that will relay public opinion to congress and the President," he said.

"We also plan to keep records of how well our elected decision makers respond to the wishes of the people, and we will relay this information back to them," Sir said.

Presley tickets to sell Feb. 19

Tickets for the March 19 MTSU appearance of Elvis Presley will go on sale to students Tuesday, Feb. 19, Harold Smith, special events committee chairman said yesterday.

Smith said the tickets would be sold through the southwest ticket booth of Murphy Athletic Center between 4 and 8 p.m. Presley tickets will be sold for $10, $7.50 and $5, a seat he said.

"Those students wishing to buy tickets will have the best seats in the house," Smith said. "Any tickets not sold on the 19th to MTSU people can be purchased by the general public on Feb. 22."

The committee chairman said he felt the tickets would all be sold on the first day of sales.

Students must present a valid identification card at the tickets booth. Faculty and staff members wishing to purchase tickets will be identified through school identification and the MTSU phone directory.

A four ticket limit per person will be imposed and no complementary seats will be granted, Smith said.

Presley, known world-wide for his particular style of rock and roll music, will also perform on the MTSU campus March 14. Tickets to that show were sold out almost immediately by mail, leaving students with little hope for viewing the entertainer before plans were made for the second production.

Shots miss student strikebreakers

by Mel Davenport

Several MTSU students narrowly escaped injury early Thursday morning after the bus on which they were riding was struck by five bullets fired from a passing pick-up truck.

Arrested and charged with the shooting was Glenus H. Byrge, 44, of Lavergne.

The incident occurred on I-24 at 12:30 a.m. when the bus was returning the students from their jobs at the strike-bound Aladdin Industries, Inc., in Nashville.

Byrge, a former employee of the company, began following the bus as soon as it departed the plant. He remained close behind the bus until it had reached the Smyrna exit. Byrge then pulled into the left lane and opened fire with a 22-caliber rifle.

Three of the bullets smashed through the rear window of the bus and were later found lodged in the seats.

The bus also was followed Tuesday night, but the car left the scene after the students were delivered to the Murphy Center parking lot.

The arresting officers, Sgt. Vernon Edison and Patrolmen Charles Burnett and Charles Barnes of the Tennessee Highway Patrol, took Byrge into custody after he left I-24 at the Murfreesboro exit.

"The suspect had apparently been drinking, but offered no re-

Thefts force photography lab changes

by John Rawlston

Theft of equipment from the photography lab has brought about changes in the lab's operating procedure, according to Harold Baldwin, photography professor.

The photography lab will be open now from 7 a.m. - 12 p.m. Sundays. In the past, students were free to use the lab 24 hours a day.

After the theft in January of a densitometer valued at about $125, Baldwin removed all darkroom equipment from the lab and made the equipment available to students on a check-out basis.

That equipment was riveted down, and stronger locks were put on the doors last week as new security measures.

All equipment now is available in the darkroom, which is staffed by a laboratory assistant. The lab assistant will keep things clean and in order and will secure the building at midnight, Baldwin said.

"I really hate this," he said. "When we started offering photography a few years ago we worked with a close group of 30-50 students, and we didn't lose a thing for five years, but when the number of students taking photography grew, two or three people began taking advantage."

"Last semester we lost a couple of lenses and a timer, but I thought that if I didn't say anything it would stop, but it hasn't," he said.

However, Baldwin did see some advantages in the new system.

"Besides cleaning and maintaining the lab, the assistant will be able to help students who are having minor problems in the darkroom," he said.

Advanced photography students will work as lab assistants and will be paid for their duties.

Bud Drinkers, can you figure this out?

Suppose Bud came in 24-oz. bottles that cost 50¢ apiece. And suppose the 12-oz. bottles cost 25¢ each. A guy comes up to you carrying two boxes the same size. He tells you one box is full of 12-oz. bottles, the other is exactly half full of the 24-oz. bottles. One is worth more than the other. Which one?

ANSWER: Since both boxes are exactly the same size, the size or cost of the bottles makes little difference. The full box is worth more than the half-full box because it contains twice as much. (If you suppose each box holds 144 ounces, the full box would contain twelve 12-oz. bottles, and would cost $3.00. The half-full box would contain 72 ounces, or three 24-oz. bottles, and it would cost $1.50. Moral: Next time a guy comes up to you with two boxes miss half the fun.

Rape charge dropped by coed

Charges of rape were dropped against Ronnie Martin, former MTSU football player, in general sessions court Thursday morning, according to Judge John W. Buckner, presiding judge.

"All charges have been dropped by the prosecution and concurred with by the Attorney General," Judge Buckner said.

Martin was accused Monday, Jan. 28, and arrested the next day on the charge of raping an MTSU coed.

