Habitat for Humanity 'shacks up' for better housing

'Housewarming' begins drive to improve housing conditions

JASON HUNT

News Editor

Murfreesboro Mayor Joe Jackson and Rutherford County Executive John Mankin cut the ribbon Saturday on a shack built by MTSU's Campus Chapter of Habitat for Humanity.

About 50 people braved the below-freezing temperatures Saturday afternoon to attend the the ribbon-cutting ceremony in the parking lot across from the Boutwell Dramatic Arts Building.

President of the campus chapter David Johnson began the ceremony.

"This shack, our home, will be our tool to open everybody's eyes to the problem of substandard housing," Johnson said.

According to Johnson, student members build the shack from donated wooden pallets, scrap lumber, cardboard and plastic. Students will take turns inhabiting the shack until they have raised $2,000 to help build homes for the homeless. "Half the money will go to build homes here in Rutherford County."

The other half of the $2,000 goal will go to Habitat for Humanity International to build new homes in Tlapa de Comonfort, Mexico, Johnson said.

Johnson challenged all organizations on campus to match his organization's donation of $1 per member. He also challenged families to donate $1 per person.

"Just $1 per person will make a huge difference," Johnson said.

After Bishop Ernest Newman of the Tennessee and Memphis Conferences of the United Methodist Churches said the opening prayer, Jack Goodrich, president of the Rutherford County Affiliate of Habitat for Humanity then took the podium and spoke about the problem of substandard housing in Rutherford County, in the U.S. and in the world.

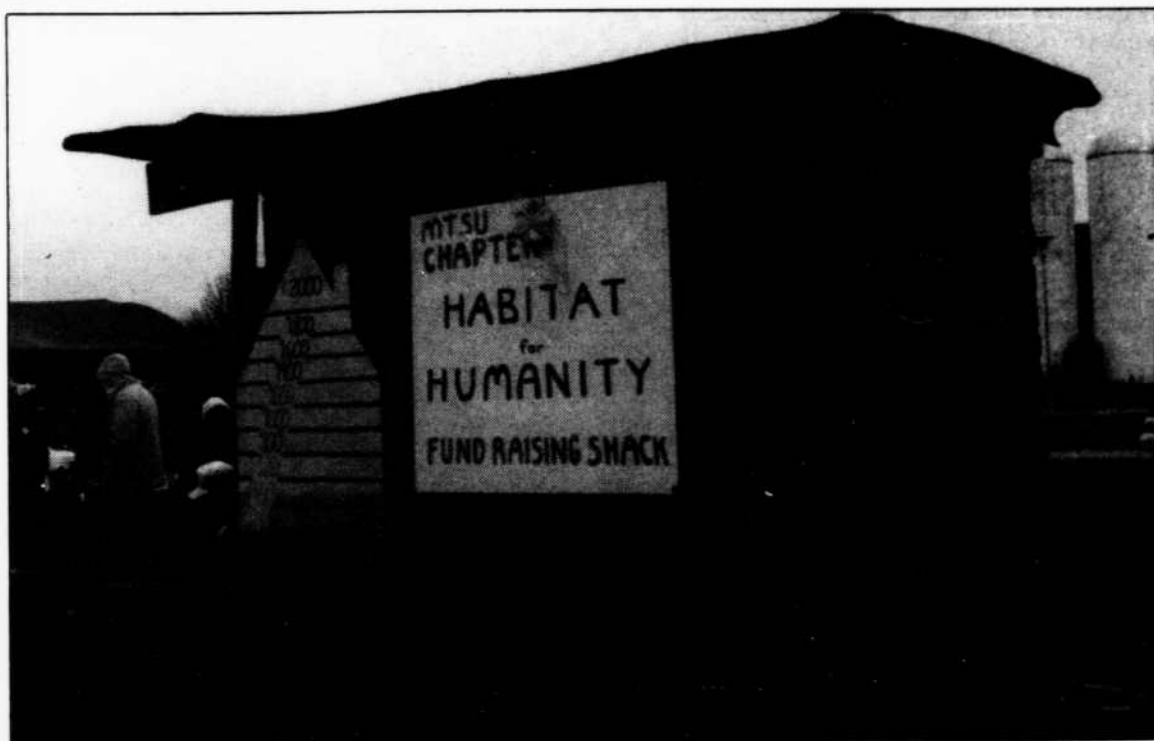

"Twenty million people in the U.S. live in substandard housing," Goodrich said. "One hundred thousand have no houses at all."

Goodrich commended the students for choosing January to inhabit their shack. "There are actually people in this country right now living in shacks like this," he said.

"I want the students to know how much this means to the city of Murfreesboro," Mayor Jackson said. He said that Murfreesboro rehabilitates as many low- and moderate-income homes as possible each year. "What they're doing will add to what we're doing," he said.

Committee begins hunt for new vice president

JASON HUNT

News Editor

The task of choosing a new vice president for academic affairs began Jan. 1 when a ten-member committee started reviewing candidates, according to Jerry Tunstill, committee chairman and vice president of business and finance.

"We are trying to narrow the field to four," said Tunstill. "We will present that list—in alphabetical order—to Dr. [James] Walker. He makes the final selection." Walker, the new president of MTSU, officially takes office Feb. 2.

The committee has received 39 applications to date, and committee members have been phoning universities to check references and credentials.

"It is never a good time to go through a search like this," Tunstill said. "Everyone is busy."

Tunstill described the position of vice president for academic affairs as "very critical, very important" to the university's ability "to produce quality product." The vice president is responsible for overseeing curriculum and budgets and is instrumental in attracting faculty, Tunstill added.

