Earth Day '95 Festival to promote environmental responsibilityMTSU sponsors its first Earth Day
celebrationKRIS WETZEL
News Editor

Campus Programming is sponsoring the Earth Day '95 Festival April 21-23 to raise environmental awareness in the Murfreesboro community.

Earth Day was founded by former U. S. Senator Gaylord Nelson (D-WI) in 1970 to enforce environmental protection as a national issue. Heralded as the "leading environmentalist in the U.S. Senate" by Environmental Quality Magazine, Nelson also sponsored bills to mandate fuel efficiency standards in automobiles, control strip mining and ban the use of DDT and agent orange. He also authored the legislation that preserved the 2,000 mile Appalachian Trail.

Nelson currently focuses his attention on protecting national forests, parks and public lands. He will serve as the national chairman of Earth Day XXV.

"The idea of Earth Day was a national demonstration of environmental concern big enough to shake up the political establishment," Nelson said. "Magically it worked, thanks to the millions of concerned

Americans."

"Today, however, the problem is this: Until recently, we haven't recognized the existence of any environmental limits that might impose a moral duty on the generation to preserve opportunities and choices for future generations. From the time our ancestors landed on these shores, we have lived by the belief that the gifts of nature were inexhaustible.

"Now that we know they are finite limits to the bounty of land, we also must know we have a moral obligation to pass that bounty on to future generations. That is what sustainability is all about."

combines with Friday's Music on the Knoll to feature the bands Iodine, Love Bucket and Fleming and John from 3-6 p.m. on the Green Corner Mead near Murphy Center.

Saturday's celebration will be led by environmental comedian Steve Trash and his Ecological Magic Trash. Musical acts Liberty Caps, Mystic Meditations, Vegas Cocks, The Phantom Five, Rub, Janie Grey and Orchestra Mondo Pingus. LaserStorm, an interactive laser tag game, will also be available.

A meeting between students and administration was held Tuesday to discuss the possibility of nighttime parking passes and an extended bus route.

Dean of Student Life Thomas Burke scheduled the meeting to discuss an SGA resolution to extend a Raider Xpress route to the Ellington Human Sciences Building and a proposal to create a nighttime parking permit.

Scott Davis, a student-member of the traffic appeals committee, made a proposal to create a special nighttime parking pass. The proposed pass would allow registered night-class students to park in most of the parking spaces designated "white" after 5:30 p.m. Parking spaces on the loop, beside the KUC and along Raider Drive (between the football stadium and

Presently, students can park in any color-coded parking space after 6:30 p.m. except for handicapped spaces.

The purpose of the proposal is to increase safety, according to Davis. He said that while on the traffic appeals committee he met a woman who said she would rather pay for a ticket than park far away from her classroom at night.

"She said, 'You really don't know what rape is like until you get raped,'" Davis said.

The proposal calls for the nighttime pass to be $35 which includes either a black or green parking pass.

But don't expect it anytime soon.

The proposal must first be passed by the SGA which will not have another meeting until the fall semester. Davis said it then must be approved by the traffic committee, MTSU administration and then the Tennessee Board of Regents.

Davis said the earliest it could be implemented was Fall 1996.

"We were talking about it sort of theoretically to see what the pros and cons of it are," Burke said, "There wasn't a final conclusion to it."

Burke said that Parking and Transportation will experiment with extending a bus route across Tennessee Boulevard but that it will only be an experiment.

"If it negatively affect the whole system, we will probably not continue it," Burke said. If traffic on Tennessee delays the routes and increases waiting time for other stops, Burke said the experiment will probably end.

Another bus cannot be purchased due to budget restraints, Burke said. ■

Fraternities help the community and beyond

From Murfreesboro to the Dominican Republic, MTSU Greeks offer hope

KRYS SPAIN
Staff Writer

"People have stereotypes about fraternities just partying and that's not the case. We do just about as much community service as anything else we do. We don't do this to glorify ourselves, we do these projects to help others," said Shane McFarland, Beta Theta Pi and newly elected SGA President.

Fraternities have many different projects in which they are involved. They take on their own projects, as well as participating in their national chapters' philanthropies.

A philanthropy is a contribution made as an act of kindness and generosity. The Greeks do a wide variety of community service projects. They donate time, energy and money to organizations that are in need.

Alpha Gamma Rho (AGR) raises money for the hearing impaired by holding car washes, and the AGR Bar-B-Que has been held for 25 years. All proceeds from the Bar-B-Que will go to Cerebral Palsy and the MTSU Scholarship Fund.

"We feel it's our part to help those less fortunate," says Joe Williams, AGR member.

7-year-old Natanael Ventura, Kappa Sigma's sponsored child.

The Bar-B-Que will be held April 21 at the Auto Auction on Old Fort Pkwy. Tickets are $6 in advance and $8 at the gate and include all-you-can-eat bar-b-que and fixings. Sponsored by WKDF and Budweiser, the event will feature The *Viceroy*s and Webb Wilder. "It's going to be fun and it's for a good cause, so come out and enjoy yourself," says John David Sells, Social Chairman of AGR.

American Leisure

The MTSU Photographic Gallery will feature a fifty monochrome print, color exhibit entitled Popular Events April 2 through April 27, 1995. The works, by photographer Craig Pozzi, include festivals and leisure activities of American culture. Pozzi has been fascinated with the subject of American leisure for 20 years.

Kappa Sigma has three major service projects and several small projects.

They sponsor a 7-year-old boy in Santo Domingo, the Dominican Republic. The child's name is Natanael Ventura. Their donations provide him with food, shelter, medical treatment and school supplies. And they recently sent him an Easter care package, which provided him with clothes, a backpack and some basic necessities.

At Murfreesboro Health Care, Kappa Sigma sponsors a male senior citizen. Cecil Handley, 88, has the members visit him once or twice a week.

