Staff debugs new library computers

The long-awaited automated card catalogue is operational, but there is still some "fine tuning" left to do, according to Todd Library personnel.

Visitors to the library may be wondering if the system works, since signs frequently say it is down for repairs. The online catalogue has been open to the public since the end of last semester, but the system itself is still going through testing, said David Robinson, automation librarian.

"It's still going through some tests," Robinson said. "We're getting all the bugs worked out. When we discover that something doesn't work right in the system, we work to make some modifications."

When a problem does arise, the public terminals may be shut down to decrease the strain on the system while the problem is being resolved. This should result in smoother operation once the debugging period is over.

"The computer is still running; it is just shut down to the public," Robinson said. "It's not going down all by itself, we're taking it down. It's all part of having a new system."

The technical name for the system is the Project for Automated Library Systems, or PALS. Once in place, it will have 54 terminals located in the Todd Library, the

Help available for victims of sexual harassment

Special to Sidelines

[Editor's Note: A number of students in David Badger's Fall semester Newswriting class contributed to this article, including Darlene Gray.]

While there may be flaws in the way sexual harassment complaints are handled, recourse is available and changes may be on the way.

If you believe you are or have been the victim of sexual harassment, there are several options available. These include filing a complaint with the university or taking legal action.

The MTSU student handbook refers students with questions about sexual harassment to Affirmative Action Officer Forrestine Williams, in room 116 of the Cope Administration Building.

There are other places on campus to go for advice, including the June Anderson Women's Center, in room 206 of the James Union Building. However, Tennessee Board of Regents Policy no. P-080 does call for all sexual harassment complaints to be investigated by the school's Affirmative Action Officer.

Under the "informal procedure," the officer is required to attempt to have the "aggrieved individual," sign a specific charge, according to TBR guidelines. The officer then meets with both parties "for the purpose of resolving the charge informally."

Within 20 days of receiving the charge, the officer is then required to submit a report with recommendations to the university president, the statewide affirmative action officer and both parties involved. If evidence of the charge is found, the president has the option to meet with the charged party to resolve the problem by agreement.

If no such agreement can be reached, formal procedures can then be put into effect, which include a full hearing on the matter. The only time such action has been taken in the school's history was in 1989 when a student filed a complaint against former English Professor Reza Ordoubadian, after first filing legal charges against the professor.

As a result of those charges, Ordoubadian was dismissed

Sexual Harassment at MTSU Last in a Series from his tenured position with the university.

Outside the university, a suit may be filed in civil court, according to Murfreesboro Attorney Larry Trail. In addition, depending on the gravity and nature of the situation, the victim could file assault and battery charges.

The majority of sexual harassment cases never get to court, Trail said. A study by the Department of Veterans Affairs backs that claim, showing that most victims of harassment do nothing about it.

However, Trail also warns about the danger of someone being accused "unjustly."

When I consider a client's problem, I have to determine whether the information is in fact true," Trail said. "This is very difficult, but in this situation, the past character of the individual seeking advice is the only criteria to go on."

There may be changes in the way the problem of sexual harassment is handled at MTSU. Currently, the Faculty Senate's Student Affairs Committee and the Status of Women Committee are addressing the matter.

Charlene Key, professor of developmental math studies and chair of the committee, said the group is scheduled to issue recommendations on the subject at the end of this semester.

"I want to emphasize that we have no intention of doing anything against board guidelines," Key said. "There may be some avenues that could be informally addressed on campus."

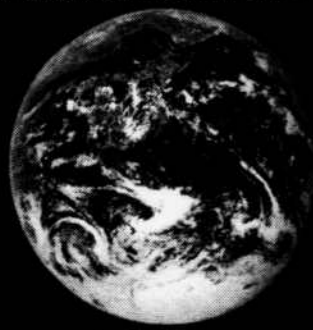

According to Key, one possibility is putting a trained person in each department to aid students, though she added that she had "no feel for a chronic sexual harassment problem," and felt that there was a limited number of students and faculty involved.

"In my day-to-day world, I don't hear anything about it," she said.

Women's Center Director Rebecca Rice said that increased education is one step that could reduce sexual harassment.

"What my office would like to see is that each of us become more educated," Rice said. "We don't need to educate young people when they're in college. We need to educate them while they're in high school and as small children. We need to be patient with each other while we learn. And when possible, encourage each other to modify our behavior if it would make someone else comfortable and to speak up if it would help solve problems at MTSU."

The PALS system is expected to be installed in phases over the next 12 to 18 months. While the card catalog will not be immediately removed, there will be no additional filing of cards into it beginning this semester.

The automation program doesn't stop at the online catalogue. The library has future plans to install a laser scanner and bar codes to improve circulation.

The books will have a "smart bar code" label on them, consisting of the book's title, the author and the call number. Students' IDs will also have a bar code. Library staff will be able to check out books using the laser scanner and the bar codes, saving students the trouble of filling out the current cards. ■

Primal screams in class

(College Press Service) — A huge, 1,600 student introductory psychology class at the university of Toronto was disrupted when many students, heeding a cue given them at 12:25 p.m. on Nov. 21, began shouting as loudly as they could.