The position of vice president for academic affairs was last held by Dr. Robert Corlew. Since his retirement, Dr. Robert Jones has served as interim vice president. Jones is normally associate vice president for faculty affairs.

The position is important to students because it affects "the courses available and the type of instructors teaching them," Tunstill said.

Students at MTSU are diversified in their feelings about the crisis in the Persian Gulf and whether we should go to war.

Congress voted 52-47 Saturday to authorize President Bush to use military force in the Persian Gulf. This will impact students in many different ways, especially if the draft is reinstated.

Many students feel the U.S. is right to go to war. Jan Patterson, an early education major, feels it is better to go in now instead of waiting. "I believe we should go in there now, because we're going to have to go in there eventually and get them out of Kuwait," said Patterson.

Shawn Patten, a computer science major, agrees. "...They've been over there so long there is just no point in not going to war now. I would like to see a peaceful ending to it...I think it's a worthwhile cause, it's not just over oil."

John Hammer, a psychology major, believed we needed to get rid of Hussein. According to Hammer, the war will stop Hussein from starting more serious problems.

Other students have mixed feelings about the conflict. Some feel the waiting is the hardest part. Ronda Bowling, a mass communications major, has a brother in the Reserves who is serving in the gulf. "It's really hard to say, but I think something's going to happen....Everybody's predicting it's going to be over pretty quick. I don't know what [Hussein] is going to do, and it's driving me crazy."

"I just want my brother to come home."

Mike Morse is also unsure about our involvement in Kuwait. "I'm not sure if our roll over there is the right thing to do, not that Saddam Hussein is any great thing, and I think Kuwait should be free. I think we are rushing into things."

When asked about the draft and/or being called up, two male students gave differing opinions. "I feel it's good they're going, but if they call me up, I'm going to Mexico," said Davey Bennet, a music major.

Joseph Lamber had a different point of view. "Being a member of the Air National Guard, I don't always have to agree with what the government does, but I do have to do what they tell me to do. If I'm called to go overseas to the Middle East I'll have to go and do what my country says to do."

Many students, however, were completely opposed. Pre-med major Edie Riddey simply said, "I don't think we should be there."

"I think something will have to be done here pretty soon, in fact it is. I think we need to get it over, now that we've sent everybody over there we ought to fight them."

Jeff Back, Lori Boseman, Paige White, and Michelle Christopher were scheduled to spend the first night in the shack.

"If you can only print one thing about today," Johnson said as the ceremony broke up and the spectators scurried for their cars in the cold, "Print the challenge to organizations to donate just $1 per member."

Tax-deductible donations can be made at the shack or by mail to the MTSU Chapter Habitat for Humanity, 216 College Heights Ave., Murfreesboro, Tenn., 37130-4019.

The shack is built on a trailer so that it can be moved around for greater visibility. It is tentatively scheduled to be in the courtyard between Gore and Clements Halls Monday. Tuesday it will be on the square in Murfreesboro. And Wednesday it will be located at the Wesley Foundation across from Gore and Clement Halls.

War

Alison Wright, an education major, has friends overseas, like many students, and doesn't appreciate the government's actions. "I think it's kind of strange that they do things, and then they tell us about it. I don't particularly care for it."

Monica Dixon feels there are other solutions to resolve the problem. "I think it's a lot of bull, actually. Hussein doesn't need to have so much pride. I don't want to see war. I don't want to see my friends hurt, wounded or crippled. If we can resolve this problem peacefully, that would be the best solution."

There are students who are trying to keep an optimistic outlook. Jackie Mann summed it up:

"If we have a war it would be a tragic thing, but whatever happens, happens. Let's hope for the best."

What price will America pay for war?

The eyes of the world are on Baghdad. For in just a few short hours, the deadline for Iraq to remove their army from Kuwait will be upon them. We will then know shortly whether our country will plunge into war. Regardless of personal opinion, just about every American believes that we will. Some will welcome the confrontation with fierce patriotism; others dread the coming of the hour as if the lives of their family depended on it.

This will be the first war our generation will have to face. We will be the ones to know whether this conflict will prove to be "another Vietnam."

Whether or not this confrontation will be "another Vietnam" is not the issue. All wars have a common denominator--people, often innocent ones, will die.

Innocent people will die if this clash is allowed to take place. Iraq, a known supporter of several terrorist organizations, has vowed to strike in this cowardly manner if provoked. There has been speculation that attempts to poison water supplies of our cities will be made. And since we will be fighting in our enemy's backyard, you can be assured that the mass of innocent lives taken will be from Arab people.

What does all this mean? If we have learned anything at all from the Vietnam experience, it's that death is one of the unpleasant side effects of war. The issue is not whether we should or shouldn't go to war (it is almost certain that we will), but at what price are we willing to pay for our involvement? 10,000 American lives? 20,000? 30,000?

We will certainly pay dearly for our involvement. Maybe more than we ever imagined.

The question is not why should we remove Saddam Hussein, but how? It is now too late to hope that economic sanctions will succeed. And many people believe that our offensive will begin at 12:01 a.m., Tuesday, January 15th.

We will be sucked into the quagmire of Middle East politics. The scenario is set--we bomb Baghdad, Baghdad bombs Israel, Israel retaliates, the rest of the Middle East bombs Israel, and so on.