"Everytime we go to see him, we bring him a diet coke. It's his favorite thing and the hospital doesn't have it," says Jurgen Mootz, PR chairman and IFC treasurer.

Kappa Sigma also holds a yearly fund-raiser to raise money for the American Kidney Foundation, their national philanthropy. Last year, they delivered poinsettias at Christmas. They donate all profits and other donations, usually a minimum of $800, to the Foundation.

The smaller projects that they are involved in include helping with the Special Olympics; adopt a highway; donating to the food bank and donating to the scholarship fund. They also play a softball tournament to help the Murfreesboro Exchange Club; a club that counsels abused children.

"The reason Kappa Sigma and other Greek organizations are involved in community service is because we are more than a social organization. We want the MTSU community to know that we are here to support them as well," says Ben Robinson, Kappa Sigma President.

Sigma Nu has four major service projects.

They raise money for and are working with the Murfreesboro Children's Playground that is scheduled to be built in May. They work with the Dismiss House, a halfway house in Nashville. They also help with St. Jukes Hospital and Room In The Inn homeless shelter.

They have earned 1,400 community service hours.

Another review of the Absurd

JASON YOUNG
Staff Writer

I woke up this morning and brushed my teeth. Normally, this is not one of the high points in my day, but this was no normal day. As I pulled open the drawer that houses my toothpaste, I noticed that my regular brand was empty. I pulled the drawer out a little more and shuffled things until I found another tube: Crest Mint Paste with Baking Soda.

Immediately after brushing my teeth, I noticed a taste in my mouth that reminded me of the last time I had eaten dirt. I checked the mirror for mud stuck in my teeth from the previous night, only to find my bright white teeth smiling back at me. I concluded that the dirt taste came from the tooth paste.

After talking to some friends, it was brought to my attention that many people share the same opinion about baking soda tooth paste. It tastes horrible.

It has been said that you have to weather the storms to get to a sunny day, but is that really true with tooth paste? To find the answer to this question, I tried to speak with my dentist in Franklin, Dr. Morris. He was with a patient when I called, so I talked to Carol, the beautiful and ever so patient woman that cleans my teeth. She said, "[Baking soda tooth paste] helps some with stains and gums. It is really good for tissue."

I trust Carol, but I wanted a second opinion. While searching for a reliable source, it hit me. My first name is Jason and Dr. Morris' last name is Morris. Jason + Morris = Jason Morris. I found MTSU baseball manager Jason Morris getting ready for last night's game against UT at the baseball field. Morris said that he had never used baking soda toothpaste but that it

"smells minty." I thanked him for his time and continued my quest for authority.

Memaw, my grandmother, said she had been using baking soda and salt for toothpaste over 50 years. She still has all her teeth! She told me that, "Baking soda and salt mixed together or either one alone will give you a clean shine!"

Maybe Memaw is right, but is the American public buying the baking soda bullet? A quick call to Uncle Sandy's Truck/Auto Plaza told me the answer to my question. I spoke with Beth, Uncle Sandy's employee, and asked her what the prices were on money; we really get involved," says Brian Barnes, Sigma Nu President, "It is pretty impersonal to just sign a check, so the entire brotherhood gets involved."

"I think it is one of a fraternity's main goals to work with the community. It helps the Greek System, as a whole, to do philanthropies."

The Sigma Nu pledge class is working with the VA hospital.

"The pledges do several activities with the veterans. The activities work with St. Judes," says Brenden Hunt, Sigma Nu.

Sigma Phi Epsilon is involved in many different services.

Their national philanthropy is the American Heart Association. They work with the Muscular Dystrophy Association, the food drive, boy scouts and the wheelchair basketball program. They have earned over 1500 community service hours.

"We help set up, take tickets, and do fundraising," says Jim Cabbage, Sigma Phi Epsilon member, "we pitch in wherever we are needed."

Fundraising and donating money is their main philanthropy issue.

Pi Kappa Alpha has five major service projects.

Their national philanthropy is the Big Brothers of America. Each member is assigned a little brother. They have an annual softball game and other activities to participate in with the boys. For 2 years they have participated in the March of Dimes, which will be held April 29 and 30. They donate money to the Oakland Kiwanis Club and participate in the DARE program.

"Community Service is a vital part of our community because our groups have the funds and efforts to help the less fortunate," says Jason Kane, Vice-president Pi Kappa Alpha.

The biggest community service project that they do is the Domestic Violence Center. It is a center for victims of domestic violence and their children. Every member participates, but there are always 10 to 20 guys that really get involved. They donate time, money and energy into the center. They listen to and work with the children while their parents are in a group being counseled. They work with 10 to 15 children, four hours a night, two nights a week.

"We can't save the world by working with those kids a few nights a week, but at least it's a positive influence for the kids," says Kane.

Tau Kappa Epsilon concentrates mainly on their national philanthropy, the Special Olympics. They have held car washes, a special concert and several other fund-raisers. All proceeds go to the Special Olympics. There are 320 international chapters and each chapter hosts activities for them.

They also visit the VA Hospital and do activities with the patients.

"It is not mandatory for members to attend the functions but the majority of the members are eager to help," says Travis Byers, Vice-president of Tau Kappa Epsilon.

Alpha Sigma Phi works with the salvation army, the boys and girl's club, the cancer society and a senior citizens' home. Their national philanthropy is CCI, an organization that trains seeing eye dogs.

"As a new organization, we feel it is important to help in the community," says Keith Charlton, President of Alpha Sigma Phi.

Beta Theta Pi has four major philanthropies: the Murfreesboro Children's Discovery House; Children's Burn Awareness; Walk for American Diabetes Association and Multiple Sclerosis Society Walk.