Students said they had been organized by a classmate who had seen a Molson beer ad in the Varsity, the campus paper, urging readers to "scream (a Molson slogan) out at the top of your lungs during a psychology lecture." Professor Katherine Covell was particularly upset by the incident because the big class has been difficult to control all year.

"The first day, everybody was doing the wave," she said. ■

Loan laws create chaos

From Staff Reports

Students nationwide, including some at MTSU, are getting only half the financial aid money they expected this month, caught in a surprise because the federal government was late telling campus aid offices what to do.

Automatic cutbacks, caused by the budget reconciliation bill signed by President Bush in Dec. 19, mean that students with Stafford or Supplemental Loans for Students guaranteed on or after Jan. 1, 1990, will be receiving their money in two payments. Since the bill was signed so late, letters notifying schools of the change were not sent out until Dec. 23.

The result has been what one observer called a "frenzy" in many campus aid offices around the country.

"It's created a real problem," said Winston Wrenn, MTSU's director of financial aid. "The second disbursement is coming in March, but they need the money now."

According to the new rules, installments can not exceed more than one-half of the loan and the second installment cannot be paid before one-half of the loan period has passed. The new regulations are part of an effort to reduce the number of people who default on their student loans.

For example, a student who is guaranteed a $1,000 loan for this semester would have already received $500 and would receive the second $500 midway through the semester.

Wrenn said close to 70 students here were affected by the changes.

"The day I registered, my loan wasn't there," said MTSU Junior Michael Drabicki. "I went to my bank the next day and found out that only half of it was there and the other half would be sent later."

Since he had not been notified in advance, Drabicki said he had to scramble to pay his bills and his tuition.

"I was expecting the money," he said. "So my rent became late and I had to use my food money for books."

Some students have filed deferments, giving them until Feb. 8 to pay their full tuition. But since the remainder of the loans won't be in by then, problems are expected, according to Wrenn.

However, he says the university is working to make sure no one is "left out in the cold."

"Traditionally, we've never let anyone leave because of payment problems," he said. "I don't believe we're going to let that happen. We'll take every case and deal with it on an individual basis."

"The whole thing is stupid," said Judy Simmons, financial aid administrator at Midwestern State University in Wichita Falls, Texas. "I have nothing against trying to lower defaults, but we're working like crazy to do that. It irks me because the students are the ones who get hurt." ■

OPINION

Todd Library has bugs to work out in computer

Here we go again.

A new computer system has been installed in the library to assist students in finding materials quickly and efficiently. At least that's the plan.

The new system, named Project for Automated Library Systems, otherwise known as PALS, has been anticipated by students and faculty alike for a long time.

Unfortunately, now that we have this state of the art system, we still won't be able to use it immediately.

There exists this little problem of what is called "debugging" in the computer biz.

Now don't be discouraged. This is a common problem for a new system; it just may take a little while.

How long? Well, no one knows for sure. One thing is for sure — those students who have waited for this thing won't be around to make use of it.

All that this debugging business means is that the computer will not be operational as of yet. This is what is called "down time" in the computer biz.

But not to worry. When this thing is finally cranked up, it will be the greatest improvement MTSU has seen since the advent of the Baby Raider Burger.

It won't be as edible as the Baby Raider Burger; then again, maybe it will be. It will certainly be a heck of a lot more useful to students and won't cause as much indigestion.

While this "great leap forward" is welcome, the library staff shouldn't forget that even the best plans can go awry. Although records of new books will be put into the computer system, no further cards will be placed in the card catalogue starting this semester.

But when that computer goes down, and no doubt it will, there will be no record of any books bought after Jan. 1. We'll have the first "Flying Dutchman" library with mysterious books floating among the shelves.

Progress is good, but let's leave ourselves a backup system.

WHY THE CAGED BIRD SINGS

Double standards mar racial harmony

Black leaders, white liberals, the news media and government officials do great damage to racial harmony. Decent people must respond by demanding honesty, morality and responsibility before we find our reservoir of racial goodwill completely depleted.

Racial double standards are part of the problem. In Bensonhurst, N.Y., last year, white youths set upon Yusef Hawkins, a black 16-year-old, and murdered him. And back in 1986, in Howard Beach, N.Y., white youths attacked Michael Griffiths, who went to his death trying to flee from them. These despicable racist incidents received nationwide attention and rightful condemnation.

Other cases

In 1986, in Winder, Ga., a black student killed a white high school principal. In College Park, Ga., a gang known as the "Bad Black Boys" shot a white youth to death. Neither of these racial incidents received wide media attention or roused moral outrage from black leaders or white liberals. In the case of the murdered white principal, the main concern of the Southern Leadership Conference leader, the Rev. Joseph Lowery, was that the black youth receive a fair trial.

What can we say about people who exhibit moral indignation at a racist white attack but remain silent when there is a racist black attack? There is only one answer: hypocrisy and moral bankruptcy. What can we say about newsmen who go to great lengths to publicize white-on-black murders but remain relatively silent about black-on-white crime? Again, nothing less than dishonesty and deception.