The decision to remove Saddam Hussein with military force at this time may prove to be disastrous for us, even if we come up victorious.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

Jan. 15 is the day we want to kick the Iraqis' butt. I am writing this article which is based on Iraqi's naked aggression to the entire civilized world. We as American citizens are proud of what we have done and contributed to this civilized world. I am tired of seeing these Arabs calling out for a holy war against our country. Also, anti-American sentiments are growing in these Arab nations. When you look at it from our point of view, we give more foreign aid to those countries than their own Arab countries, who are very wealthy, contribute to them. Each time those Moslem countries have an anti-western protest, what they do is take our American flag and burn it and the barbaric Islam fundamentalists take our innocent Americans and make them hostages against their will. This is a war between the rising Islamic-Fundamentalists vs. Peace Loving Democratic nations.

On the 15th we should stop this butcher of the Baghdad, known as Saddam Hussein, and wipe out his military capabilities. We should teach him the same lesson that we taught to Libya's madman, Quaddafi. On the final countdown, the 15th, we should stand behind Pres. Bush and the patriotic American soldiers, who defend the American interest in the Desert Shield. I assure what Pres. Bush said, that this will be a quick and fast conflict. This will not be another Vietnam War. We should fight a quick and brutal war which we could destroy the whole Iraq, so that way I am glad the whole world is behind us against this barbaric butcher. Once we accomplish our mission, we should throw pita bread and pork to those Iraqis as food distribution, because they will need it.

Professor says 'RECYCLE'

KIMBERLY WARREN
Special to Sidelines

It's the first day of class. The instructor enters. He is a slim, gray-haired gentleman who seems to be in his 40s. He is dressed in blue slacks and a white dress shirt. His postured walk suggests a very proud and determined individual. As he speaks, students seem to wonder what they have gotten into.

"Recycling a ton of newspaper saves 60 pounds of air pollution, 7,000 gallons of water, 4,100 kilowatts, $30 and 17 trees," says the professor. "Energy savings equals 65 percent. Yet Americans subsidize 98 cents to every dollar of logging done in the national forests."

By the end of the three-hour period of lecturing and watching movies, students are filled with pertinent environmental information.

MTSU professor Patrick Doyle has been teaching this environmental problems class for the past 10 years.

A native of South Dakota, Doyle says he has been interested in the environment since his high school days. Winning environmental essay contests and watching his mother recycle during World War II stuck in his memory.

Later, after military service and marrying, he and his family moved to Iowa, where he took a sales job. Dissatisfied with such a job, he decided to finish his bachelor's degree in biology and secondary education at Buena Vista College.

"I knew what I wanted to do was teach," Doyle says. "There wasn't any question."

Reminiscing about his first teaching job, Doyle remembers teaching biology, chemistry, physics and general science at an Illinois high school along with coaching junior high basketball and assisting the high school players.

Unprepared for instructing chemistry and physics, he decided to get his master's degree and choose MTSU because of its three year summer masters program.

During the summer of 1966, a position in the MTSU biology department opened. He applied and got it.

Since then his involvement with the environment has soared.

The newspaper recycling program which Doyle started 17 years ago has been responsible for recycling 5.35 million pounds of newspaper. Thirty-four thousand pounds of aluminum have been recycled since that program's beginning four years ago and over 40,000 pounds of office paper and cardboard has been recycled since the cardboard program was first initiated in January.

Doyle takes this business of recycling as seriously as he does the other environmental problems facing this Earth.

"It's a finite world we live in," he says. "There's only so much aluminum, oil and trees in the world."

Often frustrated when seeing soda cans in the trash on campus, he often lectures students sternly when he sees them throwing cans into the garbage rather than a recycling container.