They have earned 3100 service hours this semester, most with Discovery House and Burn Awareness. They won Fraternity of the Year, recently, for having the most service hours.

Shane McFarland started the Betas doing the MS Walk and Burn Awareness. They have doubled community services hours in the last year. In two years they have earned 6000 hours.

"We donate time, money and energy into organizing philanthropies and we continue to have the majority of our chapter at all functions," says Bill Parker, President of Beta Theta Pi.

There are several social fraternities on campus. Each fraternity gets involved in many different activities.

Fraternity life is stereotyped to be one big party. An Animal House, so to speak.

Yes, they have parties. But that is not what they are about. They are not as much involved with self-satisfaction as they are with concern for those less fortunate.

It is likely that there are a few fraternity members that could lead you to believe it is like an animal house. But don't judge entire organizations badly because of one individual.

As a whole, fraternities strive to help the community. Not so much as a duty, but for the sake of others. ■

Violence, like salt, spices up our lives

A bombing in OK., shootings on TV just make our lives interesting

BRENT ANDREWS
Features Editor

With the bombing of the federal office building in Oklahoma City Wednesday, lots of you are probably wondering what's going to happen next. Where will the next explosion occur? Who will be the next to suffer from one of these horrible catastrophes? Why, why, why?

It seems like these things are happening more and more often these days, like maybe our society has completely lost its mind. There have been rumors that our old friends down in Waco had something to do with this most recent disaster, but the government has neither confirmed nor denied this. Others have suggested that terrorists from outside the US are responsible. Again, no comment from representatives of Uncle Sam.

Our government will eventually figure all of this out. We can be confident that the cogs are turning and the wheels of justice are tearing their way toward a solution.

Because we, as Americans, must have someone to toast for this. We don't pay those folks at the ATF and the FBI and the KGB--no, wait a minute, I mean the CIA--to sit around on their brains while this crime goes unpunished. Someone is going to be strapped into a cold metal chair with their eyes taped shut and their mouth restrained so they don't bite their tongue off (we wouldn't want to be brutal about this) and FRIED like a good crispy piece of the Colonel's chicken. That's the American way of dealing with evil folks like this.

Tuesday night when I got home from work I turned on the television and watched an episode of Hunter. If you've never seen this show then here is the basic idea: In every episode, Hunter and his sidekick stumble upon a crime and then solve it and shoot the hell out of the bad guy. Or guys. It really doesn't matter how many folks Hunter has to kill, as long as he solves the crime and all is set right again. Throw a couple of car chases in there, with tires squealing through alleys and trash cans bumping onto car hoods while the driver dodges through alleys, and you have a classic American cop show. We all love those classic cop shows, now don't we?

How does another mundane episode of Hunter relate to yesterday's bombing in Oklahoma City? Violence, folks--plain, American Style violence. It's all the same.

From the G.I. Joe dolls we buy our children to the cop shows we watch on the tube, we all like to throw a little bit of violence into every aspect of our lives. Like salt on our french fries or a little Ranch Dressing on our lettuce, violence makes our lives spicy and interesting.

Until it happens to us. In a town like Oklahoma City, population-wise about the same as Nashville, about as internationally important as Nashville, you just don't expect things like this to happen.

But get used to it, friends and neighbors. Because it's only going to get worse until we stop watching Hunter blow people away on TV, until we don't need violence to make the salad of our lives taste a little better. We're going to have to learn to eat our lettuce straight.

Or else we can just sit back and watch the fireworks. And hope we're not next.

On a lighter note, we all know that this weekend is the time for us to reflect on just how bad the damage is that we have inflicted on our planet. Earth Day '95 will be celebrated on the lawn of Murphy Center (while we still have some grass over there that hasn't been built on) Saturday and Sunday, with music and food and such for our consumption. There will be booths set up to let us know how we can prevent further damage to our environment, lots of people hanging out kicking Hacky Sacks around and maybe a dog or two. People always like to bring their dogs to things like this, and I don't blame them. If I had one I'd bring it too.

I'm going to be there for the festivities. You should be there too. ■

CAREER TALK

Q: I am a senior in college, and I am about to start looking for a job, which I hope to get by the time I graduate in May. I'm wondering—are there any companies out there which can help me in my job hunt?
 JIM GOODMAN, Chicago

A: Two types of career-services companies exist. The first is known as a "head-hunter" firm or executive recruiter, which finds suitable candidates for its corporate clients' job openings. Look under "Employment Agencies" in the Yellow Pages to find such firms in your city. The second kind of company is generically known as a "career-consulting firm," providing assistance with such tasks as resumes, cover letters, and job-search techniques. One such firm is R.L. Stevens & Associates, Inc., headquartered in Indianapolis (their phone is (317) 846-8888). The firm has offices in 10 major cities nationwide and will help you market yourself, for a fee upfront, by developing your resume, teaching you interview skills, and showing you how to negotiate a good salary. The company also provides access to electronic databases, which clients can search to identify job openings. Says Rodger Coleman, a senior consultant at R.L. Stevens, "Most people think they know how to market themselves, when in actuality they really do a poor job. There are a lot of nuances...to the career search process. Whether you're just out of college or looking to make a career change, everybody can benefit from professional advice."

 Q: I would like information on sports-related internships (i.e. teams, sports-marketing firms, and product companies like Adidas).
 ROBERT C. MCKAMEY, Rock Island, Ill.

A: As you may be aware, most sports teams have internship programs. We suggest you call the four major sports leagues and ask each of them to send you a roster of teams, including addresses and phone numbers; the leagues themselves also take interns. Contact the National Football League, (212) 758-1500; National Hockey League, (212) 789-2000 and National Basketball Association, (212) 826-7000.