Reasons behind the dismissal were not brought out in court.

Martin was one of the two MTSU football players charged with possession of marijuana after a raid on the athletic dormitory Oct. 1.

He was suspended at that time but allowed to re-enroll for the spring semester as ineligible to participate in university sports.

To prevent delay

Dean asks form attention

by Jerry Manley

Many MTSU students are causing unneeded inconvenience by failing to fill out necessary university forms, according to Frank Glass, dean of admissions and records.

Some students will fail to graduate because they did not fill out 'intent to graduate' forms, Glass said. Of about 900 prospective May graduates, 15-20 per cent are late in turning in the forms, he said.

"When a student turns in an 'intent to graduate' form this late, I just tell him we'll do the best we can, but the people who file early come first," Glass said.

The forms should be turned in early in the semester preceding the final semester before graduation, Glass said. For example, May 1974 graduates should have submitted the forms at the beginning of the 1973 fall term. Forms are available at the office of admissions and records.

Many students are not submitting repeat forms when taking a course over to improve their grade, Glass said. Should a student not file the repeat form during the semester in which the course is retaken, the previous grade earned in the course will remain on his record.

Glass also stated that of about 1,500 juniors presently enrolled, between 500 and 800 have not completed junior-senior forms.

Five copies of this form should be filled out by the student and his advisor during the first semester of his junior year.

Some students have also failed to file "change of program" forms when dropping or adding courses.

"I just wish students would pick up a catalog and find out what their responsibilities are, and then take care of them," Glass said.

sistance. A 22-caliber rifle and ammunition were found in the truck," said Burnett.

Byrge was taken to Rutherford County Jail and charged with shooting or throwing a missile with the purpose of committing murder or bodily harm, carrying a weapon and driving while intoxicated.

He is to appear in General Sessions Court at 9 a.m. Feb. 15. Bail was set at $5,000.

The students, who began work Monday at Aladdin, had been verbally harassed by picketing employees at the entrance to the plant.

Saga plans 1 a.m. closing for grill

University Center Grill will not close until 1 a.m. Monday, beginning an extension of hours Sunday through Thursday.

Regular hours (7 a.m.-10:30 p.m.) will remain Friday and Saturday.

The extension is the result of numerous requests by students for a place to study after the library has closed and was achieved through "coordinated effort" by the Food Committee and the Saga food service, according to Harry Wagner, vice-president for student affairs.

"We tried the extension the first part of fall semester, but no one seemed to know about it," Wagner said.

"The new grill hours will be in the experimental stage until we see if the students will take advantage of the situation," he said.

Greg Magill, Saga director, expressed hope that the hours extension will benefit the students.

"If we can break even, we will consider it a success," Magill said.

To the editor:

I would like to address myself on the subject of the inaccuracy of a headline in the Friday paper concerning the new Board of Student Publications, as well as to Jim Trammel's remarks in Tuesday's paper (Feb. 5).

The headline read "Media board organizes; fails to decide proposal." The new board has not failed in anything, yet! For heaven's sake, let us be fair. The meeting was called 1) to elect a chairman and secretary and 2) to inform the new board of the now defunct Interim Board's activities which included the Hilliard proposal of the Collage-Midlander merger.

As for my infamous remark about the Midlander, I do apologize for the description which the Sidelines saw fit to take out of the context of a general, informal and informative discussion. Jim has every right to be offended that such words were applied publicly to the annual with no further qualification.

I should like to point out that at the meeting I was promptly censured when I used the term, and I stand corrected. Sidelines should never have printed the term without that qualification.

What I was trying to say, however, was that the Midlander specifically bore some of the same symptoms as the more general institution of which it is a part. From articles I have read and students from several universities with whom I've spoken, I deduced that the present institution of the yearbook on college campuses is a dying one. Anyone can review the facts and figures for themselves.

I am willing to concede, however, that on this campus, the Midlander is still a vital, functioning part. For that reason along it should maintain its individual identity.

I was very much surprised to discover that according to Jim, in the space of one semester I was suddenly transformed from a rather innocuous, unassuming student into an inveterate, power-mad ogre (or should I say ogress?)

I assure both Jim and the campus community that such has not happened. My position according to my own priorities is this: primarily I am a student seeking to gain an education. Of secondary concern is my editorship of Collage, a position which facilitates not only my learning experience, but is apparently accomplishing some good in the academic community. Thirdly, I am a member of the associated student body, and as such was asked to represent the student body on the new Board of Student Publications. Lastly, I am chairman of that committee. My only function there is to set up and call meetings after preparing the agenda, and then to chair the meeting.

Neither as chairman, ASB representative, Collage editor, or a student am I "hell-bent to promote Collage" at any organization's expense.