Earlier this year, ABC-TV's Ted Koppel provided us with theater by airing a town-hall meeting on race. A Howard University psychologist announced that drugs in black neighborhoods are part of a white plot to destroy blacks. That's absurd; what's worse, she was applauded and Koppel, out of ignorance or fear of being labeled racist, didn't take her to task. Using her "expert" reasoning, shared by others, fat people can blame supermarkets for plotting their destruction; gamblers can blame casinos for their addiction; and alcoholics can blame distilleries for their plight.

On college campuses, black professors are permitted to refer to whites as "honkies" or genetically inferior, but a white professor who merely assigns a reading critical of affirmative action can be censured by his colleagues for being racially insensitive. Some colleges single out black students for cash prizes, as high as $500, for maintaining C grades. White high school teachers, seeking transfers to better schools, are turned down in favor of black teachers, unless their specialty is math or the sciences, where a shortage exists.

If racial double standards were only despicable, we might breathe a collective sigh of relief. But official double standards produce the equivalent of highly combustible kindling waiting for a racial arsonist to set it afire. White people, who would otherwise ignore racists like the Klan and Skinheads, are now giving them a sympathetic ear. As such, we shouldn't be surprised to see more people like David Duke winning political office.

Fair play

For the most part, Americans are fair-minded people. White people have no problem plunking down hard cash to see: basketball games where sometimes 100% of both starting team members are black; or football games where 55% of the players are black; or boxing matches where the black fighter brains the white fighter every time. None of this unevenness generates the racial resentment of racial quotas and double standards because there is the perception of fair play.

Multi-ethnic societies are inherently fragile. To preserve civility, we condemn those who, through demagoguery, ignorance and self-serving monetary gain, destroy racial goodwill. We begin with non-negotiable demands for evenhanded treatment.

Letters to the Editor

Other problems besides racism

Dr. Hillman innocent until proven guilty

To the Editor:

I'm responding to several letters and comments made by people I've spoken to or overheard.

First, I most sincerely agree with David Randolph in his "celebration" of the races. Though our own race (being white) has done some hideous and unspeakable things, I will not run around denouncing what I am, which also includes being a woman. So let's just celebrate what we are, which is human. Because, face it folks, we're all the same color inside.

Which brings me to the next letter. Andy Wright, relax, I do not think you are racist. I most definitely am not, and you ask some valid questions. There are way too many "groups" that denote a racial preference, be it blatant or understood, i.e., Masonic organizations, Greeks, etc. Racism does go both ways.

However, to Mr. Wright and the rest of the population, I would like to suggest that we begin to correct the problem from within ourselves. We can all stand to be a little (a lot?) more open-minded. Before you go around saying, "Skinhead A-----s" do a little bit of research and find out that real skinheads originated in '69 from the Rockers and Mods in Britain. I listened (and still do) to Ska music, an upbeat Reggae, and a good portion of them were black (and still are). So think about that before you yell "Nazi" out a window at the next bald guy you see.

It's time for people to realize that we all come from one race; the HUMAN race. The past is just that — past. Can we please move on and, since we're all here now, deal with the problems of the present, such as the environment or the education system? Instead of the leaders and the media being heard, for a change can we all be heard?

Has the Sidelines adopted a slogan of "Slaughter a Teacher per semester"? It would most certainly appear so with the latest smear on Dr. Ralph Hillman.

It has always been my understanding that, under the U.S. Constitution, an accused has the right to confront his/her accuser. Not only that, your lengthy article states that the girl did not want to press charges; she only requested some advice. Who is spreading gossip, where is the leak in confidentiality? Apparently, though, there is a Sidelines rule that anything can be said against anyone without any type of reprisal. Good going, Sidelines!

Ralph Hillman is a friend of mine and of my family; and I strongly resent your insensitivity toward a person and his reputation. (Even I, as a 66-year-old overweight grandmother, get a great big bear hug each and every time we meet! That's Ralph's way.) According to your article, the accused has admitted the accusations; however, not publicly or in a court of law. In fact, it is my understanding that your reporter did not even talk to Dr. Hillman to get his version of the incident. If the girl's name is kept confidential, then so should the teacher's name be kept in confidence. Why the double standard?

I'm not defending Dr. Hillman's actions — I wasn't there — although different people have different ideas of harassment; nor am I denying a student's right to complain about something she doesn't like. I am defending a teacher's right to fair treatment and condemning actions of a newspaper stomping on a person without making any attempt to get the other side of the story. Whatever happened to "innocent until proven guilty"?

Nowhere in your lengthy "dissertation" did I see the word "alleged". Isn't it about time you cleaned up your act?

Slogan increases awareness

To the Editor:

As-Salaam-Alaikum. (peace unto you)

First of all I would like to thank all of you for replying to the previous article concerning this "Black Thing". It lets me know that you are listening, and even more that you are concerned enough to voice your opinion. I commend you on your courage. However, it occurred to me upon reading all of the various responses, that you still don't understand. So I will try once more to enlighten you. I will not attempt to explain or apologize about or for the slogan "It's A Black Thing, You Wouldn't Understand." I would however, like to offer my philosophy as to why it is important to have slogans such as that.