Please send questions or comments to Hamadeh and Oldman, P.O. Box 463, Ansonia Station, New York, NY 10023, and include your full name, address, and telephone number. Or e-mail questions or comments to interninfo@aol.com. ■

Thank goodness! Mercer is signed

A couple of columns ago I basically wrote a little section on Ron Mercer and how people are so concerned about the college education of an 18-year-old.

Word on the Street

Drew Butler

In that column, I may have hinted that any focus on recruiting is negative. Some may also see it as hypocritical of me to write stories on MTSU recruiting while writing a column saying that their is an overemphasis on recruiting.

But this point of view is wrong.

My problem with recruiting is how it is overdone and there is an overemphasis when it comes to the personal lives of high school kids.

The Ron Mercer case is the perfect example of this.

Well, we know he's going to Kentucky. So let's examine the wreckage.

The most blaring incident was the Mercer-Vanderbilt debacle. Through no fault of Mercer's, his grades were openly aired for public discussion.

So what, you may ask.

What would you do if your grades were printed in the pages of Sidelines? Not everyone may have a 4.0 grade point average to boast of, but the idea of all my grades out for public inspection, good and bad, would drive me crazy.

That is what I'm upset about. The fact that people may want to hear something like this and come to a judgment on him.

This goes beyond the reporting of facts. That's what my recruiting stories give you. No buildup or hype. Just 'X player signed with MTSU' is basically all you'll get from my stories.

That's the way it should be. ■

Raiders bounced by Vols

Vols break the game open in the eighth

ROB NUNLEY

The Blue Raiders experienced both the highs and lows of baseball this week, as they powered by the Kentucky Wildcats on Tuesday, 8-2, but then gave up a 5-1 lead to lose to the 12th-ranked Tennessee Volunteers on Wednesday, 9-5.

Senior right-hander Dale Graham got the win for Middle on Tuesday, and pitched a terrific game. Graham worked 8 2/3 innings, giving up nine hits and only one run while striking out four.

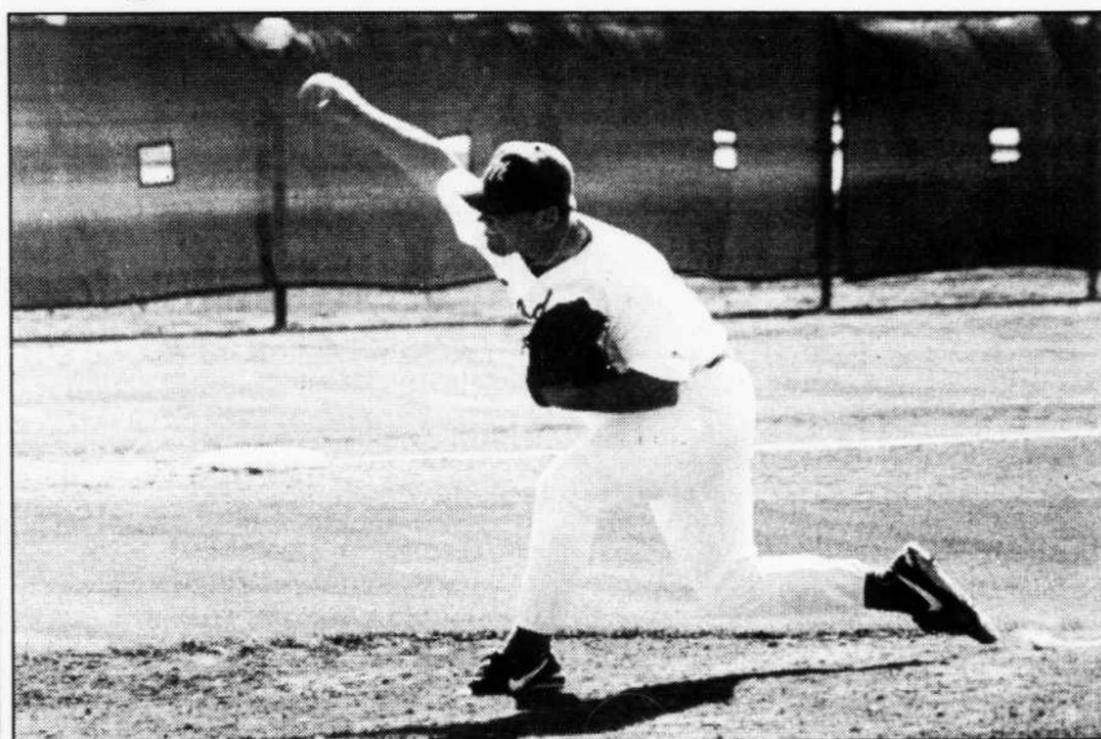

"I told Dale before the game this would definitely be his night," head coach Steve Peterson said Tuesday. "He'd been on again and off again in his past few outings and I told him that this was his night to be on. And sure enough it was."

After Kentucky scored a run in the first to take an early lead, Middle exploded for five runs in the second on three hits, including right fielder Chris Goggin's second home run of the year.

"We got big hits from a lot of people," Peterson said. "But Goggin put it out of reach."

Middle added two more runs in the sixth when center fielder Jordan Beddies, who had already hit a two-run

"They threw me my pitch a couple of times, and I was able to take advantage of it," Beddies said. "I've been working on locating pitches and my bat speed lately, and the things I've been working on paid off tonight."

Tennis teams tune up for OVC tourney

Both men and women win against Tennessee Tech

JOEL FREY

Both the men's and women's tennis teams geared up for their respective OVC tourneys this week as each swept their final five conference matches.

In action yesterday against Tennessee Tech, the men pummeled the Golden Eagles 7-0 and the women squeaked out a thriller 5-4.

The men's win completed a perfect 7-0 conference record and earned the Blue Raiders the number one seed in this weekend's OVC tournament at Centennial Sportsplex in Nashville.