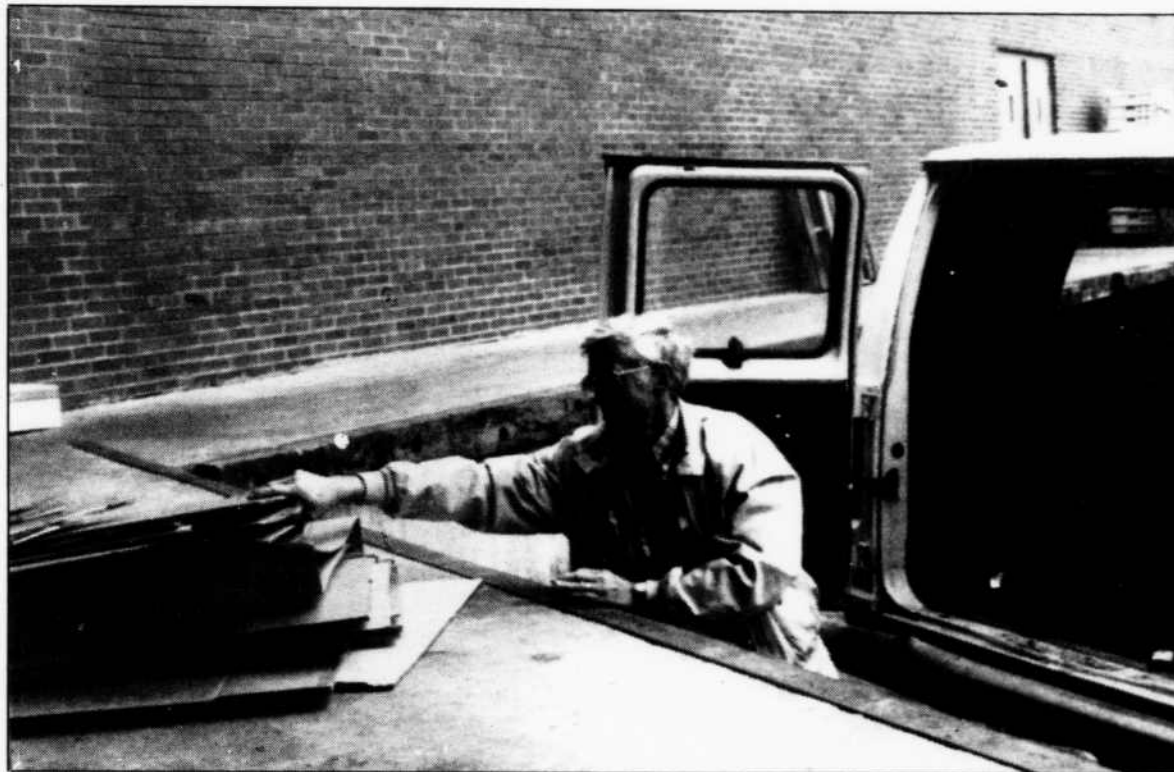

"How can anyone think about throwing away an aluminum can when 250,000 men and women are in Kuwait over an energy crisis?" he asks.

And what do aluminum cans have to do with the energy crisis and Kuwait?

"Every aluminum can thrown away requires 14 pounds of coal to make a new one," Doyle explains.

This means that with every can that is recycled, 95 percent of the energy is saved.

While Doyle uses some of these facts in most of the classes he teaches, he goes into detail in the biology upper-division course called Environmental Problems.

In the class, students become more aware of the problems facing the world and what each as an individual can do to help. This is accomplished by lectures, discussions, movies and field trips.

The old adage "seeing is believing" is taken to task in this class and in most cases proven. Students visit water treatment and sewage plants, landfills and industries and, most semesters, go on a three-day field trip which is based on the four major types of energy production in the United States.

During one of these field trips to a strip mine many years ago, Doyle recalls he was almost shot.

"It was a very large group of students," he remembers. "We had gone walking on a railroad track with our guide, who was J.W. Bradley. He was telling us of the illegality of this strip mine operation when everything just ground to a halt."

According to Doyle, a grubby-looking man came along, saw them and came back later with his brother and a shotgun threatening the guide, who just kept on taking pictures. The man said he would shoot the camera right out of his hands.

"At that time, I thought that would have been a neat trick to get the camera without the person," says Doyle. "Then, it got to be like a bad western. That old guy said he wasn't kidding. He would shoot him."

"Our guide says, 'Well, there's only one way to find out if your powder's turned dry.' This guy was so mad he was just shaking."

He says, 'Well, I know it's dry.' Then the two start acting like kids."

AFRICAN AMERICAN EXHIBIT: The Photographic Gallery in the LRC is now featuring the latest exhibit by photographer Peter Feresten, "What You Staring At White Boy." The exhibit, shot in Fort Worth, Texas, took over ten years for Feresten to complete and is scheduled to run through Feb. 7.

Exhibit celebrates black history month

The MTSU Photographic Gallery is now featuring the photographic documentary project of Peter Feresten through Feb. 7.

The project, "What You Staring At White Boy," is being shown in conjunction with MTSU's celebration of Black History Month.

According to Harold Baldwin, of the photography department, black exhibits are very hard to come by. In fact, preparations for this exhibit had to be made by long distance with Feresten, who is currently working overseas in Spain.

"What You Staring At White Boy" was photographed in the African-American neighborhoods of Fort Worth, Texas, and was in the works for ten years.

"In the age of integration and affirmative action, young African Americans were being drawn out of their ancestral home ground which is steadily changing into a transitional working class district without the social cohesion which had existed in the past. As community and religious leaders faded away, they are less and less frequently replaced by younger members of their cultural milieu," Baldwin said.

"Long-standing neighborhood institutions are being threatened with disintegration and emasculation. Feresten experienced and recorded as much of this culture as possible before it evaporates," he added.

Feresten's work may be viewed in the LRC on campus. The exhibit is open Monday through Friday 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Saturday 8 a.m. to noon, and Sundays 6 to 10 p.m. Exhibitions are free and open to the public.

Doyle

Our guide says, 'You step over the line.' The guy says, 'No, you step over the line.'

Our guide says, 'I wouldn't do that. That's trespassing.' After that, the man left. Our guide said he had known the man all his life and that he wouldn't pick on anyone his own size -- which was a real consolation after we all just about had a heart attack."

Doyle can recall a few other instances such as this but nothing quite as alarming.

Besides teaching students about the environment, Doyle is also active in helping others to be aware of problems facing the world and how all can participate in cleaning up the world.

He is responsible for getting the IGA grocery store in Murfreesboro to recycle bags and pay people for the ones they bring back. He has also been instrumental in getting recycling programs started at universities in New York, Florida, Kansas, Kentucky and Tennessee, not to mention giving tips to civic organizations in town on how to start a recycling program.

Delores Doyle said she supports her husband's obsession. She jokes that his death will come one day when he pulls over on the side of the road to pick up an aluminum can and the car runs over him.

Aside from his duties as a professor, Doyle has been director of MTSU's Center for Environmental Energy Education since January, lecturing to many groups, schools and organizations on recycling and the environment. He believes education is the best tool for change and hopes his teachings will remain in the minds of all to benefit our society in the end.

Many of his former students are involved with the environment.

"Seems a lot of people I've taught in the past are in the area," he says. "[They] can't get away from it."

Doyle said he has many opinions on the community surrounding this university.