The purpose for the slogans is to increase cultural awareness and pride. You see our people sometimes suffer from an inferiority complex, low self-esteem, and defeatist attitudes perpetuated by racism and our lack of knowledge concerning our rich heritage which dates back to the Garden. These attitudes have been passed down for generations not only to the victims but an equally destructive philosophy has also been passed down to the perpetrators. This type of poisonous attitude must be eradicated on both sides of the issue. Increasing Black Pride is one method of going about this, and that is why it is important to derive slogans such as this.

To Mr. Lampley, as far as the triviality of the "matter of skin pigmentation perception," perhaps to some it may be a trivial matter, but to those of us who are still followed around in supermarkets and department stores, and who still face racism on a higher, yet masked level simply because of a "matter of skin pigmentation perception," it is a much more serious issue. I am also for racial harmony and brotherhood, but before we can achieve this harmony we must change some attitudes. Which brings me to Ms. Barnes.

The slogans that we so proudly wear across our chests are designed to dissolve the feelings of inferiority that YOU like so many Afro-Americans feel on a daily basis. Perhaps it is all a matter of perception. I myself feel that people who display the confederate flag on their vehicles are promoting racism, as where many may see this as simply a compendium of a rebellious generation.

We all must work toward the complete annihilation of racism on all levels and on both sides. If you feel that our efforts are detrimental to our common goals we are always open for suggestions. And if you are truly interested in making a change then begin by educating yourself. There are a number of cross-cultural courses here at the university.

All we really want is equality — politically, socially, economically, and mentally. Before we, as a nation, can transform the "jangling discords into a symphony of brotherhood" (MLK), the mind-crippling attitudes perpetuated by racism must be eradicated in an expeditious manner, and we will achieve this goal by "any means necessary".

Assistant supports Hillman

To the Editor:

I am writing in regard of the January 18, 1990 issue of Sidelines in which a sexual harassment charge has been filed against Dr. Ralph Hillman.

First, I would like the student body to know that Dr. Hillman is one of the finest speech professors that MTSU has to offer. Second, he has always acted in a professional, yet friendly manner to all his students (male as well as female).

After I heard about the sexual harassment charges against Dr. Hillman, I took a position as a voice and diction assistant for him. I took the job because I firmly believe that Dr. Hillman would not risk his reputation as a voice professional to perform some of the acts claimed against him.

Dr. Hillman has not only worked with students, but with top notch newscasters such as Chris Clark, Brenda Blackman, Debbie Allen, and Jim Watkins. I find it hard to believe that he is being reprimanded for giving his affection. I was thankful to know someone did give a damn about me and my future, unlike many students and professors I know.

I don't necessarily think that all the actions claimed against him are false, but perhaps blown out of proportion or a little exaggerated.

For students who haven't had voice and diction, it is a little difficult to understand that at times it is necessary to touch students to teach them proper posture and breathing techniques.

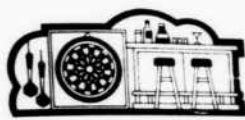

Regardless of the truth to the accusations made, the damage to Dr. Hillman's job and home life are extensive. No student in his class is as relaxed as in the past. Those who don't know him are judging him on the publicity of the case. I'm also sure his wife and children are suffering tremendously.

I hope that if these students are telling the truth that they have evidence to back up their accusations. Otherwise, one of MTSU's better professors could lose his family, friends, and his job.

Student combines talents in art, engineering

CYNTHIA INGRAM

Staff Writer

Electro-mechanical engineering students use many tools and intuitive skills to perform their assigned tasks. Anthony Williams, an MTSU transfer student from Memphis State, has the characteristics of an engineering student but also the eye of an artist.

Williams' artistic abilities developed while attending his local elementary school in Memphis. His teachers and fellow students encouraged him in his endeavors.

"My teachers helped me pursue art, but more importantly, they helped me to appreciate it," recalls Williams.

Williams' classmates also encouraged his artistic development — by paying him to draw their favorite comic book characters.

But his accomplishments are not limited to capturing Spiderman's descent down a brick wall.

In addition to being featured in the pages of MTSU's biannual magazine, Collage, Williams' work has received exposure in various newspapers. His artwork has also been displayed in prominent art shows and galleries.

Williams' studio is located in his home in Nashville. There, he creates his masterpieces which include such art forms as air brush, abstract, impasto, and stained glass.

"These are outlets that I use to express myself," he explains. "My goal is to make people more aware of art."

Williams is taking his ambition and traveling to the top in his field of study. After completing his graduate work, Williams wants to pursue a doctorate in a specialized field of engineering.

However, art was not his choice of a career goal upon entering college. "In the spirit of myself, I packed up and moved on to the engineering field. I like to incorporate ideas such as physical and applied sciences. Engineering is ideal for me," he says.