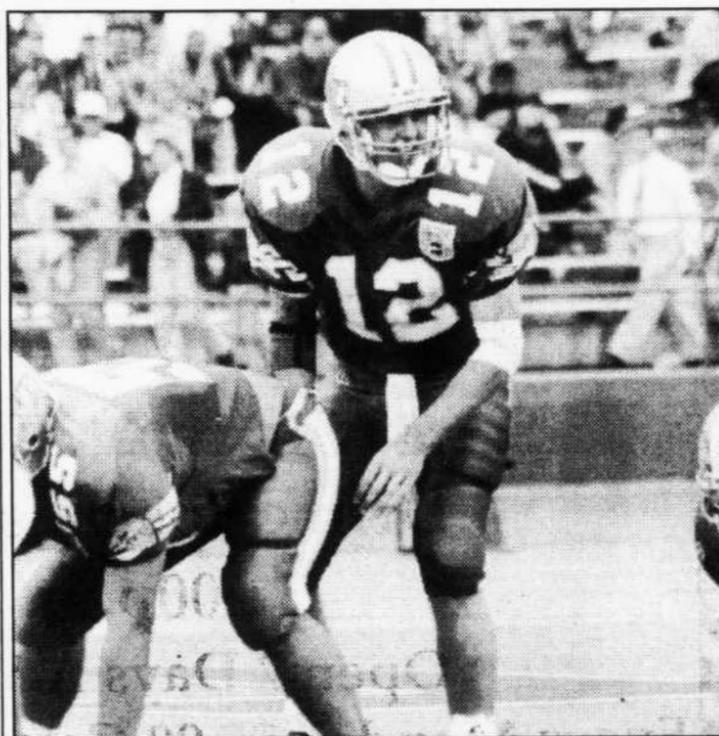

The men totally dominated Tech with only Mark Follett's match at number five going to three sets.

Follett's 6-7, 7-6, 7-6 win was a true test of his own resolve.

Lady R's sign post players for next year

Two additional signees will round out the Lady Raiders' 1995 recruiting season.

Murfreesboro Oakland star Carlitta Elder signed with the Lady Raiders on Wednesday. Elder averaged 17 points a game and was among the leading rebounders in the conference.

The former county player of the year gives the Blue

Raiders someone who can fill the shooting guard or small forward position.

"Losing Sherry Tucker, we're looking to find an athletic-type player," said head coach Lewis Bivens. She gives us a very athletic 'two-'three' type player. The big thing she's done the last two years is that she is an excellent perimeter shooter."

Other new signee is Waynesboro native Amanda Beavis.

another insurance run in the eighth, when third baseman Doug Barner connected off Wildcat reliever Jeff Thompson for his fourth homer of the season.

"It all came together," Peterson said. "It was just a solid win all the way around."

With no score and two outs in the top of the second, the skies opened up and the few brave Middle and UT fans that decided to stay had to sit through a one-hour rain delay. After the Vols scored in the top of the third to take a one-run lead, Middle answered with two runs in the third.

Chris Hendrix struck out with one out in the inning but the pitch got away from the UT catcher, and Chris Goggin, who had doubled and reached third on an error, scored as Hendrix reached first.

Middle sent nine men to the plate in the fourth, and was able to strike for four runs, including two on a single from Haralson. But the Volunteers answered with four runs in the top of the fifth to tie the game at five runs apiece.

The Volunteers took advantage of uncharacteristically poor Raider defense to take the lead in the eighth, when with one out and the bases loaded, Haralson dropped a routine pop-up to second. Although Haralson was able to get a force out at second and throw out the Vol runner going to third to retire the side, Vol first baseman Todd Helton was able to score the eventual winning run from third.

The women's victory enabled the team to finish second in the conference behind UT-Martin.

Amy King and Michelle Wilson closed out the big win against Tech for the Lady Raiders winning at number two doubles 6-3, 5-7, 7-5.

Joe Myers of MTSU Sports Information, who has followed the team all season long, said he feels the women are peaking.

averaged 20 points and 13 rebounds last year at Shoals Community College in Alabama.

"One thing that I felt like we really needed was a physical presence," Bivens said. "She gives us a very physical type player."

"That fact that she has two years in junior college will help us a great deal in the inside, to go along with Jonelda Buck."

With the addition of Buck and Beavis in the paint, the scoring of the Lady Raiders may be much more balanced. Last year, MTSU depended on outside shooting to win games.

"We'll be much more balanced. We needed to get a little more inside attack," Bivens said. "Last year was the first time in my 17 years of college coaching that I had a guard lead me in scoring."

In addition to the five signees: Beavis, Elder, Buck, Cortney Neely and Heather Edmondson, another person will be added to the team.

"We're signing five people plus Kara Hobbs (a manager this year) is coming back and playing next year," Bivens said.

"I think we've addressed every position," Bivens said. "We feel like, on paper, we addressed all the things we wanted to get done." ■

Track Teams go for OVC ChampionshipSTAFF REPORTS

The MTSU track teams will travel to Southeast Missouri State this weekend to defend their titles in the 1995 OVC outdoor track championships.

Mia Florence, who will lead the women's team, got selected the 1995 indoor trackwoman of the year after winning the high jump, long jump and triple jump. Nadia Graham will run the 100 and 200 meters along with both relay teams. She won the 400 and 200 meter indoors.

Micah Otis, who competes in the hurdles, long jump and 200 meter dash, will lead the men's team. He also was the double winner indoors and outdoors for the 4x200 relay team that went undefeated for two years. Another standout for the team include Keith Watkins who was a 55-meter semifinalist in the indoor NCAA tournament. ■

Freaknik—have a good time, but be careful

Freaknik '95 is coming to Atlanta this weekend, and there certainly must be some MTSU students planning to attend.

Have fun but be careful.