He contends the water supply is in jeopardy. The whole situation with the landfill shows lack of leadership; zoning and developing are misused for personal gain; and there is too much emphasis placed on strict economics and not enough on the quality of life, he said.

Although Doyle sees many of the reasons for the status of the environment as political, he said he has no intentions of becoming a politician.

"I've thought about it," he says. "I'd be a lousy politician -- too frustrating."

Study abroad for credit

LISA VINSANT
Staff Writer

Imagine yourself walking the halls of Westminster Abbey, Salisbury Cathedral, Edinburgh Castle and the Palace of Versailles.

Imagine gazing at some of the world's most famous paintings and statues in the Louvre and imagine yourself breathing fresh mountain air and seeing breath-taking views of European countryside.

Now imagine yourself earning three hours credit for it all.

Sharon Scholtes, interior design program coordinator, has made all this possible by organizing a European study tour to be taken during the 1991 summer session. After two weeks of classes here in the United States, students will tour for three weeks (June 16 - July 6) in England, Scotland, Ireland and France.

Scholtes was involved with a similar tour in conjunction with the interior design program at UT two years ago, but this is the first trip of its kind to be made exclusively through MTSU's interior design program.

"We'll be talking about the historical significance and the design significance of the different places we'll be touring. They'll know what it is and why it is designed that way," said Scholtes. "The focus will be on architecture and design, but we'll do a lot of human interest things too," said Scholtes.

"We want to make their exposure to other countries as pleasant and easy as it can be. They'll see much more than if they went on their own," said Scholtes.

Senior Caroline Farris went on the trip two years ago with Scholtes; and when she heard that the trip was being offered again this coming summer, she didn't even think twice about signing up.

"It was wonderful! You couldn't believe what we saw!" said Farris. "If I didn't have the money, I would have taken out a loan."

"We stayed in suites, saw cathedrals and castles," said Farris. "It was really worth the money. For everything we did, it was unbelievable, and everything is paid for. It would probably have been about $10,000 if I had done it myself."

The trip is open to all MTSU students and non-students who sign up for the summer class. The cost is $3,380 but will be reduced by $100 if 25 people sign up to go. A $400 down-payment is due by Jan. 18. Checks should be made payable to Wright Travel.

For more information concerning the tour, contact Sharon Scholtes at 898-2094 or 898-2884. Her office is in the Ellington Home Economics Annex, Room 220.

Box office offers comedy, thrills and chills

WATCH OUT RUN DMC: From left, Steve Guttenberg, Ted Danson and Tom Selleck (also pictured on the wall in the background) prove that they are better fathers than they are rappers in "Three Men and a Little Lady." From New York to Old England, the trio do pretty much what they did the first time around. And, believe it or not, it still works. Besides "Three Men and a Little Lady," this holiday season produced other hit sequels including "Rocky 5" and the long-awaited "Godfather 3."

This year's holiday releases included a variety of comedies and dramas, offering something for everyone -- for a change.

Unfortunately, Hollywood producers are still turning out far too many sequels to original releases. Could they be telling us that they know they can sucker us into watching sequels rather than creating new material for us to digest.

One such sequel is Touchstone's "Three Men and a Little Lady."

Picture Peter Mitchell (Tom Selleck) in aviator's cap and goggles, racing across a rolling English landscape on an ancient motorcycle. The headmistress of a prim and proper girls' school is in the sidecar. In a chapel miles away, Sylvia (Nancy Travis) -- sexy mother of "baby" turned "little lady" -- is about to marry the wrong man because Peter can't say "I love you."

That gives you some idea of what to expect.

In "Three Men II," the baby is now 5-year-old Mary (Robin Weisman). She's still cute, the bachelors are still goofy, and they still have to hustle in the grand finale to keep their non-traditional family together.

Don't be fooled by the promo shots of Tom Selleck, Steve Guttenberg and Ted Danson doing a bad (as in pitiful) imitation of RUN DMC. "Three Men and a Little Lady" is one of those cute movies you'll love but hate to admit it.

-Jason Hunt

Misery

This movie, on the other hand offers viewers some real suspense and keeps you on the edge of your seat.

Imagine you are strapped to a bed, there's a 2X4 between your ankles, and a demented woman is looming above you, threatening to "hobble" you for misplacing a penguin. What do you do now? Bestselling novelist, Peter Sheldon (James Caan) has pondered this question many times by this climatic point in Stephen King's latest thriller --turned-motion-picture "Misery."

Both frightful and delightful, "Misery" centers around Sheldon who has been rescued from a near-fatal car accident by none other than his biggest(?) fan, Annie Wilkes (Kathy Bates). Annie is not your average "biggest fan." In fact, she is obsessed with Sheldon and wants him to dedicate his next novel to her.

Annie's wild mood swings and hilarious behavior have movie viewers on the edge of their seats one second and rolling with laughter the next. "Misery" is definitely one of King's best works yet!

Inside-outside attack looks strong

Teamwork paves way to Lady Raider's 30th victory over APSU

TONY J. ARNOLD
Sports Editor

Although a much improved Lady Governor basketball team stepped onto the Murphy Center court Saturday night, it wasn't enough to hold back a powerful inside Lady Raider attack in MTSU's 87-66 OVC victory.

Led by Priscilla Robinson's 23 points and Stephanie Capley's 21, the Raiders held off a pesky Governor team. The victory now extends the Raiders winning streak over Peay to 30 games. They have never found themselves on the losing end during the series which dates back to 1976.

"We're happy to have the win," Lady Raider head coach, Lewis Bivens said. "It's important to get off to a good start in this league."