I do seek a fair and equitable solution to the problem of inadequate budgeting, whereupon Jim would boast that Midlander's circulation is "half again as large as that of Collage."

It should be!

As last year's editor, he had some $33,000 with which to work! Collage, by comparison, has a meager budget of $7,000 or so with which to produce the quality and excellence which I would challenge the Midlander to match on a comparative budget.

I did not set up the new Board of Student Publications. Representatives of the various media were not asked to become members. I just happen to be connected with the magazine just as Gina Jeter happens to be connected with the newspaper, just as Larry Harrington happens to have been last year's newspaper editor. We were chosen to represent students and the department of mass communications because of our knowledge and experiences with both areas of campus life.

As chairman I will seek to inspire cooperation among board members. I do not, as yet, anticipate any violent bickering or disagreement among the members who presently appear to respect each others' right to their own thoughts and conclusions. I think Jim is a little premature in his guarantee of my failure in this respect. After all, he hasn't really given me a chance even to try!

To the editor:

As a veteran of the MTSU psychology department, having been enrolled here since the fall of 1968, I feel moved to defend the motives of Dr. Willard Kerr, Chairman of the Department of Psychology. Although I may not entirely agree with his method of doing so, i.e., proposing a grade quota system, I certainly applaud his motives and wishes to make grades representative of the students' actual performance with regards to course requirements.

Bill Mauldin

"WA-A-A-A-H!"

Any honest individual on this campus would admit that there exists so called "easy" or "crip" teachers who grade too leniently. There are also professors who are labeled "hands off" because their coursework is demanding, their grading is strict, and it is virtually impossible to get a good grade in one of their courses. I have experienced these conditions in almost every department on campus in which I have taken course. This can not be conducive to receiving the quality of education which MTSU is capable of providing.

Dr. Kerr's system is an honest and needed effort to ameliorate an unequal inter-professor grading system which is unfair to both the student and the reputation of the University. It is also an area which other departments should consider. It is time for everyone at the University to honestly evaluate what the grades they assign and/or receive really mean in terms of the eventual competency of each individual student.

To the editor:

The following is in response to your Feb. 5 editorial, "Academics Needs Sharpening." Is the student entitled to the best education his dollar can buy, as your article suggests, or is the student entitled to the best education his ability can absorb? If we opt for the latter, we must support those efforts to stimulate the ability of our students. Such efforts include those remedial courses criticized in your article.

Since the bulk of our students are from Tennessee, where optimum college preparation is not provided by public schools, we have some handicaps to overcome before we can sharpen our academics. Remedial courses are one step in that direction.

I am unable to endorse your criticism of remedial work. Instead I vigorously support more courses of this nature. And I continue to ask the question I have asked since joining this faculty, "Why isn't there a remedial reading program for MTSU students?" This is the first university I have encountered that does not provide non-credit remedial reading for its students. Ability to read influences achievement in all university courses.

Let's sharpen our academics, by any and all means. That includes sharpening our students!

Guidelines get mixed reactions

by Steve Crass

Enactment of guidelines regarding grading in the psychology department (Sidelines, Feb. 5) has brought mixed faculty and student reactions.

The guidelines are based on a departmental memo issued Jan. 11 by Willard Kerr, department chairman, which set an informal quota system for giving grades.

Contacted about the guidelines, Howard Kirksey, vice-president of academic affairs, indicated that nothing had been issued by his office regarding the setting of guidelines.

An informal poll of approximately 25 students indicated that most feel their grades might be endangered by the informal quota system. The students questioned said they would be against any type of system which might give only a certain number of high grades.

Comments varied to extremes. Some students said they would consider dropping a psychology course if it was not required. Others said they felt the informal quota system would not be detrimental to their grades.

Various instructors in the psychology department were asked to give their views about the guidelines. All of them were hesitant about being interviewed and balked at the prospect of having their comments printed.

The reasons varied with each individual. Most indicated they thought it was purely a departmental matter, and others said they should not comment, or that too much may have already been said about the guidelines.

One instructor did agree to a recorded interview.

The instructor felt that students should realize the difficulty in grading. Few students realize the time and problems involved in determining grades. A definite cutoff point must be established and maintained, the instructor explained.

While the reasons for and interpretation of the guidelines seem varied, the guidelines do exist. Because of the different interpretations by the instructors, the students could be affected.

While the guidelines were intended to bring up the continually low grades given by some instructors as well as compensate for those who continually grade high, the students could be affected if any instructor interprets the memorandum as anything but "guidelines."

Thinclads to host TIC

A dozen track teams will be hosted by defending champion MTSU for the Tennessee Inter-collegiate Championships today in Murphy Center.

Memphis State, Tennessee Tech, Vanderbilt, Fisk and MTSU will be competing for the university division title, while Maryville, David Lipscomb, Milligan, Lemoyne-Owen, Southwestern and Sewanee will vie for the college division championship.