He has a determined motto: "When I set out to do something, it is as good as done."

Williams' varied interests and activities take even more time out of his already demanding schedule. Williams notes, "I am more of an art appreciator than an artist. I collect art, listen to classical music, and enjoy ballet." He is also involved in martial arts, body-building, and lap swimming.

He believes that his strength comes from strong personal beliefs. "I have a strong belief in God," says Williams. "That is the foundation to my life and allows me to strive for excellence. He [God] is the driving force. God and my family — that is what motivates me."

Williams' ambition, talent, and open mind are sure to guide him throughout his remaining years at college and for the rest of his life. ■

Paving the way for C-SPAN

DENA MASH

Staff Writer

A textbook written in 1985 will still contain a Berlin Wall, a military dictator in Panama, and probably will not mention global warming — but with C-SPAN, students can still be exposed to the most current issues in the classroom.

Dan McMurray, associate professor of sociology, hopes to forge the way for use of the C-SPAN public affairs cable television network at MTSU within the semester.

"We don't think anything of using a textbook in 1990 that was written in the 1960s," says McMurray. "The impact [of C-SPAN] on the classroom will be ten times as great as when MTSU got its first movie projector."

McMurray was one of 33 instructors selected from a field of 1,800 to attend C-SPAN's Winter 1990 Seminar for Professors in Washington D.C., Jan. 15-16.

"I had to write an essay telling how I would use C-SPAN in the classroom," explains McMurray, the only sociologist in attendance.

According to McMurray, C-SPAN interviews authors of current books and then has a call-in show. The network also televises U.S. congressional sessions, other political events and breaking news stories.

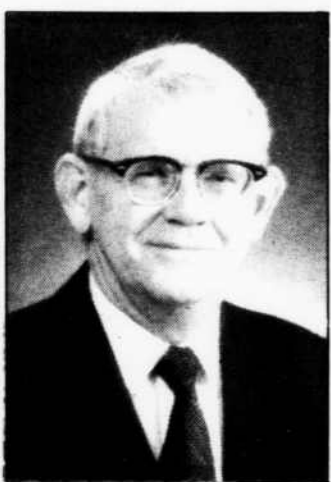

"You can't call in and get them to cover [an event]," McMurray says. "I was terribly impressed with their sincerity."

"If they cover pro-abortion, they cover the other side. They aren't selective. They don't do documentaries."

MTSU does not have the capability to receive C-SPAN live at present, notes McMurray, who is preparing a report for campus administrators on the necessary adjustments needed to receive the network.

"I think this semester will see us having C-SPAN available. I can order C-SPAN videotapes today and get them next week."

The tapes range in length from less than one hour to two hours and cost between

Dan McMurray

$17 and $35, according to McMurray.

Political science and history instructors have also expressed interest in the 11-year-old cable network, McMurray says.

"America in the 1990s and America in the 1960s are as different as America before and after World War I," observes McMurray. "I'm using a textbook that doesn't have the words homeless, hunger or street people."

"I'm excited about being an icebreaker. It's a new tool. Why shouldn't we use all the tools we can?" ■

Stone Roses, Jungle Bros, McCulloch good music picks

The Stone Roses

THE STONE ROSES

Silvertone Records

O.K., I have no excuse. This is an album that just fell through the cracks last semester. But although this album has been out awhile, I think it is such a strong debut that it needs to be reviewed, regardless of how late.

The Stone Roses hail from Manchester, England, where they are receiving lots of hype. Many people who are mourning the death of the Smiths are looking to the Stone Roses for their replacement.

Although some of the riffs do resemble the Smiths, the Stone Roses do have a sound of their own. They are a very confident foursome whose guitar-oriented music gives a new meaning to psychedelic soul. Their wah-wah guitars, slithering backbeats and great pop melodies provide great tracks like "I Wanna Be Adored," "Elephant Stone," and several others.

The major difference between the Stone Roses and the majority of Europe's post-modern scene is that the Stone Roses are actually happy. These are songs of mystery which celebrate youth, independence and life in general.

Now that they have a stunning debut album under their belt, it should be interesting to watch them develop.

Jungle Brothers

DONE BY THE FORCE OF NATURE

Warner Bros.

Ever since I heard Grandmaster Flash rap "The Message" back in 1982, I knew that rap music could be both raw and clever. But due to acts like 2 Live Crew, L.L. Cool J, and Tone Loc, rap's wit was traded for boasting and sexism. But now all of that is changing with innovative acts whose ideas are stronger than their egos.

Public Enemy is political, Boogie Down Productions is philosophical, De La Soul is psychedelic, and the Jungle Brothers are spiritual, incorporating all three attributes above. The Jungle Brothers' first album, Straight out of the Jungle, was a major influence on De La Soul. Both groups combine house music with hip-hop, proving that black consciousness can be creative and fun.