It looked as if the game might be an easy blowout in the opening half as the Lady Raiders built a commanding 10 point lead at 19-9, seven of those points came from Robinson.

However, the play of APSU's Tabatha Koger and Tracy Mason would not allow things to get out of hand as they rallied their team to close the halftime gap to 36-33.

But the inside attack of MTSU quickly regained control in the second half scoring 15 of the first 18 points which kept APSU at a comfortable distance at 54-47 with 12:40 left in the game.

"Our guards did a good job getting the ball inside," Bivens said. "We did a good job getting the rebounds and moving the ball around in the second half."

APSU attempted to pack it down inside the paint to shut down the inside game but that proved to be costly as the outside game started to heat up.

Sophomore Kristi Brown found her touch as she scored five quick points, including a 3-pointer, to stretch the lead to 59-50.

By the time the clock read 4:35, Brown had nailed two more long range bombs and the lead had bloated out to 73-58.

"I wasn't looking for the shots, I was just open," Brown said. "They were playing a zone because we were scoring so much inside. That left me open and I just hit the shots."

The Lady Gov's found it difficult to neutralize the inside-outside attack as the duo of Capley and Robinson tallied 12 of the last 14 on the way to the victory which ended an uncharacteristic four game skid.

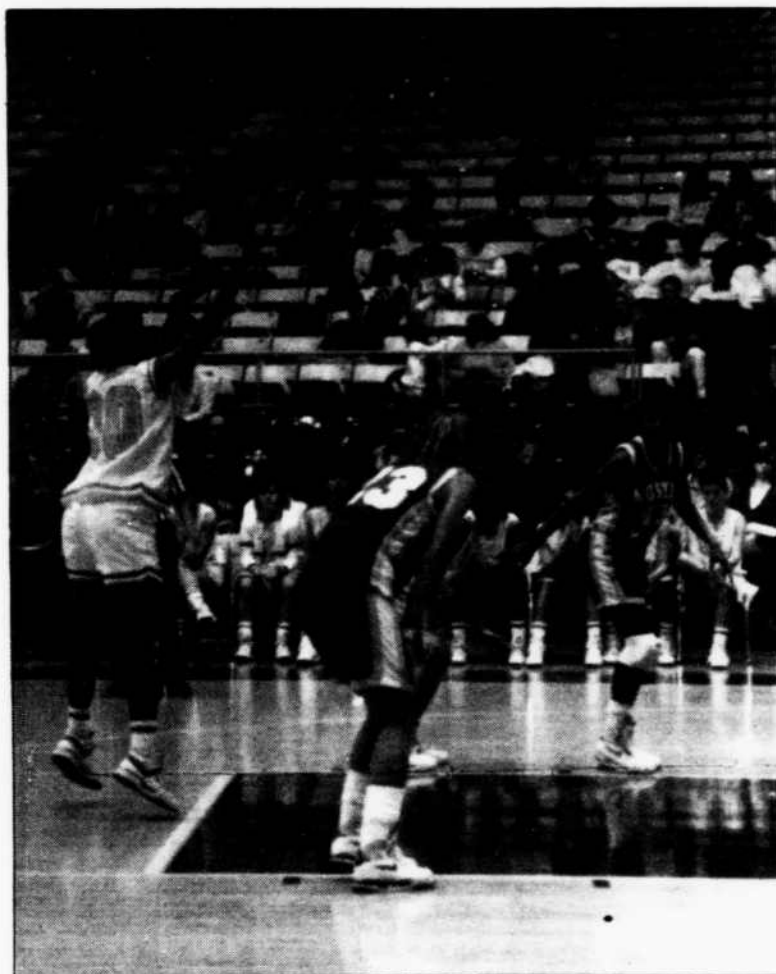

"You get tired of losing at some point," Capley explained. "I hate to lose."

"I have two OVC championship rings and I know what it takes. You have to be patient and move the ball around. We did that tonight and that's what it takes to win."

Capley and Robinson also did the job on the boards. Between the two they grabbed 23 rebounds (Capley tallied 15).

Brown finished with 16 points while Mary Smith, who became eligible after Christmas, had an impressive performance by scoring eight points, grabbing 7 rebounds, picking off 4 steals and dishing out 10 assists.

The Lady Raiders (6-8) hope to continue their winning OVC ways when the Lady Racers of Murray State (6-8) come to the Monte Hale Arena for a 5:30 showdown tonight.

UP, UP AND AWAY: MTSU freshman forward Priscilla Robinson puts up a free throw in Saturday's win over Austin Peay. Robinson led all scorers in the game with 23 points. She also nailed 9 of 10 free throw attempts.

MTSU looks flushed as Peay mounts comeback

TONY J. ARNOLD
Sports Editor

For 14 minutes Saturday night, it looked as if the MTSU Blue Raiders would blow Austin Peay off the court.

However, it was the Governor's squad who blew the Raiders away the last 26 minutes of the game as they posted a 80-72 victory over the stunned Raiders.

"It doesn't feel too good right now," said a disappointed Warren Kidd. "I felt they just hustled more than we did and we hurt ourselves with mistakes. Austin Peay just wanted it more than we did tonight."

It didn't appear the contest would be close at all as the Raiders came out of the gates running. Five minutes into the game, sophomore guard Raymond Davis hit his second 3-pointer to give the Big Blue a 16-2 lead.

Davis would later bury a jumper at the 10:59 mark to give MTSU its largest lead of the game at 22-6.