For those of you who do not know, Freaknik is a three-day celebration designed to be a kind of Spring Break for African-American college students.

This is the third year Freaknik is being held in Atlanta, and the Atlanta police have put the word out that, unlike in the past, no rowdy behavior will be tolerated. They will gladly arrest anyone they consider to be loitering, cruising, drinking in public or being generally disruptive. Their tolerance level will be very low.

Atlanta city officials did all in their power to keep Freaknik from happening. They advertised on all black college campuses concerning their lack of tolerance for the event. They went to court to try to get an injunction. They used radio and television nationwide to send the message that Freaknik revelers were not welcome in Atlanta.

Freaknik, however, will still take place.

If you are planning to attend the weekend's festivities, be very careful. Sidelines staff members who hail from Atlanta know the police mean business. If you give them an ounce of trouble, they will give you a ton of headache. No one wants that.

Tennessee—it's a different universe from what I know

school daze

Warren Wakeland

In the April 10 issue of Sidelines, I wrote a column complaining once again about parking regulations. Over the last year I have gotten pretty good at it, too. I won't go into detail, but I got a ticket for parking in a way that should be legal but isn't.

MTSU Director of Parking and Transportation Gary Hunter sent me a copy of the law as it reads direct from the Tennessee Code Annotated, which for those of you who do not know is the Holy Grail of Tennessee law, to explain the ticket.

Rule 55-8-161 reads: "Every vehicle stopped or parked upon a roadway where there are adjacent curbs shall be so stopped or parked with the right-hand wheels of such vehicle parallel to and within eighteen inches (18") of the right-hand curb."

My apologies to Mr. Hunter for my reckless disregard of Tennessee law and slamming of his department. See, for a moment I forgot I am living in Tennessee, where there are many stupid laws such as this. Who was it who said, "Stupid is as stupid does"?

Think about this for a moment: if you are going to park on a curb in a roadway, don't you think it would be safer to park with the left wheels, or the driver's side, to the curb? This way, when you step out of the car you won't get hit by a dump truck and make a mess for someone to have to clean up.

Does it take a rocket scientist to figure out that stepping out into traffic is a good way to keep funeral parlors in business?

We live in a busy society. When most people park their cars, they are thinking, "I've got to get (fill in the blank) done now." At least I do. Many of us don't take the time to think to look before we get out of the car. With the right wheels on the curb you are endangering yourself by stepping out of your car into the roadway.

To tell someone they cannot park their car in as safe a manner as possible when parking on a curb is denying them their right to self protection.

Can you tell I am not a happy camper?

In Georgia, where I am from, we don't have these kinds of idiotic laws. Sure, there are some good laughs, but nothing that affects the public so thoroughly and makes no sense. In Georgia you can park with the left wheels to the curb. In Florida, where my family lives, you can park in this manner. In Maryland, where I grew up, you can park in this manner. In civilization you can park in this manner.

I forgot I was in Tennessee.

My friends ask me why I say I will never apply for a job out of college that requires me to live and work in Tennessee. I present reason #422 why I will never live and work in Tennessee. Kind of like reasons why H & R Block should do your taxes.

I decided to do a little background reconnaissance and try to find the reasoning for this law. I called the Tennessee Department of Transportation and asked why this was a rule. After some Billy Joe Bob Puddinhead gave me the answer, "Cawz'at's the law, son," I went after a more superior intelligence to quiz. This means the IQ was about 27.

When I finally found a more superior intelligence, I was told, "If you park with the left wheel on the curb it means you have to cross traffic to go in the proper direction."

When I asked about endangering your person by parking with the right wheel on the curb, the reply was, "You just have to be careful when getting out of your vehicle."

Like I said, a superior intelligence.

Of course, with me being a journalist, I had to pursue this matter further. "Don't you think it would be easier to pull out across traffic you can see coming at you, which you would when crossing traffic to get to the right lane, than to step out in the middle of the road and get hit by a car?" I queried.

"Huh?"

Now beating my head against a wall, I decide to allow bygones be bygones and tell him never mind.

I have to remember I am in Tennessee. ■

Earth Day—all tree huggers unite and pollute

The Conservative
Philosopher

Christina
Basiel

It's that time of year again, folks. The time of year that pinko tree-huggers gather in parks to trample the grass, pollute the air, and litter the landscape with flyers, styrofoam cups, and cigarette butts. Yes folks, it is that time of year again. April 22nd is Earth Day.

The first official Earth Day occurred 25 years ago. Its founder, Gaylord Nelson, developed the event to increase awareness about the environment and ultimately convert more people to the environmentalist movement.

On its surface, Earth Day is a noble idea. Everyone has a stake in the condition of our environment, and a healthy environment promotes healthy people. Earth Day, however, does have its conceptual problems. The most obvious of these problems is the fact that so many Earth Day festivities are actually detrimental to the environment.

In order to attend the rallies that have become so important to Earth Day, people must travel to the sites of the events. Most of the attendees live far away and commute by car or bus, creating more pollution through carbon monoxide emissions and thus contributing to the supposed hole in the ozone layer.

At the rally sites, thousands of people are crammed together in relatively small spaces, destroying grass, eroding soil, and thus promoting the destruction of trees and plants which clean the air and provide food and shelter for local wildlife.

Finally, food, drinks and souvenirs are sold at these rallies to raise funds for environmentalist organizations and to provide some comfort for the participants. It is impractical to ask thousands of people to bring their own cups, plates or souvenirs, so they are provided at the festivities. It is also impractical to ask the organizers of the events to wash thousands of dirty dishes (which would waste water, anyway) so they use disposable items made of (yes) styrofoam and plastic. This creates garbage which is either incinerated, which increases air pollutants, or placed in landfills, which decreases the amount of land available for agriculture, housing,

The purpose of Earth Day is to promote the environmentalist movement. While many people involved in the movement are truly concerned individuals, working to clean up pollution and preserve natural habitats, the powers that be in the environmentalist movement have an entirely different agenda. Environmentalism is rooted in the communist concept that private ownership of property and industry should be sacrificed for government collectivism.