The Jungle Brothers' new album, Done by the Forces of Nature, is the perfect recording to take hip-hop into its second decade. "Black Woman" is a long overdue song which finally shows women the respect they deserve. Lines like "Though some of your ways to men are odd/ You are proof that there is a God" and "Sent from heavens and skies above/ Black woman it's you that I love" are rarely heard in the world of rap. The proud African message in "Acknowledge Your History" is filled with memorable lines as "All you read about is slavery/ Never 'bout the black man's bravery."

Please see REVIEWS page 8

Done by the Forces of Nature is a landmark in hip-hop because of its streetwise celebration of sexuality and spirituality.

Ian McCulloch
CANDLELAND

Sire/Reprise Records

Echo & the Bunnymen broke up in the peak of their success. After the band's demise, I knew that vocalist Ian McCulloch still had plenty of thoughts to share with the world. What I did not know was just how humble he could be when sharing those thoughts.

Candleland sounds like Echo & the Bunnymen in many ways. McCulloch still mixes pop with drama which often reminisces of Jim Morrison. McCulloch still has that boyhood wonder about him. And most of all, he still writes dreamy tunes and lyrics.

Producer Ray Shulman (of Sugarcubes fame) takes full advantage of McCulloch's dreamy voice and puts it center stage, with everything else being secondary.

Candleland's lyrics often reflect McCulloch's feelings about the Bunnymen's end. In "The Flickering Wall," he stares at his memories trying to recall "What it is I started after" and "choked in the wonder of it all." In the title track, he says, "Get your handful of remembrance / for you to sprinkle through your life." These are the best songs to come from McCulloch since 1984's Ocean Rain.

Basically Candleland shows that Ian McCulloch can still keep his head held high while displaying true humility. ■

Lady Raiders flush Peay into OVC basement Gipson, Capley lead Lady Raider steamroller attack

MTSU's Lady Raiders secured their first OVC win of the season Monday evening, crushing the Austin Peay Lady Governors 85-47.

"We just wanted a win, that's all," said Raider head coach Lewis Bivens. "We knew what we had to do. We knew we had to get out of the cellar."

MTSU shot a season-high 53.3 percent from the floor for the game as all 11 Lady Raiders broke into the scoring column. Junior forward Pippa Gipson led the Lady Raiders with 21 points and 11 rebounds.

"Pippa's a warrior," said Bivens. "She plays hard every moment. She goes after every rebound. If she was 6-3, they'd outlaw her. I can't say enough good things about her."

Junior forward Stephanie Capley became the second Lady Raider on the night to post a double-double against Peay, scoring 15 points and snaring 13 rebounds. Freshman guard Kristi Brown added 13, including three treys, and junior center Becky Hall netted 10 in the team's best performance of the season. Things didn't start out well for the Lady Raiders, however.

The Lady Gobs took a 9-0 lead in the opening moments of the game, and appeared to be well on their way to posting their first victory over MTSU. That's when the Lady Raider offense finally awakened.

MTSU outscored Peay 16-2 to take a five-point lead midway through the first half, and never looked back.

APSU managed to keep the game relatively close during the opening moments of the second half, but the Lady Raiders would have none of it.

MTSU fell upon Peay like a pack of wolves. The

MTSU hits road for meet MTSU 0-4 in OVC

MTSU's Lady Raider track team hits the road Friday to participate in Louisville, Kentucky's Mason Dixon games this weekend.

The Lady Raiders placed six athletes in three events and placed in both relays at the invitational last year. This year, MTSU will participate in both the open competition on Friday evening and the invitational on Saturday, fielding a squad that is much faster and stronger than last year's.

Competing in the high jump will be Krista Hare, Koko Rowley and Veronica Tipton. Hare, with a 5-5 jump in a meet earlier this season, has already exceeded the 5-1 $\frac{3}{4}$ jump she posted at Mason Dixon last year.

Michelle Welch, who placed third at Mason-Dixon last year in the long jump, will compete in the event again this year along with Rowley and Kyieta Beason. Welch's best of this year, 19-6 $\frac{1}{4}$, is two feet better than the mark she posted in last year's Games, and better than last year's winning mark of 19-4 $\frac{3}{4}$, posted by former Lady Raider Ursula Langford.

Rowley will team up with Marsha Cleveland and Latonia Jackson in the 55-meter high hurdles. Cleveland's time of 8:28 in the first meet of this year betters her mark of 8:53 at Mason-Dixon last year.

Welch and Jackson will repeat in this year's 800-meter relay, teaming up with Rowley and Jennene Cody. Welch and Cody will also participate in the 55-meter dash, the only event in which the Lady Raiders did not place at Mason Dixon last year.

Elissa Davis returns to Mason Dixon as the only member of last year's 4th-place 1600-meter relay team. Davis will be joined by Welch, Leigh Weathers, and Linda Brewer.

Also competing for MTSU in the men's field will be William Beasley, a triple jumper ranked 7th in the nation in 1989. Beasley's best-ever jump of 55-2 $\frac{3}{4}$ is nearly one foot better than the Mason-Dixon record and Beasley is expected to win the event. ■

The MTSU Blue Raiders and the Austin Peay Governors, the pre-season favorites to finish first and second in the OVC this season, found themselves battling for the OVC basement Monday night.