"We wanted to come out and play hard," MTSU mentor Bruce Stewart said. "We hustled more, but we didn't put them (Austin Peay) away. They did the things that a scrappy, hustling, team does to come back and win.

"Right now, we're not tough enough to put anyone away when we have them down and that proved costly tonight."

For the remainder of the half, Peay pounded the paint and behind center Tony Brown's 11 points, they outscored the Big Blue 28-14 to close the gap as the scoreboard read 36-34 at the half with MTSU leading.

Once again, it looked as if the Raiders would bag the game as they opened the second half with a 8-0 run to cushion the lead to 10 at 44-34. But Austin Peay's never-say-die attitude brought them back and with 11:01 left in the contest, Brown's short jumper gave them their first lead at 52-50.

"We jumped out on them, but got relaxed," Raider guard Tim Corder said. "When we did that, we let them back in it and from that point in it was a dog fight and they just wanted it more."

Battling for the lead, which changed back on several occasions down the stretch, APSU proved to have too much firepower and finesse.

Senior guard Donald Tevis knocked down two big 3-pointers in the final five minutes of play. The second came with 1:59 and hammered the final nail into the Raider coffin as Peay never trailed again.

"Tivis is a good shooter," Stewart later admitted. "You can tell he's a senior because he stepped forward and buried some big shots like a veteran has to do."

Peay sophomore Greg Franklin also proved to be focused as he nailed all eight of his free-throw attempts in the final 1:06.

Kelvin Hammonds paced the Raider attack with 17 points. Quincy Vance, who had two spectacular dunks, and Kidd tallied 14 each while Davis finished with 10.

Vance and Kidd both did the job on the boards with 16 and 13 rebounds respectively.

The Raiders must quickly sweep up the shattered pieces because OVC champion Murray state comes to town for tonight's 7:30 p.m. tip-off.

Murray's Racers are coming in with a 9-4 record (1-0 in OVC action with a win over APSU). They are led by big 6'8", 260-pound center Popeye Jones and sophomore guard Frank Allen who are among league leaders in several categories including scores and rebounds.

Raider fair well

TONY J. ARNOLD

MTSU went in to this past weekend's O'Charleys Tennis Classic hoping to make some noise.

That they did but they also took a few knocks with a win over Georgia Tech, but a loss to Tennessee damped their spirits a little.

The Georgia Tech win came Friday afternoon and went down to the wire. It came down to the No. 5 singles match between MTSU's David Thornton and Tech's Mark Ottinger.

With the score knotted at four matches apiece, the two battled tooth and nail. Thornton grabbed the first set 7-5 and then grabbed the match and team winner with a 7-6 tiebreaking win.

Other singles winners for the Raiders included No. 2 Nick Sheumack who posted a 6-3, 6-3 win over Jay Narenberg. Rick Stroller racked up the "W" in No. 6 singles action with a 6-1, 6-4 romp over Joe D'Eleo.

In doubles action the MTSU duo of Paul Gobel and Craig Haslam defeated the team of Scott Cotton and Jay Nerenberg in No. 1 action.

Sheumack and Thornton continued their winning ways by downing Paul Stevens and Ottinger in No. 2 doubles by a score of 7-6, 6-3.

"It was a very big win," head coach Dale Short said. "They have a very good team and it was a major shot in the arm for our program."

However, the glory would turn sour Saturday as the Volunteers of Tennessee dismantled the Raiders 9-0.

"It was a little frustrating," Short admitted. "They had 2,000 fans their and we were out of our comfort zone."

"They are the second ranked team in the nation but we didn't play to our potential. I think if we played them again we might be able to win a couple of matches."