Long before environmentalism became en vogue, the movement to preserve our country's natural resources was known as conservationism. Unlike environmentalism, conservationism does not attack private ownership of industry and property—it promotes them. It has been proven through the lumber industry, and others, that corporations which rely on the availability of natural resources are compelled to maintain the health of the environment. After all, a lumber company cannot survive without trees.

The basic premise of capitalism is private ownership. Ever since the beginning of our country, our people have reveled in the capitalist idea. Americans for generations have sought and realized their goal of owning their own land. These land owners have provided food, clothing and shelter for their own families and others by working their land and respecting the delicate balance of nature.

Environmentalism denies these truths and asserts that the only way to protect our environment is to destroy private ownership. Environmentalists claim that private owners abuse the environment and that it can only be preserved by allowing a central authority (the government) to maintain ownership and control the use of land and natural resources. We need only look to the vilely polluted environments of the former communist states of Eastern Europe to realize this is a foolish and dangerous idea.

While Earth Day may provide an excuse for revelry and the promotion of Al Gore's error-riddled book, it does little to accomplish its "official" goal. Trashing parks and attacking capitalism is not going to save the planet from pollution, folks. Common sense and the truth about the environmentalist movement will. ■

The nightmare that comes with losing your resident alien card

Guest
Columnist

Daniela
Gopfert

I lost my wallet somewhere between Murfreesboro and New Orleans. It contained my checkbook, bank card, credit card, my Social Security card and, heaven help me, my Resident Alien card (better known as a Green Card). Here my trouble began.

It's a piece of cake to take care of a lost checkbook, bank card and credit card. All it takes is a phone call. It would also be relatively easy to replace a lost social security card, except for the tiny detail of the fact that I have to have my Resident Alien card to do so.

So here's the problem. I called the International Programs and Services Office on campus to get the telephone number for the "local" immigration office. They had the number handy and I was on my way, so I thought. Guess where the office is located—Memphis. Is it just me or would you think that an important office such as immigration would have an office in the capitol of the state? Nashville is in the relative center of the state of Tennessee; wouldn't it make it easier for a lot of Tennesseans by being closer to home? But I need my card, so I figure so what if it's long distance. It's important, so I'll call to get things taken care of.

When I call immigration I get a computer system. At this point I'm not worried. Lots of places have these systems. As example, here on campus we have TRAM. They make our lives easier. Right? Maybe not in this case.

I've been calling the wonderful immigration computer system every day for the past week. I did find out from the computer exactly what I need to do: request a form I-90 to replace my Resident Alien card, it will then be sent to me, I'll get to gather some more information, get pictures made, get my fingerprints taken and then I get to file the I-90, in person, with the immigration office in Memphis. The only problem is that I can't seem to get the computer to send me the mysterious I-90 form.

The system does have an option that lets you request forms where you are supposed to state what form you need, say and spell your name and address and they will supposedly send it to you. Barely half way through giving the information the system told me thank you for calling and hung up on me.

There is also an option which is supposed to let you speak to an actual human being. I've not been able to accomplish this great feat. Everyday the system tells me that in order to speak to an actual person I should call during the next business day.

On the seventh day I gave up on the computer system. I called the trusty International Programs and Services Office and asked if they had an address for the immigration office. They did and were prompt to give it to me. Thank you. I'll try my luck requesting the I-90 form by mail. Maybe I'll get a human response. ■

Tampa hospital regains right to perform surgery

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — A hospital where a man lost the wrong leg in a botched amputation can resume non-emergency surgeries today because the state has lifted a ban.

The state Agency for Health Care Administration ended the moratorium at University Community Hospital on Tuesday. It fined the Tampa hospital $341,000 for violating rules governing surgical procedures and required it to reduce elective surgeries by 25 percent until all problems have been resolved.

Before the ban, the 424-bed hospital averaged 60 non-emergency surgeries a day.

"We can reassure the public that every effort will be made to prevent adverse medical incidents in the future," hospital President Norm Stein said after learning of the decision.

The agency banned all non-emergency surgery at the hospital nearly two weeks ago following reports that a diabetic patient had the wrong foot amputated and another patient died when his ventilator was mistakenly removed.

Follow-up investigations revealed other mistakes, including an arthroscopic surgery on the wrong knee of a patient and a tubal ligation performed without consent.

The agency had said the ban would be lifted when the hospital explained what went wrong and showed it had fixed the problems.

The hospital said it had complied with state requirements, including a demand that the more than 300 surgeons who use the hospital review operating room procedures.