Leading the MTSU delegation are shotputter Greg Litener, high jumper Jesse Agnew, hurdler Keith Cromartie, miler James Key, distance runner John Johnson and sprinters Dwaine Copeland and Melvin Daniels.

Tommy Haynes, the Raiders' All-American candidate in the long and triple jumps will not compete in the TIC. He is entered in the Mason-Dixon Games to be held Saturday in Louisville, Ky.

Lipscomb will be well represented in the meet with polevaulter Kerry Holt, triple and long jumper David Rachel, half miler John Warren and sprinter Robert Smith.

Field events will start at 2 p.m. with the running events scheduled to begin at 4:30 p.m.

Intramural swim meet scheduled

Anyone interested in participating in the Intramural Swim Meet should place an entry in the IM office between Feb. 14 and 17.

The meet will be held Feb. 19-21.

All preliminary events will be held the first two days of the meet with finals contested on the third day.

The meet was originally scheduled Dec. 5-6, but according to Intramural Director Joe Ruffner, it had to be rescheduled because of a problem in scheduling.

Further information concerning the meet can be obtained through the IM office on the main floor of Alumni Memorial Gymnasium.

Raiderettes win 50-35

With three players scoring in double figures, MTSU's Blue Raiderettes swept past Columbia State Community College 50-35 Tuesday night in Murphy Center.

The Raiderettes wasted no time in demonstrating their hardcourt superiority against Columbia, blowing out to a 13-1 first quarter lead.

Columbia scored 13 markers in the second period but could pull no closer than 25-14 at half-time.

Lynn Burklow paced MTSU's charge with 12 points. Teammates Jackie Carter and Sherrie Quillen accounted for 10 each.

Marlene Murphy was the high scorer for Columbia with 13 points.

The Raiderettes will take on Tennessee State University at 6:30 here tonight.

Bucs, Tech obstacles in Raiders' road to title

by Scott Elliott
Sports Editor

"We can win it all if we sweep this road trip."

Raider head basketball coach Jimmy Earle said this in reference to his team's next two games with East Tennessee and Tennessee Tech Saturday and Monday nights, respectively.

Hearing those kind of words come from the usually conservative Earle is a strange thing for Big Blue fans.

The Raiders have never been in better position at the half way mark in the Ohio Valley Conference standings than they are now at 5-2.

The first obstacle in the Raiders' road to the OVC title is ETSU, a very physical team that took a 82-63 whipping by MTSU earlier this season in Murphy Center.

"On paper--we should win it," MTSU assistant coach Ken Brackett said, "but things don't always go that way."

Brackett characterized the Bucs as an "up-and-down" team, citing that ETSU is on the bottom in the OVC standing but had beaten Western Kentucky at Bowling Green.

"We're going to have to play good basketball to beat them," Brackett said. "We've got to beat them on the boards and stop them from whipping us inside."

The Raiders won't be in the best of condition for their encounter with the Bucs. Center Tim Sisneros is still ailing with a strained lateral arch in one foot, and freshman guard Kim Malcolm has sustained a knee injury that may prevent him from playing at Johnson City.

"It's going to hurt us if Kim can't play," Earle said. "He has been the spark plug of our team this year, and with Donnie Hamilton and Mason Bonner out, Jimmy Martin is our only point guard."

Martin was the recipient of high praise from Earle, who said, "I wouldn't trade Jimmy for any guard in the league."

East Tennessee is coming off a 73-65 loss to Clemson Monday night, while the Raiders dropped a 96-94 heartbreaker to the University of Tennessee at Chattanooga.

Earle is not one to look past any opponent, but he has indicated Monday night's game with Tech will be a "barnburner."

"The New York Knicks would have trouble playing in Cookeville," Earle laughed.

It's no secret that any given team is capable of defeating another at the right time and place, but it's also past speculation as to whom the oddsmakers would go for in the Raiders' next two contests.

I'm no gambling man, but a team with aces like Freddie Allen, Jimmy Powell, Steve Peeler, George Sorrell and Sisneros wouldn't be hard to bet on.

Fred Allen

Witherspoon signs with WFL

Former MTSU football player, Ed Witherspoon, has signed a contract with the Chicago Fire football team of the newly organized World Football League, according to Bill Peck, Raider head football coach.

Witherspoon, a native of Knoxville, was a second-team All-Ohio Valley Conference selection as a junior in 1972 and combined with All-American Gary Bell to form a feared linebacker tandem for the Raiders last fall.

"I'm very happy to get this opportunity," Witherspoon said. "I'm going to give it my best try with Chicago."

Witherspoon signed as a free agent for an estimated $15,000.