The Raiders dropped their third straight game to Peay in the contest, 67-62. MTSU players and fans watched helplessly as Peay outscored MTSU 21-8 down the stretch to overcome the Raiders.

"I have nothing to say in terms of excuses," said Raider coach Bruce Stewart of the loss. "We choked."

The Raiders led for most of the game and seemed well on their way to winning behind a 56-46 lead with 4:55 remaining in the game.

The Governors had different ideas. Peay turned a flurry of second-half points into a major snowstorm that buried the hapless Raiders.

After battling to a 28-28 first-half standstill, Peay came out of the locker room and took a 32-28 lead, its largest of the game, on a jam by Tommy Brown with 18:20 remaining.

The Raiders quickly made adjustments after a time-out, rallying behind the play of senior Kevin Wallace and freshman David Clark.

Wallace scored seven while Clark added six, as MTSU outscored the Gobs 18-7 and took a 46-39 lead into the final ten minutes.

The Raiders traded baskets with Peay over the next three minutes before grabbing their largest lead of the game on a breakaway slam dunk by Robert 'Cat Eye' Taylor. At the 5:48 mark, MTSU led 54-44. That was when the storm blew in.

Led by Brown, who scored 19 on the night, the Gobs cut the Raider lead to seven points with 3:53 on the clock. Enter sharpshooter Donald Tivis.

Tivis scored eight straight and two three-pointers, tying the Raiders at 59 points with 1:20 remaining.

The Raiders were unable to muster any defense or offense in the final minute, allowing Tivis to add four more to his game high of 23 and give Peay a 67-60 lead. A pair of free throws

Georgia native brings much-needed talent, experience to Lady Raiders

DAVID LEE GREGOR
Sports Editor

When junior center Becky Hall takes the floor for the MTSU Lady Raiders, people stop to take a look. At 6-4, Hall is one of the tallest Lady Raiders to ever wear the blue and white for MTSU.

Like most Lady Raiders, Hall took up basketball at an early age. Hall, who comes to MTSU from Lookout Mountain, Georgia, began playing in the fifth grade.

"My brothers were big in the sport, and I liked it," said Hall. "Everyone kept telling me I should play basketball. So I felt like I should play."

Unlike her brothers, however, Hall continued in the sport beyond high school. The Georgia native received offers from UT-Chattanooga among others, but decided instead to go to Emmanuel College in Franklin Springs, Georgia.

"I wasn't really wanting to go to college out of high school," said Hall. "Coach [Mike] Bonna invited me to come down to Emmanuel to visit. That was the first college I visited, and the only college I visited.

"It made me grow up a lot to go to school down there, being out by myself, being away from home." Grow up is not all that Hall did at Emmanuel, however.

During her tenure at Emmanuel, the team made it to two national championship tournaments, finishing sixth and fifth nationally in 1988 and 1989 respectively.

Hall averaged 15 points and 10 rebounds per game, and 20 points and 12 rebounds in 10 post-season games during her two-year career at Emmanuel.

Hall was recruited out of Emmanuel by such prestigious schools as USC, Georgia, Clemson, Florida and Kentucky. Although she visited the UK campus, Hall chose to sign with MTSU.

"Coach Bonna was pretty close to Coach [Lewis] Bivens," said Hall. "Coach Bonna told me that he thought that if I came to this program I'd get a lot of playing time and he thought I'd really like Coach Bivens because they pretty much play the same kind of ball."

Although Hall missed MTSU's first eight games, she has made her presence felt in the last eight, the last six of which she has started. Hall is averaging better than 22 minutes per game, and 7.9 points and 3.3 rebounds per game.

"She's still developing," said Bivens. "She was out for 9 or 10 months, but she's coming along now. When she gets back in the flow and gets more aggressive, she'll be a lot better."

"She works hard, and keeps a good attitude. She's the kind of kid you like to have on your team."

Although the 6-4 junior is reserved about her skills as an athlete, she is quite outspoken about her outlook as a basketball player.

"Coming to MTSU is quite a change because the junior college I went to was smaller than my high school," said Hall. "I feel that if I would have went right out of high school to a major college, I wouldn't have made it. Going to Emmanuel made me grow up and gave me a lot of responsibilities."

"When you're in high school, there might be one person on the team that makes the team. But when you get in college, everybody on the team was that person in high school. They were that superstar in high school."

"You just have to put it in the back of your head. Everybody out there's just as good as you are."

Hall is an Animal Science major at MTSU, with a minor in photography. After graduation, she hopes to enter an equestrian-related career field, perhaps breeding or selling. For the here-and-now however, Hall's goals are clear-cut.

"I've always dreamed of being an All-American," she said. "I'd love to at least make one round of the NCAA tournament. Of course I'd love to win the OVC. That'd be nice."

Although the Lady Raiders are struggling, they showed signs of life in an 85-67 victory over Austin Peay Monday night. At a school where OVC championships are numerous and NCAA tournament appearances frequent, it may not be too long before Becky Hall's dreams become realities. ■

John, Virdon highlight baseball card show

From Staff Reports
MTSU's Murphy Center will host the annual baseball card show this Saturday. The show will be held on track level and will run from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

The show will feature autograph sessions by two former major league players: Tommy John, a future hall of famer, and Bill Virdon, a one-time player-manager.