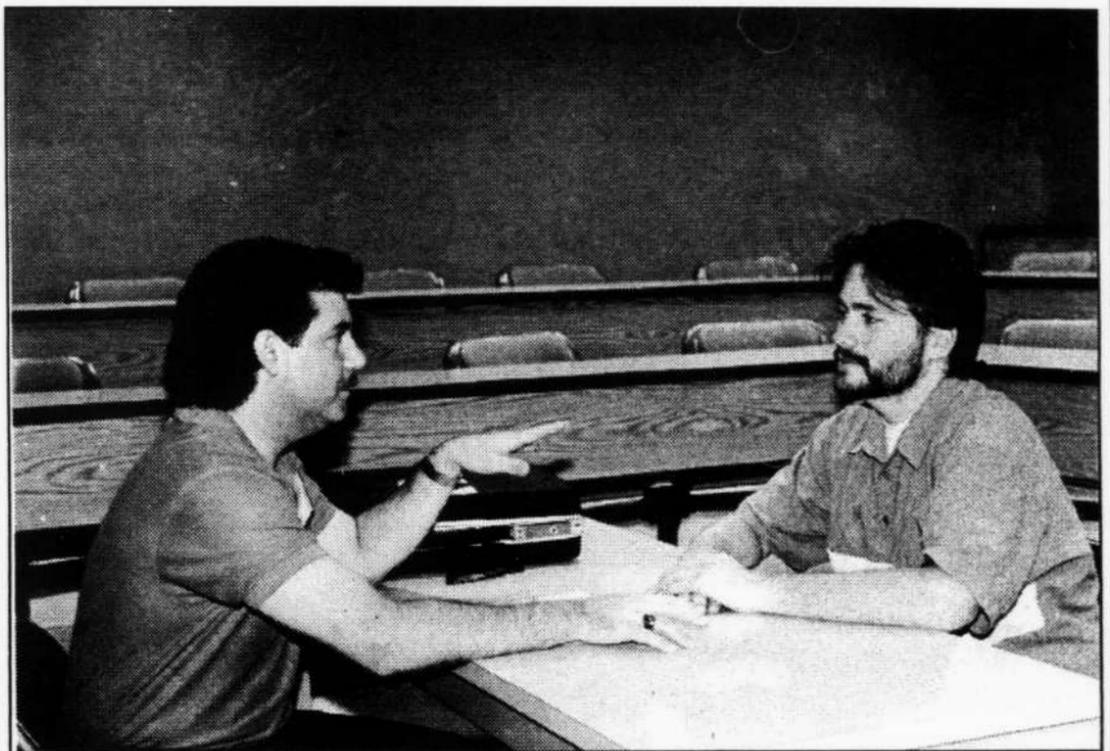

In Tallahassee, about 200 people, mostly doctors, nurses and other hospital employees, rallied in support of the hospital.

"I think all hospitals make mistakes. We are not being treated fairly," said Patrice Albrechta, a budget director at the Tampa hospital. "We have made changes. We are trying to prevent mistakes. We are sorry it happened."

Last week, a national panel stripped the hospital of its accreditation for receiving Medicaid and Medicare funding, which amounted to one-third of the hospital's revenues.

The federal Health Care Financing Agency also was inspecting whether the problems posed an "immediate and serious" threat to patients and issued a Thursday deadline for compliance with new safety regulations. ■

Students sue to wear T-shirts

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — A Barnwell County school district is being sued after some middle school students were suspended for wearing Confederate flag T-shirts to school.

The federal class action lawsuit charges that at least 15 students have been punished for wearing the shirts at Blackville Middle School in Barnwell County District 19.

"This suit is not about race. This suit is about freedom," the students' lawyer, Lourie A. Salley III, said Tuesday. "When the school board censors one group, all of us lose freedom."

The students say the policy unfairly limits their freedom of speech, especially because black students had been allowed to wear Malcolm X T-shirts and other "displays of black heritage," according to the lawsuit.

Salley was hired by the students' parents and the South Carolina Council of Conservative Citizens, a group that has held rallies around the state to support keeping the Confederate flag flying above the State House.

"I don't understand why they should be sent home for wearing a flag," said Joyce Gunnells, mother of two of the students. "It's in the history books."

Gunnells said she would support the school district banning T-shirts that had obscene or racist remarks.

She said her children, Michelle, 14, and Michael, 11, were suspended after twice being told not to wear Confederate flag T-shirts. She said one shirt had a flag and read "Flying high, ain't coming down." The other had a picture of the Statehouse with the flag and said, "I have a dream."

School board trustee Edgar Hartzog said he had been informed of the lawsuit, but would not discuss it. Superintendent Richard Huggins would not comment on the case today, but said the district's lawyer would issue a statement later.

According to the lawsuit, the school district has a dress code prohibiting "distasteful or disruptive display of symbols, patches or writing on wearing apparel."

The students say the policy has not been followed. They say students have been allowed to wear flags, insignia and other symbols, including Malcolm X shirts and "Afro-American solidarity flags and slogans, some of which may be offensive to white students."

The lawsuit asks for a temporary restraining order to keep the school board from prohibiting students from wearing or displaying the flag. It also asks for a permanent ban on such rules, the removal of the suspensions and other disciplinary actions from the students' records and an unspecified amount of monetary damages. ■

Paying your tuition with pennies

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (CPS)—Four years of planning and saving finally paid off Joshua Smith's tuition recently when he dumped 198 rolls of pennies on the counter in the University of Florida's cashier's office.

Since his first year at UF, the mechanical engineering senior, who graduates in May, has saved pennies to pay for his last semester's tuition.

Through donations from friends, picking up pennies off the ground and "saving the little change I got," Smith saved up the $99.01 he needed to pay the remainder of his tuition. Smith found his final penny on the floor in the UF cashier's office.

"I've always collected pennies as a hobby," Smith said. "I've always watched people throw them away."

Smith was warped ahead of time that UF might not accept such a large number of pennies. The office had a change of heart, but first Smith had to spend 45 minutes labeling each penny roll with his name, Social Security number and phone number.

"Students are supposed to do oddball things," he said. "It's better than drinking 'til you puke."

As he lined up the 198 penny rolls in groups of 10 on the counter to give to the cashier, Smith said he was pleased with the way everything worked out. One penny-needy woman even thanked him for the rolls because it spared her a trip to the bank.

"I'm glad they were receptive," he said. "They seemed amused."

Smith's accomplices said while they couldn't see themselves doing the same thing, they thought penny-saving made bill-paying more fun.

"I think it's hilarious, otherwise I wouldn't have helped," said Julie Silva, Smith's fiancée. "It's one of those things like saving up your pennies to pay for your college education. It's like the American dream." ■