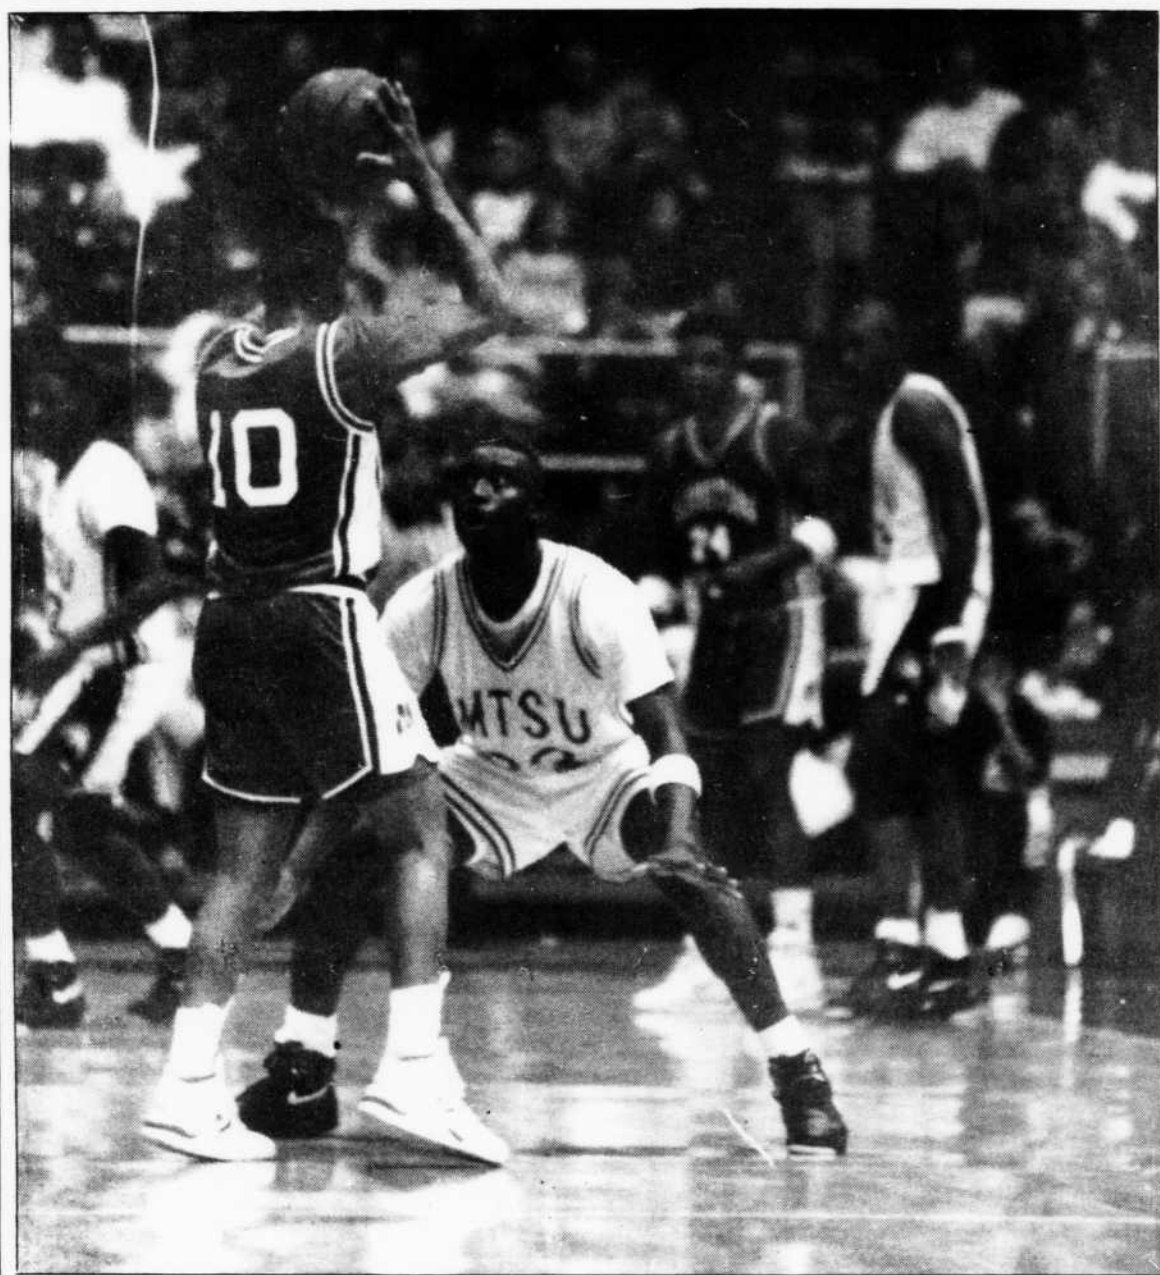

The Raiders continued action last night facing South Florida, however, due to deadline the results will have to be posted in Thursdays issue of Sidelines. The winner will take fifth place in the tournament.

Whether the Raiders win or lose however, Short is pleased with the opportunity as well as the performance he received during the tournament.

BRING IT AT ME: MTSU guard Raymond Davis appears to be daring APSU's Donald Tivis to make a move. Tivis did as he tallied 15 points including two big 3-pointers down the stretch in the Gov's 80-72 win.

MTSU forms taskforce for conference change

Will Raiders leave OVC?

TONY J. ARNOLD
Sports Editor

Rumors that MTSU might leave the OVC have proven to be true.

A special task force is being assembled to explore the possibility of moving into another conference.

Larry Counts, the Blue Raider Athletic Association executive director, is forming the group of 10-15 people. These people will then explore the university's options.

The group is made up of prominent Murfreesboro businessmen in addition to influential alumni of the university.

Kent Syler heads the list. Syler has served as U.S. Rep. Bart Gordon's campaign manager and manager of Gordon's Murfreesboro office.

Early speculation is that the Southern Conference is heading the list of conferences that are to be explored. Others include the Sun Belt and Metro along with the idea of forming their own league.

The talk surfaced last week after the Blue Raiders received notice that they will have only three home football games next season. Of these three games, Eastern Kentucky was not one of them which meant that the Raiders would have to travel to Richmond where they lost last season.

In past years, the MTSU-EKU game has had a tremendous impact on the OVC title with the home team winning the majority.

Due to the apparent unfairness, coupled with the growth of the conference, MTSU decided to look into the idea of departure.

MTSU students participate in local Karate tournament

Special to Sidelines

MTSU Karate instructors Dale Kirby and Bill Taylor held a Karate tournament for their students last December over the Christmas holidays.

The tournament was held at Bill Taylor's Bushido School of Karate in Murfreesboro. The students competed in both Kata (forms) and Kumite (free sparring).

Winners are listed below.

Women's Forms: 1st, Buffy Stachel; 2nd, Rhonda Hirst; 3rd, Shannon King; 4th, Annette Hammons.

On February 2, Taylor's Bushido School of Karate will present "Saturday Night Super Fights" at the Garden Plaza Hotel.

Todd Reed of Murfreesboro will go up against Barry Molloy.

The Main Event will have Murfreesboro native Scott Rooker pitted against Kevin Spears from Bowling Green, Ky.

There will also be several other exciting matches for the ISKA sanctioned events that begin at 8:00 p.m.

All seats are reserved and tickets cost $15. For information call 893-6003.