John pitched for the New York Yankees and Los Angeles Dodgers during his 26-year career.

Virdon spent 11 seasons in the majors, mainly with the Pittsburgh Pirates, and was recognized by coaches, players and fans as one of the finest defensive center fielders to play the game.

Admission to the show is two dollars.■

by MTSU's Gerald Harris brought the final margin to five at 67-62.

"I've been a streaky shooter all year long," said Tivis. "I guess I picked a good time to go on a streak tonight."

"That was the best I've seen Tivis play in one stretch since I've been here," said Harris.

"It's a disappointing loss because it looked like we were going to win," said Clark. "We can't keep our heads down because there's too much basketball left to play."

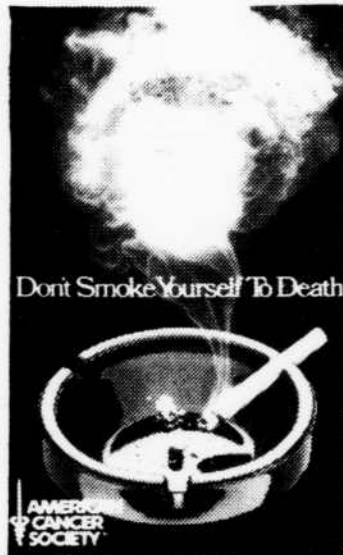

The loss dropped the Raiders to 5-11 overall and 0-4 in conference play heading into Friday's nationally-telecast game at Morehead State. The contest will be broadcast on the ESPN television network, and will begin at 11:00 CST.

Lady Raiders forced APSU into committing 14 turnovers, outrebounded the Lady Gobs 24-12, and outscored Peay 52-22 in the second period.

"We did a better job inside," said Bivens. "We passed the ball better, and we quit giving the ball away on offense. Christy Scruggs had a heck of a game; the little tank played well."

The Lady Raiders hit the road Saturday to take on the Morehead State Lady Eagles in the first of two road games. MTSU holds a 21-5 advantage over Morehead in the series, including 16 victories in the last 17 meetings. The game will be played at Morehead's Academic Athletic Center, and will begin at 6:30 p.m. (CST)■

THEY BEGAN TO TAUNT THE LITTLE GUY.

HOW'S IT GOING, DIAPER BABY?

I'M NOT A DIAPER BABY

WHAT'D YOU SAY?

SAID I'M NOT A DIAPER BABY

ARE YOU CALLING US LIARS?

JUST THEN A BIG GUY SHOWED UP HE TOWERED OVER THE LITTLE BULLIES.

WHAT'S THE PROBLEM HERE?

NO PROBLEM MAN

OH, I THINK THERE'S A PROBLEM, ALL RIGHT. AND YOU TWO ARE THE PROBLEM.

WE WASN'T DOIN' NUTHIN, MAN

THE BIG GUY GLARED AT THE BULLIES FOR A MOMENT, THEN LUNGED AT THEM AND GRABBED THEIR BIKES.

HEY, MAN!

GIVE US BACK OUR BIKES, MAN!

THE BIG GUY JUST STOOD THERE WITH THE BIKES WHILE THE KIDS YELLED THEN HE TURNED ON HIS HEELS AND WALKED OFF CARRYING THE BIKES.

HEY, MAN! OUR BIKES!!

THE BIG GUY MARCHED ONTO THE MIDDLE OF THE NEARBY FOOTBRIDGE, AND DANGLED THE BIKES OVER THE CANAL.

YOU BETTER NOT!!

KER-SPLOOSH!!

TEACH YOU TO PICK ON KIDS SMALLER THAN YOU

THE LITTLE BULLIES RAN OFF, SWEARING. THE BIG GUY JUST LAUGHED AND WALKED AWAY.

WE'RE COMIN' BACK WITH OUR GANG AND WE'RE GONNA KILL YOU!

WE'RE GONNA BURN YOUR HOUSE DOWN, MAN!

I WALKED OVER TO THE TOP OF THE FOOTBRIDGE AND STOOD THERE WITH SOME NEIGHBOR KIDS LOOKING AT THE BIKES SUBMERGED IN THE SHALLOW CANAL.

WELL, YOU KNOW THE LAW OF THE BRINY DEEP

IF YOU CAN SALVAGE SOMETHING FROM THE OCEAN, IT'S YOURS

THE NEIGHBOR KIDS WERE CONVINCED. THEY WADED INTO THE CANAL, PULLED OUT THE BIKES, AND SPED OFF WHOOPING. THE LITTLE GUY AND I STOOD THERE, WATCHING.

LAW OF THE BRINY DEEP!!

YEE-HAW!!

I TURNED AROUND TO TALK TO THE LITTLE GUY, BUT HE WAS ALREADY HALF A BLOCK AWAY, RUNNING LIKE HELL.
